LINER IRENE AFLOAT AND NOT MUCH HURT

Freed from Grip of the Sand Bar That Held Her Prisoner on Fire Island 83 Hours.

WILL REACH HER PIER TO-DAY

Waiting for Daylight to be Towed Through Ambrose Channel—Rudder Post Damaged—Not Leaking.

Special to The New York Times.

SAYVILLE, L. I., April 9.—A stiff northeasterly sea blow laughed to scorn the confident judgment of all the sea dogs hereabout at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, when the high-rolling sea which it had piled up along the beach washed loose, to the friendly tugging of two wrecking tugs, the great hull of the North German Lloyd liner Prinzess Irene, which had been kept prisoner on the outer sand bar off the Lone Hill Life Saving Station ever since she lost her direction in the cottony mist at 8:55 o'clock on Thursday morning.

At 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, eighty-three hours after her stranding on the bar, the liner was finishing her interrupted journey to New York in tow of the two tugs that had helped free her—the Relief and Rescue of the Merritt-Chapman Wrecking Company.

It was found, after the vessel was tugged free of the sand, that her rudder post was broken, and her Captain decided, therefore, not to use his engines, lest the propellers, if started, might strike the loosened rudder and increase the damage. It was also decided to anchor the ship at the entrance to the Ambrose Channel for the night, and continue her trip from there to New York in the morning.

The liner's escape was witnessed by the Sunday holiday crowd of 1,500 persons, which had streamed over from Sayville and other Long Island points—and some in autos even from New York—and they cheered her departure. Then they, too, returned home—those who lived in Sayville doing so a bit regretfully; for the sudden fame that had fallen on their little town while the liner tarried, was now drawing away from them. To-morrow Sayville will be again a "beautiful spot," a fine little place—to catch oysters. Until the next big ship runs aground in the "Ocean Graveyard" off Fire Island, however, Sayville folk and sea people hereabout will have lots to talk about in telling of the Irene's brief visit, and in asserting again and again that they were never so surprised in their lives as when, despite all predictions, she pulled loose so soon.

How the Liner Was Freed.

At 6 o'clock this morning Life Saver Bill Reynolds, returning from patrol to the Lone Hill Station, reported that there was a bad north-northeast storm starting, with the wind between twenty and twenty-five miles an hour. In the night there had been rain, which bade fair to whip down the expected rise of sea due with the strong southeast wind of Saturday afternoon and night. The rain, however, soon changed to hail, and later snow, which was driving viciously at 6 A. M., covering the sand dunes with a depth of three inches. There was snow on the superstructure of the Irene, too.

At high tide at 4 A. M. the wrecking tugs had made another attempt to loosen her. The lead line dropped from her stern showed that they budged her only slightly.

The effect of the sea wind from the southeast, however, continued long after the blow had veered shoreward, the sea piling up around the ship and running high nearly all day. It was expected to reach its crest at 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

The surf meanwhile was rolling in high from the southeast. It broke so hard and so high that, taut under the strain of the strong shore blow, the thin rope which the life savers had stretched again from the ship to the breeches buoy late Saturday night parted with an angry snap soon after midnight. Capt. Baker of Point o' Woods and Capt. Goddard of the Lone Hill Life Saving Station held a long consultation on the beach at 10 o'clock in the morning, as to whether they should stretch another lifeline to the ship. They finally decided that the surf was too high to risk launching a lifeboat. The crest of the surf rollers brimmed up to the Irene's tier of lower deadlights.

A crowd of about 200 persons had gathered on the beach at noon, gay and frolicking as holiday picnickers, to look at the discomfited liner. At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the tugs Relief and Rescue nosed their way about 200 feet astern of the Irene, the former southeast, on her starboard, and the latter at a similar position to port, and began to tug at the hawsers they had thrown upon the liner.

Just about this time Capt. Goddard, who has hobnobbed half a century with the sea—calm and angry and indifferent—along Fire Island, and knows it like a brother, tugged his blue cap over his blue eyes and his gray moustachios to starboard and to port, and announced to his men:

"Well, boys, I expect I'll go to the station. They won't loosen that old woman for a week or so, I guess."

And, with a deprecating shrug at the tiny tugs, he went.

A few of the life savers remained lounging about a huge bonfire near the beach cart, and around these gathered a fast-growing crowd of shore folk. Other groups lay scattered about the beach, from which the snow, which stopped falling at about 7 o'clock, had now almost melted away.

Suddenly at 2:30 o'clock a few persons on the beach cried out that the Irene was rocking. Sure enough, under the steady pull of the two tugs that were bucking their bows into the rollers astern of her, the masts of the Irene could be seen wobbling now to port, now to starboard, and a few moments later it was seen that the vessel's stern, too, was swinging slowly from side to side. Evidently the grip of the sandbar was loosening in the high sea about her.

At 2:50 P. M., with both tugs still pulling at the same angle at either side astern, the Irene's bow was seen to rise slowly. Even there the sand was losing its hold. A few of the life savers, confident in the judgment of their old sea-barking Captain, still declared cheerfully "she'd stick" for all of six or seven days, tugs or no tugs.

A few minutes later the little tugs John J. Timmins and John Nichols swung across the Irene's bow ashore of her, and began to shove her, with their little noses against her huge steel bulk.

"By Gosh! She's Loose."

And then, at 3:03 o'clock, the Irene's sea anchor cables began to slacken, showing that she was really backing, loose and free. Slowly her kedge anchors were hoisted aboard. There was a gathering roar of hurrahs all along the beach, in which the cheers of the life savers were SAYS TOKIO WON'T OBJECT.

Nothing in Anglo-Japanese Treaty to Bar Arbitration, Says London Mail.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 10.—Discussing a Washington dispatch summarizing conversations with President Taft relative to the progress of the proposed arbitration treaty, The Daily Mail editorially says to-day:

"Our correspondent directs special attention to the probable influence of the Anglo-Japanese alliance on the proposed arbitration treaty between Great Britain and the United States. This is, as Mr. Taft acknowledges, a matter for the British Government. He does not anticipate that it will affect the attitude of the United States toward the negotiations.

"Sir Edward Grey has already stated in the Commons that the Japanese Government is aware of the views of the British Government. Though he has not yet been able to acquaint the country with the opinions of the Japanese Government, it is incredible that the Japanese, whom the United States were the first to elevate to the front rank of civilized nations, should interpose any obstacle to such an agreement.

"The Anglo-Japanese treaty is often discussed as if it were an offensive and defensive alliance without limitations. This is to misrepresent its scope and policy. Outside Eastern Asia and India, the agreement is inoperative. Europe, America, and the Near East are not directly affected.

"The independence and integrity of the Chinese Empire and equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations in China is one of the chief objects of the treaty. No power interested in the affairs of the East can take exception to this.

"The only other object is the maintenance of the territorial rights of Great Britain and Japan in Eastern Asia and India, and the defense of their special interests in these regions. If Great Britain or Japan should be involved in war for the defense of these territorial rights and special interests, then and then only must the allies make common cause and come to each other's assistance.

"There is nothing either in the scope or the policy of the Anglo-Japanese treaty that should bar a complete agreement between the United States and Great Britain."

GUSTAV E. KISSEL DEAD.

The Banker Had Been Ill for Several Months.

Gustav E. Kissel, the banker, died at his home, 15 West Sixteenth street, at 2 o'clock this morning.

Gustav Edward Kissel was born in this city in 1854 and was educated in private schools here and in Switzerland, and was afterward graduated from Heidelberg University. Mr. Kissel was a member of the banking firm of Kissel, Kinnicut & Company and a director in many banks and trust companies and was connected with the Sugar Trust as financial agent.

Mr. Kissel had been ill for several months and his ailment was never definitely diagnosed. Three operations had been performed to determine the exact nature of his malady but no relief was given by any of them. All that the doctors would announce was that he was suffering from internal complications.

Mr. Kissel married Miss Caroline Thorn. Their four children are William Thorn Kissel, E. Dorothea Kissel, Jeannette Kissel and Louise B. Kissel.

DAMAGE BY SNOWSTORM.

Heavy Fall Down East and Up-State Injures Fruit Trees.

Swept in from the West by the quick moving of an area of low pressure, the snowstorm which lasted all the early hours of yesterday caused considerable damage throughout the State and as far east as Boston. It caused some delay in train service in the early morning, and those going to early Palm Sunday service had to face real Winter weather.

The snowfall lasted until about 8:25 A. M., and then it turned to rain, which lasted only a few minutes. The Weather Bureau reported half an inch of snow. The storm was unusually severe off the New England Coast, and schooners had to scurry to harbor. In the northern part of Maine the fall was one of the heaviest of the year, while in Massachusetts and Dhode Island from three to six inches fell.

Trees were uprooted, wires torn down, the fire alarm system put out of commission, and fruit trees damaged at Middletown, N. Y.

While leaving the harbor of New London in the snowstorm the steamer Mohegan, bound for New York, struck a rock. She was hauled off later and towed back to port.

From many sections come reports of damage to fruit trees, many being broken down by the weight of the snow.

AUTOOWNER MORTALLY HURT

Special to The New York Times.

BABYLON, L. I., April 9.—A serious automobile accident occurred on the South Road, in front of the Harry Knapp property, between Islip and East Islip, shortly before 4 o'clock this afternoon, when a touring car owned and driven by Charles A. McCartney of 383 Seventh Street, Brooklyn, turned turtle, throwing out the five occupants and inflicting injuries on McCartney from which he is expected to die.

McCartney, who is about 50 years old, was picked up unconscious and removed to a roadhouse, where he was attended by Dr. James L. Halsey.

The party was homeward bound after a run out on the island, and were going at high speed when the accident occurred. The car turned over twice and landed right side up, but with such force that it was a total wreck. The steering gear failed to work, it is said. McCartney's jaw and arm were broken and he is injured internally.

McCartney and three others of the party were brought to Brooklyn on a Long Island Railroad train and taken to Seney Hospital in a private ambulance. At the hospital last night all information concerning them was refused.

It was learned that McCartney is Superintendent of the Masury Paint Works at 50 Jay Street, Brooklyn, and that one of the men with him was Frank Prince, who is connected with the company.

HYDE SEES PLOT TO DISCREDIT HIM

NO CITY FUNDS IN DANGER

Chamberlain Says, and Defends His Deposits—Shows How Banks Appealed for City Money.

City Chamberlain Charles H. Hyde, whose name has been mentioned many times in connection with the Grand Jury investigation of the Carnegie Trust Company affairs and city deposits in several banking institutions which loaned money to William J. Cummins and his associates in the Carnegie Trust, announced yesterday that a "malign political conspiracy" had been formed to assail his reputation.

The City Chamberlain issued a long statement to the public defending himself against the insinuations that he deposited city funds in certain banks and trust companies so that the institutions could loan the money to the Cummins syndicate, and characterizing the attacks upon him as cowardly and underhanded.

Mr. Hyde says that not a dollar of the city's money will be lost or is even in jeopardy, and that all of the banks and trust companies which loaned money to Cummins and his associates were city depositories long before he took office. The statement in full is:

Assailed in the Dark, He Says.

"By the advice of my counsel, Mr. Samuel Untermyer, I have up to this time reluctantly refrained from replying to the inspired reports that are being announced from day to day as representing testimony given before the Grand Jury affecting my alleged official action. It is difficult to believe that the Grand Jury room is being thus invaded and its secrets doled out daily for publication in violation of law, but the stories purporting to emanate therefrom are so persistent and circumstantial that no other conclusion is possible.

"There is a malign political conspiracy behind these reports and misrepresentations, and I have grown tired of sitting by while my reputation is being assailed in the dark. The reports and the daily reiteration of them in one form or another can have but one purpose—to inflame and prejudice the Grand Jury and discredit me in the public mind. The attack is cowardly and underhanded. It is impossible for me to reply in detail, since I have no right to believe that the secrecy of the Grand Jury investigation is being openly and shamefully defied.

"When I was ill and away last Winter the most grotesque falsehoods were circulated about me, only to be completely refuted when I returned and went upon the witness stand before a properly constituted judicial tribunal. No account was taken of the fact that I was in New York for months ready to take the stand before the legislative investigation committee, yet I was held up from these sources as almost a fugitive.

"It is also because these false reports tend to injure the fair name and credit of the city and of its government that I have decided to warn the public against placing any credence in them.

"Perhaps the first thing the public would like to know is that, notwithstanding all the talk, not a dollar of the city's money has been lost and that not a dollar is in jeopardy.

The Northern Bank Deposits.

"The first of the many statements that have been fed to the public to connect me with alleged improper transactions is a fair sample of all or most of it. In that statement the press bureau which has been busily engaged in endeavoring to poison the public mind spread far and wide the story that I had kept a balance in the Northern Bank of over $1,000,000. From this it was implied or insinuated that there must have been a corrupt understanding with some one. This fairly illustrates the sort of 'evidence' upon which I am being assailed. The facts are as follows:

"The designation of the Northern Bank as a city depository was made long before my term of office began. The selection of the Bronx branch of that bank as the depository to receive Bronx revenues was made at the request of Controller Prendergast, who had been a Director of that bank until shortly before he took office. Mr. Wolfe, the Chief Auditor in the Controller's office, was also Vice President until he took office, Jan. 1, 1910. The circumstances of this selection have already been publicly stated and are well known. It is true that on Oct. 31, 1910, late at night, the Receiver of Taxes (an appointee of the Controller) deposited the tax receipts for that day, amounting to about $887,000, in the Northern Bank, but it is also true that $900,000 was withdrawn by me the next morning, leaving the bank's balance at the normal amount, about $188,000.

"Yet the public is willfully led to believe that I kept a million dollars there to be loaned to friends. Could anything be more diabolical? With Robin's story as a basis, it is suddenly discovered that a syndicate or association of men who were said to have my friendship had been borrowing largely from certain banks in which city money was deposited, and the coincidence is said to exist in some nineteen cases.

"That all of these banks were city depositories long before my time is carefully ignored, as is the fact that in some of the banks deposits were smaller during my administration than formerly, notwithstanding that the average bank balances of city money in 1910 were far more than double those at any time in the city's history. On March 21, 1910, there was a bond sale, and $50,000,000 came at once into the treasury. The high-water mark was about $61,500,000, on March 21, 1910, and the average balance for April, May, and June of that year was over $50,000,000. I protested against maintaining these vast balances. The money had to be deposited. It was distributed among upward of 100 banks and trust companies. Very few banks or trust companies in the city failed to solicit deposits. This was done through their officers, Directors, depositors, stockholders, newspaper men, and friends, and I doubt not that many of them were borrowers, although I knew nothing of it and it was none of my business. It would have been difficult for any man or group of men to have borrowed from banks that were not city depositories; indeed, it would be more of a coincidence to find a bank able to loan any considerable sum that was not a city depository.

Case of the Savoy Trust.

"Another illustration: The public has read and heard much about the moneys deposited in the Savoy Trust Company, which are said to have been loaned to Mr. Cummins or his associates. It is insinuated that the deposits were made by me for that purpose or upon some such understanding, or that I knew that they had been or were to be so used. The facts are:

"1. The Savoy Trust Company was a city depository before I became Chamberlain. (It was called the Italian-American Trust Company until Dec. 1, 1909. On Feb. 1, 1910, it was redesignated under its new name.)

"2. I did not know and never heard that Mr. Cummins or any of his associates had borrowed or intended to bor-

DIX INVESTIGATES PRISON SITES SALE

PROFIT IN ONE CASE $20,000

Tract for the New Harlem Prison Site Bought by Relatives of Assemblyman Yale.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 9.—William Church Osborn and George Van Kennan, ex-Mayor of Watertown, who are by direction of Gov. Dix investigating the management of the State prisons, have directed inquiries into the purchase of land at Stony Point, Rockland County, which was the site selected for the Bear Mountain prison, and later transferred by the prison authorities to the State to form part of the Harriman park, and into the negotiations leading up to the purchase of 600 acres of land at Wingdale, Dutchess County, on which the new Harlem prison to supplant Sing Sing Prison is to be constructed.

The story is that in the State's selection of each site certain persons, anticipating legislative action, purchased the land which it was intended the State should acquire. In each instance, however, different persons were interested. Mr. Van Kennan was asked as to the truth of the story. He admitted that the reports had been brought to both him and Mr. Osborn, and that they were looking into them.

"We have not proceeded far enough in our investigation," he said, "to form any idea as to the truth or falsity of the allegations. We will continue to investigate the stories regarding the purchase of both sites, and our findings will be embodied in our report to the Governor."

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 9.—The land for the new prison at Wingdale, which was finally purchased by the State, was acquired from its original owners in June, 1910, by C. Ralph Diehl, who married Assemblyman Yale's daughter, and Robert Hurd, of Pawling, N. Y. These two men took title to all the parcels subsequently acquired by the State for the Wingdale Prison, which included the Wheeler farm of 229 acres, the Wilcox farm of 71 acres, the Brown farm of 38 acres, and the Tutus farm of 166 acres.

In each instance the consideration named in the deed as paid by Diehl and Hurd was a nominal sum. Property owners in the neighborhood who were familiar with the actual facts estimated that the Messrs. Hurd and Diehl made some $20,000 profit in the deal. There was a flaw in the title to one of the farms which it cost about $500 to clear up. It was understood at the time that to hold options on one or two of the places it was necessary to borrow money with which to purchase them outright.

The farms were transferred to the State right after the elections in 1910, when it was known that the Legislature would be Democratic. There is considerable swamp land included in the State's purchase, but the rest is good farming land, it is said.

Most of the Wheeler farm is valuable, those who sold it say, and there is a costly house on it. The swamp land can be drained. There is no doubt that the State paid a good price for the land. The transaction is criticised here because of the connection of a relative of Assemblyman John R. Yale with the purchase and sale. It is thought that he received information from some source that the State would take the land.

DR. ELIOT REFUSED TO BUY.

Book Agent Offered to Sell Him the Five-Foot Collection.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 9.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University, had occasion to visit the office of Charles Francis Adams, a State Street broker, yesterday. He was awaiting a fellow-educator when the door opened and in came a book agent, who declared he would wait for Mr. Adams.

He caught sight of Dr. Eliot, snugly ensconced in a corner perusing a newspaper, drew out his prospectus, and began to talk.

Dr. Eliot raised a weary hand. "I do not care to buy any books. I already have all the books I need," he said.

"But I'll bet you haven't this set," replied the agent. "This is the famous five-foot library of President Eliot of Harvard. He picked them out himself, and he knows what's what, all right. Have a look at them."

"My friend, I don't want to look at them."

"Why not?"

"Because I've seen them. I am President Eliot."

The salesman did not wait for Mr. Adams.

BUSCH GIVES BEER AND WINE

Dry Kansas Condemns His Hospitality to the Thirsty at Hutchinson.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 9.—Adolphus Busch, the wealthy brewer and philanthropist, arrived in St. Louis this morning after spending the Winter at his estate at Pasadena, Cal. Mr. Busch leaned heavily on the arm of a relative while he was escorted about his grounds here, and during his inspection of the brewery adjacent, but relatives declare he is in good health. Dispatches from Pasadena several days ago said Mr. Busch had left California against the advice of his physician.

From Hutchinson, Kansas, comes the report that his generosity in giving away beer and champagne at the Santa Fé depot there yesterday afternoon, when his special car, Adolphus, stopped for a few minutes, caused much excitement among the thirsty. Mr. Busch also presented pocket knives bearing advertisements of his brewing company. Immediately after the departure of the train the news of the distribution spread and a large crowd gathered about the station.

The action of Mr. Busch was condemned by temperance people in "dry" Kansas.

$8,000 A YEAR HOUSE FOR REV. DR. JOWETT

Reiterates That He Will Preach the Cromwellian Faith from "Civer to Civer."

The Rev. Dr. John H. Jowett, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, in his sermon yesterday morning declared as he had done in his first sermon a week ago, that he had come to New York solely as "an ambassador of God," and to preach the old Cromwellian Presbyterian "civer to civer" faith as expressed in the literal interpretation of the Gospels. "I will preach the greatest Christ which my God will allow me to conceive of," he said, "but He shall be the homely Jesus whom I meet along the ways of life, be they high or lowly."

A ripple of astonishment passed over the audience when their pastor said that the most trying function of a minister lay in the customary pastorial visitation. "Nothing tires a man out so much," he said, "as giving out sympathy to the suffering, grieving, and sorrowing."

Prior to his installation the pastor had announced that he intended to make regular visits to every one of his parishioners, and this intention was not disclaimed. In fact, it was said by several of the Trustees after the service that the automobile which the congregation had promised Dr. Jowett for this particular service was ready for delivery.

It was also announced officially that the house at 24 East Sixty-fourth Street, lately occupied by Mrs. Henry W. Bookstaver, had been rented by the congregation as a parsonage, and that Dr. and Mrs. Jowett would move into it just as soon as their household goods arrive from England. The rental, it was said unofficially, was $8,000 a year, or two-thirds the amount of the pastor's salary. His neighbors on either side will be Mrs. Edward J. King and Mrs. William H. Tillinghast. On the same block are the homes of ex-Mayor Seth Low, Dudley Olcott, 2d, and James M. Beck.

The addition of $8,000 rental to Dr. Jowett's $12,000 salary derives additional interest from the fact that he was not sure before he left Carr's Lane, Birmingham, and learned what the cost of living in New York was likely to be, that he would need as large a salary as $12,000 a year, for, in accepting the call to his New York pulpit he wrote to his new congregation:

"May I be allowed to add that I am sure I shall not need the large stipend you so graciously offered me, and when I meet the officers of the church I shall seek their judgment as to what is the equivalent to the stipend I am receiving in my present charge. This will make me perfectly happy in my work."

However, after Dr. Jowett's arrival here, when he had had an opportunity to learn about New York prices, his contract with the church was ratified.

The morning sermon, following the only criticism made of his first sermon, was shortened from an hour to forty minutes. The pastor seemed to feel more at home, too, it was noticed, and he gesticulated more freely, stretching his long arms appealingly to his hearers, and frequently addressing them as "the people of my church." And in his opening prayer he did not forget on this occasion to pray for the King of England as well as for the President of the United States. "May the Spirit move upon the people of England and America," he prayed, "so that they become more Christianly one nation." The crowd that came to hear him more than filled the large church. Many stood throughout the service and many more were turned away.

Prior to the sermon he conferred baptismal rites upon two children, and he congratulated the parents "for allowing these children to enter into the greatest inheritance known on earth." The children were Charlotte Ackley Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Roy Robbins of 9 Pinehurst Avenue, and William Wilson Flemming, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew C. Flemming of 441 Park Avenue.

Dr. Jowett took for his text St. Luke, ix., 28: "And it came to pass, about an eight days after these sayings. He took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray."

The gist of this, he said, lay in the fact that Jesus, after He had been humiliated and tortured by those He loved, went off to pray. His sermon was on the power of prayer which he defined as "the means by which the will and desires of man come in tune with the gracious will and desires of the Lord."

"Prayer was one of the personal habits of Jesus," he said. "Now, to study the habits of any master, to move among his moods, to seek to disengage his secret, to look out of his window and out upon his world, is an interesting process. Thus young Alfred Tennyson studied Lord Byron, and thus Ruskin's vital fellowship with Turner began. But if I study the habits of Whittier or Browning or Emerson, the activity is all on my side. There is a difference between this and a reverent study of Christ.

"For the Master, when you are studying His habits, is conscious of your studious efforts. When we reverently contemplate a personal study of Him we not only obtain power, but we obtain recognition. We are not only seeking, but we are sought.

"Our Lord's prayers were not the timid wailings of a weak man. I regard our Lord as an athlete, strong in body, will, and patience, having every form of strength which men count admirable. And this very strongest man who ever trod the paths of men prayed—prayed constantly, prayed without ceasing.

"And when He reached the top of the mountain there stretched before Him an appalling desolation; beyond Him hung the Cross. His temptation was this: Is it worth while? Should He go on to-night to the peace and glory awaiting Him above, or should He go down to duty and death? Just then He prayed, and He chose to go down again to the brutal hand and the malicious eye. And then the voice from Heaven said: 'This is My beloved Son.'

"We are not far away from common life in this interpretation. How about the blood-demanding work in which you, my people, are engaged? Is it worth while? How about the bitter work in Sixty-third Street and in King Street? [He referred to the institutional work of the Church in these streets.] Is it worth while?

"Just at that point, when one road points to ease and leisure, the other to the work and the shedding of blood—that is the moment for prayer. The biggest outlooks of men come when they are down on their knees. We are exceedingly wise when we pray. We are never so foolish as when we cease to pray. If there is anybody in this large congregation who has come to have doubts about the profitableness of prayer I want to urge you, as the ambassador of God, to begin again. Jesus prayed. That is the answer for you. Stretch out a lame hand; the Lord will grip it."

Even then the crippled balloon bounded along the ground, finally comin to a stop in the railroad yards. Save for scratches the aeronauts were unhurt.

AMERICAN SUICIDE IN PARIS.

H. Guthmann, Cashier to A. Belmont & Co., Shoots Himself in Hotel.

PARIS, April 9.—Hermann Guthmann, said to be an American bank employe, committed suicide to-day by shooting at the Hotel Continental. The hotel officials say that Guthmann arrived from New York six weeks ago. The man was about 45 years of age. No motive is known for the act.

Hermann Guthmann, who was a correspondent for August Belmont & Co., of 23 Nassau Street, lived at 255 West 112th Street with his mother and sister. The latter said last night that he had gone to Paris about two months ago on business for the firm and that the last they heard of him was that he was still in that city. She had received no word of his reported suicide until informed by the newspaper men.

"Although the dispatch seems to indicate that my brother has killed himself, I cannot believe it is true," she said. "There was no reason on earth why he should end his life and nothing that we had heard indicated that he was despondent or in poor health. This news is a great shock to me, and I must refuse to believe that it is true unless more details are received."

Mr. Guthmann, his sister said, was unmarried. His mother, who had retired when the dispatch was received, was not told of the report last night.

RECORDER TAKEN IN RAID.

Released in Jersey City Yesterday After a Lecture from the Judge.

Prosecutor Garven of Hudson County, N. J., made two raids on alleged disorderly resorts early on Sunday morning and arrested several persons in each place. In one of the road houses raided Recorder Modina of North Bergen was made a prisoner. He said he was in the barroom of the place when the raiders descended upon it, but the prosecutor and his detectives declare they found the Recorder on the roof of the veranda.

The prosecutor with two large automobiles and about ten of his detectives left Jersey City shortly before midnight. The first place visited was the roadhouse kept by Conrad Dietz, at Hudson Boulevard and the Plank Road in Union Hill. There they arrested Dietz, his bartender, and four women.

The raiders next went to the roadhouse of Mrs. Margaret Brennan, at Hudson Boulevard and New Street in North Bergen. Here they found and arrested Recorder Modina, Mrs. Brennan, her bartender, and four women.

In Jersey City yesterday morning Judge Carey of the Common Pleas Court held Dietz and his bartender each in $1,000 bail. Mrs. Brennan was unable to put up $3,500 for herself and bartender and they went back to jail. The Recorder and eight women were allowed to go, after listening to a severe lecture by the Judge.

Court Orders Hattie Williams's Mother to Quit Dorchester House.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 9.—Mrs. Annie E. L. Williams, mother of Hattie Williams, the actress, has been ordered by the Civil Court in Dorchester to vacate 1,800 Dorchester Avenue, which she has been using as a kindergarten for girls and a haven for the poor for several years. Mrs. Williams appeared as her own lawyer, and engaged in some sharp cross-questions with the complainants. She made a strong plea to the Judge.

The charge against Mrs. Williams was that she owed back rent, which she admitted, but claimed that certain damages were due to her from the estate. She has had a number of fights to hold the property, and had hitherto won.

"They'll have to throw my things into the street to get me out," said Mrs. Williams to-day. "And while they are doing that, maybe my yellow collie dog will be doing something, too. I have tried to buy that property. My daughter Hattie, when at home in January, also tried to purchase it for me. But she could not make a deal. I have paid rent in the past, and am ready to pay it now."

STATION AGENT DIED FIGHTING

Conklin Held Off Three Armed Robbers Even After Both His Revolvers Were Empty.

WOUNDED NEGRO FOUND NEAR

Lay Near Death in Mud of Croton Lake for Seventeen Hours—Two Companions Sought.

Special to The New York Times.

CROTON LAKE, N. Y., April 9.—Charles H. Conklin, the station agent here of the New York Central, who was murdered last night, died only after a desperate struggle to save the property in his care from three armed robbers. At 1:30 o'clock to-day, more than seventeen hours after the murder, a negro, wounded near to death, was found about 100 yards from the station in the soft muck below the high-water level of Croton Lake. The negro admitted that he had been shot at the station when Conklin was murdered. He had a bullet hole in the left breast and his face and body were badly cut, as if he had engaged in a rough-and-tumble fight.

Conklin's body and the little office where it was found gave mute evidence of the battle he had fought. The slain man lay on the floor, both hands outstretched over currency and checks which strewed the floor and were spattered with blood from his four wounds. All the furniture was upset. Conklin's clothing was torn and his collar, tie, and uniform cap lay near him on the floor. The window-sill, cabinet, and ticket case were scarred with bullet marks.

Conklin's two revolvers were missing. The robbers got little cash.

Lieut. Joseph H. Quinn of the Valhalla precinct of the Water Supply police, who was exploring the neighborhood with newspaper men, found the wounded negro. He gave his name as George Williams, 28 years old, of Cumberland, Md. He had two brass pay checks, which showed that he had worked recently under the name of George Green in the Glendon and Storm King camps of the Catskill Aqueduct construction contractors. He had an uncashed blue punch card on his person.

The doctors who examined him said he would die, and he was hurried to the White Plains Jail Hospital in the motor car of Sheriff Philip H. Scherp of Westchester County. The doctors declared it remarkable that Green had lived, wounded so severely, through the heavy snowfall which drifted over his body last night.

Constable Augustus G. Quick, who was the first official to arrive after the warning of the robbery and murder was brought to him by Conklin's 11-year-old son Clifford, said he believed the robbers had been scared away from the scene by the arrival of the 8:07 train north bound.

The last seen of Conklin alive, Constable Quick said, was when his friends, Charles Herbig, timekeeper of the Bradley camp, and Thomas May, an engineer employed by the Aqueduct contractors, saw him wave good-bye to them as the 7:56 train, south bound, pulled from the station. Herbig and May were detained by the police when they arrived at 155th Street and Eighth Avenue, Manhattan, Saturday night on a telegram from White Plains. They were released by order of Richard H. Burke, Inspector of the Eastern District of the Water Supply police, who visited the West 152d Street Police Station.

Slayers Crept Upon Him.

It was Constable Quick's belief that Conklin was followed into the station while the 7:56 train, southbound, was crossing the long bridge over Croton Lake, 200 yards from the station, and struck down from behind just as he was about to sit down on his soap-box seat before the telegraph key to send a message to New York. One of the shots, which penetrated the open door of the small cabinet case on the floor, could not have been fired, the marks in the wood showed, by a man whose pistol arm was more than two feet above the floor.

Constable Quick believed Conklin had drawn one of his two revolvers as soon as he was attacked, and after discharging all his cartridges had engaged in a hand-to-hand tussle with his assailants, keeping them engaged until the train from New York, due to arrive only eleven minutes later, frightened them off. That was the reason, he believed, that the only missing articles were Conklin's revolvers, both six-shooters, and his silver Waltham watch.

D. T. Hanney, trainmaster of the Harlem and Putnam Divisions of the New York Central, who came to take charge of the station here last night, went over Conklin's books and found that only $14 or $15 was missing from the station. Mr. Hanney was accompanied by Railroad Detectives Munroe Holstein, Joseph J. Guerton, and Rudolph Bentel. They all agreed that Conklin had been attacked by more than two men, and later evidence convinced Sheriff Scherp, Inspector Burke, and the other officers working on the case that three was the correct number.

Railroad Detective Holstein positively identified Green, the wounded negro, as one who had been suspected of the robbery of the Cornwall station and the attack on the station agent there on the morning of Nov. 6 last, a crime for which two men are now serving prison sentences. Detective Holstein said that Green was the man suspected of having hidden the money stolen on that date and later getting it from its hiding place.

Hunting More Negroes.

From Green the detectives obtained the name of one of his supposed confederates, Will Stevens, and from the testimony of Herman Engel, a foreman with a construction company, the name of another negro, Will Freeman, was obtained. Engel said he saw Green, Freeman, and another negro hanging about the station about dusk on Saturday evening, an hour before the murderous attack on Conklin. Inspector Burke and Sheriff Scherp issued orders for the immediate arrest of these two men, and searching parties were sent to look for them.

Edward M. Boden, a negro, nicknamed

"Preacher," was arrested in North Tarrytown to-night and held as a witness. He was arrested after he fled from a negro poolroom on Cortlandt Street, North Tarrytown. When Detective Holstein of the New York Central police and Undersheriff Doyle entered the poolroom by the front door Boden ran out of the rear door and leaped over several fences. Detective Holstein caught him. The two officers were not looking for Boden, but at the Tarrytown Police Station he was identified by George Mertens, a white foreman of the Bradley camps, as a negro who lurked about the Croton Lake station.

Another negro, who gave several names, was arrested at Kitchawan, a few miles below Croton Lake, earlier in the evening. Sheriff Scherp said that, though he has been unable to get this negro to admit he knows Green, he hoped to obtain on Monday an interesting statement. Several other negroes were also arrested on suspicion.

When Green was told last night at White Plains that he had but a few hours to live and was asked to add to his statement, he refused to do so, saying that he would surely survive his wounds.

When he was found Green wore a pair of brogans, a shabby pair of trousers, a flannel shirt, and a coat and cap. In his pocket were four extra-long steel-nosed 38-calibre cartridges. He denied having had a gun. He said he was standing outside the station after the southbound train had left, and the first thing he knew he saw Stevens and Conklin exchanging shots. He was standing outside, to the south of the station, and was wounded by a shot which came through the window. He started to run, he said, and fell over the stone wall surrounding the city's watershed property above Croton Lake, and rolled down the embankment to the spot near a culvert where he was found.

The negro insisted that his name was Williams until he was identified by Dr. M. A. Hayes, a former army Surgeon, who is in charge of the sanitary arrangements of the Glendon camps. He spoke more freely to Dr. Hayes than to his previous interrogators, Inspector Burke, Coroner Perley H. Mason of Peekskill, Sheriff Scherp, and Deputy Sheriff A. L. Lewis, a former New York detective.

Crowds Gather Early.

Beginning early in the day, large crowds began to collect near the little station, crowding about the iron stove and reading over and over again the notices on the walls. Outside were many farmers' wagons, buggies, and carryalls, and more than a dozen automobiles. When the negro was discovered threats were made against him, which were checked not only by the activity of the aqueduct police, but by the sight of the wounded negro's pitiable condition.

"It's lucky for that negro that he's so badly off now," said one bystander. "Charley Conklin was a mighty popular man hereabouts, with his cheerful disposition. He was not only our Postmaster, but he was agent of the American Express Company, a dealer in fertilizers, a farmer with three acres, two cows, and a horse; telegraph operator, newsdealer, and signal man, and general friend of the whole community. He was only 46 years old and had eight children."

Hiram Stubbs, a negro, who runs the boarding house at the Bradley camp, and is sort of foster father to about 300 negroes, said:

"The colored man that killed Charley Conklin ought to be tarred."

Many of the crowd moved to and from Conklin's house, a little more than half a mile away, the second house north from the station on the turnpike. They condoled with the widow, her brood of children, and Conklin's father, John Conklin, 67 years old. Mrs. Conklin said:

"He had to work so hard; up early and late. Some nights he'd be down to the station till 2:30 making out reports for all the companies he worked for. He had with him $300, which belonged to me, which I had made keeping boarders and raising chickens. He told me to give it to him to take care of, and he would put some of his pay next pay day with it and put it in the bank for me. Of course he'd shoot rather than give it up.

"He was a good shot, and always said he wasn't afraid to stay down in the station nights with all that money, though I often told him if he didn't look out some one would kill him, just like they've done. I think it was somebody that he knew that killed him because he'd tell. The freight charges have been running very heavy lately, there having been so many heavy shipments on account of the water works, and they paid him, the contractors did, mostly in cash. Lots of people knew about it, and I was afraid for him when I saw so many negroes and tough white men who work on the aqueduct hanging around the station."

Mrs. Conklin's words were interrupted by the cries of her latest born, a ten-months-old son, who sat in the arms of his thirteen-year-old sister Susie. Little Edgar, 3 years old, ran in and out of the room. His sister Sadie, who is 15, kept saying to him:

"Keep quiet, Edgar, don't you know papa's dead?"

Henry R. Miller, who came down from Yorktown Heights to fill the place made vacant by Conklin's murder, sat down on the little soap box yesterday morning and ticked off as the first messages a number of telegrams by Mrs. Conklin to her relatives. These messages read:

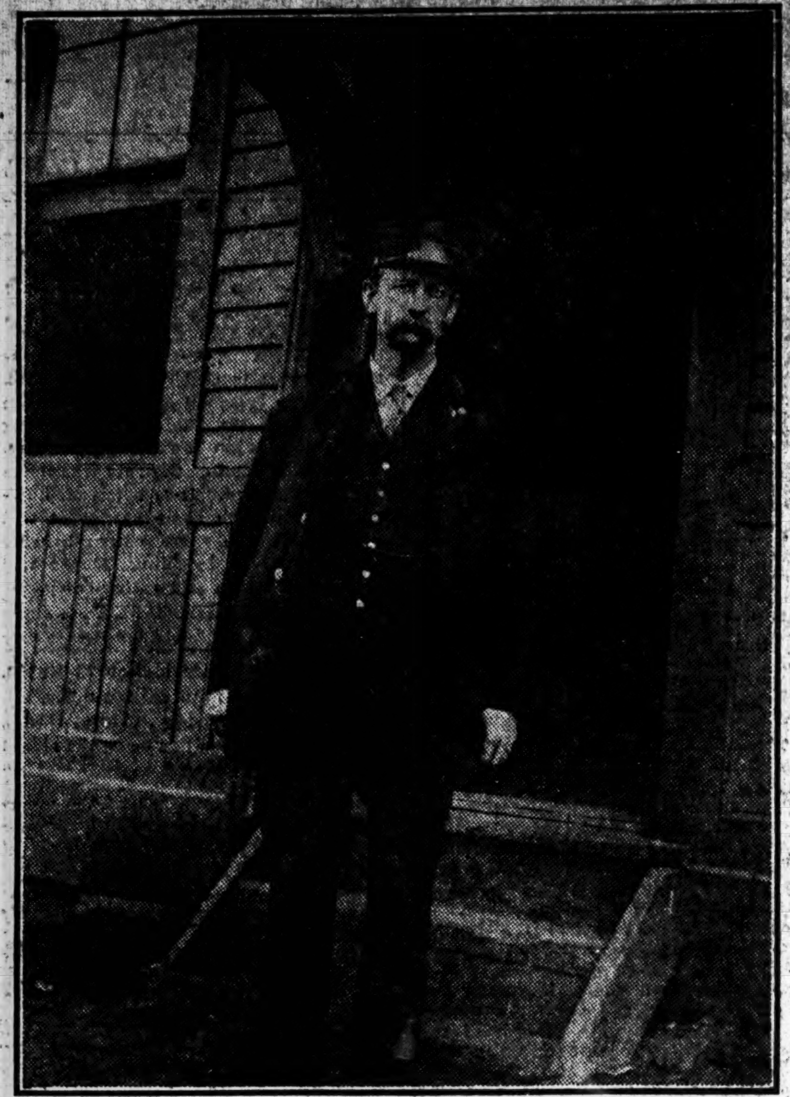
"Charley is dead. Shot last night. Funeral Wednesday morning at White Plains."

How He Found Father Dead.

At his side were Conklin's eleven-year-old son Clifford, who found his father dead as he stepped off the train Saturday evening, and his seventeen-year-old son Charles H., Jr., who sent the telegraph message announcing the station robbery and his father's murder, after his little brother had given the alarm. Clifford said:

"I came up from Millwood, the second station south of Croton Lake, on the train which got in here at seven minutes after 8. With me was Samuel Raymond, a boy chum of about my own age, with whom I had attended a boys' meeting at Millwood. I went to the station window to look in for papa, as I usually do, expecting to go home with him. When I saw him lying on the floor with his hands outstretched, and the money all strewn about, I called to him and got no answer. This frightened me, and with Sammy I ran up the road to the house, shouting all the way."

Charles H. Conklin.



The Station Agent at Croton Lake, N. Y., Who Was Murdered on Saturday Night in Defending the Contents of the Station Office.

It was after Clifford had reached home that Charles, Jr., ran down to the station and began to send to all stations on the line, in his novice way, the message:

"Papa is murdered. Station is robbed. Send help. CONKLIN, Croton Lake."

Frank Lefevre, conductor on the train on which Clifford Conklin returned from Millwood, said he opened the door on the rear platform of that train as it was leaving the station, but did not hear any outcry or see anything was wrong.

Sounds of Battle Unheard.

It was remarked to-day that no one heard the remarkable fusillade of bullets which must have marked the battle between Conklin and his assailants in the little station. This is accounted for by its lonely situation. The station stands east of the turnpike and west of the single line of railroad track. Just above the railroad track is a high and steep embankment. Just below the turnpike is a steep embankment, gradually becoming a more gentle slope down to the high water line of the Croton Lake basin. There is no house within half a mile, and very little travel on the turnpike at night.

The heavy snowstorm which began an hour after the robbery and murder and continued the greater part of the night, enabled the two other suspects to make a good getaway, and prevented the finding of Green until such a late hour.

The snow also prevented Inspector Burke from making a thorough search of the country as he had planned. He came up from the West 152d Street Station in New York in the swift time of one hour and a half in his new touring car. But once among the soft roads of the hills, the snow and mud made progress slow and the snow blinded his chauffeur, so that the best he could do until the weather cleared was to notify the various contract camps by telephone to watch out for fugitives.

When the snow melted tracks were found in the soft muck above the water's edge, and below high water mark, in the bed of Croton Lake near the Bradley camp. Attention to them was called by Peter Atz, an engineer of the compressor on the lake shore near the Bradley camp. The road makes a wide detour from the lake shore near this point, and the compressor is near low water mark.

To make a short cut and to save time two men dropped from the road and cut across the lake bed near the compressor on a dead run Saturday evening, Atz said. But for the chance that he happened to be oiling the compressor at the time, Atz said, he would not have been in a position to notice the men. After the snow had melted in the midday sun Inspector Burke and his men inspected the lake bed near the compressor and found footprints which bore out Atz's story of two men running.

The tracks were followed, and it was learned that Freeman had entered an Italian speakeasy half a mile from the Bradley camp and bought a quart of whisky about an hour and a half after the murder.

Sergt. John N. Doyle of the aqueduct police investigated Freeman's movements on Saturday, and found that the negro had been to the Bradley camp and had begged for money, pleading an urgent family necessity. He had been unable to get it. Then Freeman went to the station early Saturday afternoon, Doyle reported, and offered to sell his pay check calling for about $14 to Conklin for $6 in cash, which Conklin refused, and ordered the negro from the station.

Sent in Cash Before Murder.

D. T. Hanney, the New York Central offical, who came to take charge of the station, found that Conklin had sent in his daily remittance to New York on the train which left just before his murder. It amounted to but $38. He had sent in remittances of $390 on Friday and $580 on Thursday, Hanney found. Hanney and William Bradley, Superintendent of the Bradley Camp, both said that they had warned Conklin against continuing his habit of counting his receipts in the office of the station in the daytime, and without closing the blinds of the station window at night. They said that they had told him he was taking too great a risk when such large colonies of rough characters as the aqueduct laborers were so near by. Mr. Bradley said that he had made every effort to weed out tough characters, no matter how efficient they might be as workmen, from his camp, and was glad that Green was not one of his men.

Inspector Burke, who made a round up of the camps as soon as the snowstorm stopped, found a number of desperate characters either employed in or hanging about the camps. He had special extra officers sent to the camps early to keep the hundreds of negroes and Italians under surveillance, with special vigilance toward the non-working camp followers. He personally made the rounds of the camps in the morning.

In the Bradley Camp he found a number of ex-convicts. One of them was Kid Patterson, a tall, heavy negro, who has served a number of short sentences for larcenies. Another negro, named Crosby, who hung around the Bradley Camp after being ejected Saturday night, was subjected to a cross-examination. He could give no good account of himself and was held because it was believed he might shed some light on the shooting. He had not worked for a long time, and came to the camp to play poker after the workmen had received their pay. Railroad Detective Guerton, a former keeper in the Elmira Reformatory, found a white teamster in the camp who was formerly under his care at Elmira.

Inspector Burke singled out a mulatto in the Bradley Camp as a man named Jordan, who had attempted to assault him in Boston. Jordan, Inspector Burke said, had tried to prevent him arresting a negro named Diggs, who shot Aqueduct Policeman Ackerman and is now under prison sentence for the crime. As the Inspector was about to enter the tenement in Boston where Diggs was concealed, Jordan, he said, tried to throw him down the stairs, and to warn Diggs. Inspector Burke requested that the known convicts be sent away from the camps.

ASKS MORE CITY AID.

Catholic Protectory Believes It Is Entitled to Larger Appropriations.

A plea for greater assistance from the city is contained in the annual report of the Catholic Protectory, which has just been published. It is pointed out that the average per capita allowance received from the city for the children committed to the institution by the children's courts and the Commissioner of Charities is less than $140 a year; that the examinations of the accounts of the institution required by the city are costly and do not result in any particular benefit, and that the Board of Estimate refuses to make the protectory any grants in aid of technical education.

Complaint is made that the regulations under which the Board of Estimate grants money in aid of private charitable institutions have gradually grown more complex, and that the institutions themselves have never been consulted about them. On the other hand, the State Board of Charities has always asked the opinion of the charitable institutions as to any change in its regulations which might affect them.

Speaking of the inspection by the Controller and the State Board of the protectory, the Lincoln Agricultural School, and St. Philip's Home, the report says:

"We have always welcomed inspection and examination of the institution, its inmates, and our books of account, to ascertain that it was doing justice to the city and the State. But we claim that this inspection and examination should be reasonable and done at reasonable times. This institution makes yearly report to the city of its finances on blanks provided for the purpose, and yearly has its books examined by a certified public accountant. It would seem that if any doubt existed in regard to the expenditures under any particular head it would be easy to ascertain the facts in a very few days. The technical examinations to which the institution has been subjected for months at a time seem entirely superfluous and extravagant, costing many thousands of dollars and resulting in no benefit to the city or the institution."

The report also contrasts the $140 per capita paid by the city with the average per capita cost to the State of inmates at the Bedford Reformatory in 1909 of $218.1[illegible]; of the State Training School for Girls at Hudson, $261.52; of the State Industrial School of Industry, $253.83, and of the House of Refuge, Randall's Island, $213.91.

It is pointed out that the protectory has been unable through lack of funds to place in the new Lincoln Agricultural School more than 150 boys, instead of the 500 that it was hoped would be accommodated there, and it is suggested that this is a further reason why the city should be more generous.

BRYAN QUOTES ROOSEVELT.

Harvard Brains Back of Most Predatory Conspiracies, He Says.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, S. C., April 9.—In an address before the State Y. M. C. A. to-day William J. Bryan quoted Col. Theodore Roosevelt as saying that there was scarcely a predatory conspiracy in the country that did not have Harvard brains behind it. Those men, said Mr. Bryan, who provided the way of escape from the responsibility and consequences of their conspiracies were no better than the men who held the horses in a dark place for thieves to get away after burglary.

Discussing criminal corporations, Mr. Bryan referred vigorously to the newspapers owned by them and run in their interest. He said it is not now possible to learn who owns the stock of some of these journals. He advocated a National law to make "these assassins who own papers come out from the dark and stand before the public gaze."

The criminals who have been growing rich by selling poisoned food, and especially those who are "coining the blood of little ones," were vigorously denounced.

Mr. Bryan predicted that the present Congress would so amend the law requiring punishment of contribution to campaign funds that voters would know before election which side predatory interests were on.

STOLE FROM A DEAD MAN.

Son Took His Watch and Accuses Another Boy of Taking His Money.

Twelve-year-old John Moran of 501 West Thirty-second Street and seventeen-year-old Frank J. Reede of Mills Hotel No. 3, in West Thirty-seventh Street, are under arrest, charged with having robbed the body of Moran's father on Friday.

The elder Moran was watchman on the dock at Eleventh Avenue and West Thirty-seventh Street. His wife died about eleven years ago, according to the police, and since then he and his small son have been living together in the tenement flat. Young Moran went over to the West Thirty-seventh Street Station last Saturday and said he was unable to arouse his father. Two detectives went immediately over to the Moran rooms, which proved to be poverty stricken and in confusion. They found the elder Moran dead, half in and out of a small iron bed. Tied around his waist was a rope, the loose end of which passed over a pulley attached to the bed head.

The dead man's pockets were turned inside out, and the drawers of a bureau had evidently been rifled. Young Moran, when questioned, said that after his father had died, twenty-four hours before, he allowed the body to lie where it was, and asked some of the young men of the neighborhood into the flat, Reede among them. The boy said Reede took $5 out of the dead man's pockets, and he himself took his watch. When arraigned before Chief Magistrate McAdoo in the West Side Court yesterday morning, young Moran, with seeming indifference, repeated this story to the Magistrate.

"Father was taken sick ten days ago," he said. "I took care of him after school hours. We had nothing to eat in the house after his illness began. I didn't tell any one he was ill. The neighbors sometimes gave me bread and milk. But father got nothing. He used to crawl into the kitchen during the daytime and sit there, but sometimes he couldn't get back into bed again. So he showed me how to tie the pulley to the bed head and how to raise him into bed by means of it.

"Father was in the kitchen all Thursday night, but I dragged him into the bedroom on Friday morning and hoisted him into bed before going to school. When I returned from school on Friday afternoon he was dead. He had promised me his watch, so I took it out of his pocket. He had frequently ill-used me, and I had been in the habit of taking money out of his pockets while he slept. Then I went out and asked Reede and another boy to come in. I saw Reede take the $5, turning the pocket inside out."

Reede denied the charges. Magistrate McAdoo committed him to the West Side Prison in default of $1,000 bail on a charge of theft. Young Moran was sent to the Children's Society.

The Coroner will try to find out whether the elder Moran died of natural causes.

SHOOTS CHILD AND SELF IN HOSPITAL

Los Angeles Tailor Commits Double Crime, After Killing Another Daughter at Home.

MOTIVE FOR KILLING MYSTERY

Strange Agreement Alleged to Have Existed Between S. L. Dania and Adopted Child.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 9.—As the result of a suicide compact, S. L. Dania, a Spaniard, 57 years old, and Eva Bovee, his youthful adopted daughter, lie at the County Hospital to-night in a critical condition. It is not believed either will live.

The attempt to end two lives was made late last night, and it is believed the shots were fired by Dania from a revolver that the young woman had brought to the hospital where Dania lay in a serious condition as the result of another shooting affray a week ago. At that time, in a revolver duel with George Koerner, Dania killed his 6-year-old daughter, saying that he wanted her to die with him. That killing took place after Dania was badly wounded.

The authorities found letters in Dania's bed and in Eva Bovee's purse which indicated that Dania feared being hanged for killing his daughter. There was a strong attachment between the man and his adopted daughter, and she visited him constantly at the hospital. During such visits they were closely watched. The letters, six in number, were written in the hospital ward. The deed, carefully planned, was carried out after the lights in the ward had been extinguished.

Miss Bovee, learning that Dania would die, to-day made the following statement of the shooting:

"Father shot me before he shot himself. I had him keep his promise that he would. The first bullet struck me on the top of the head. He then shot himself, but I cried to him that I was not hurt and begged him to shoot again. He did. He shot me four times and I hope I will die."

Three of the bullets entered Miss Bovee's body. Dania shot himself once in the head.

One week ago Mrs. George Koerner, in passing Dania's tailor shop, said, loud enough for the tailor to hear: "There is a man who beats his wife." Dania, hearing, rushed out after the woman and her escort. The escort, seeing a knife in the angry man's hand, drew a revolver and fired, wounding Dania in the throat.

Bleeding, the tailor staggered back to the store, where he met his little daughter, Ledania. Crying, "I am dying and I cannot live!" Dania shot the child to death there on the threshold of the shop.

Dr. C. H. Whitman, Superintendent of the County Hospital, believes that the series of criminal incidents that followed were the result of a compact between Dania and Miss Bovee. Dania is believed to have referred to it when last night he lay bleeding on his cot and murmured endearing terms to the Bovee girl who was lying close beside him.

Earlier in the evening Miss Bovee came came to the hospital, and, declaring that she was the daughter of the wounded man, secured permission to sit with him for a time. At night she was told to leave, but she evaded the authorities and returned to Dania's bedside. It was shortly after 11 when the occupants of the ward were startled by the shot from a revolver. There was a screen about Dania's bed and from behind it came sounds of groans. The patients began screaming, but before a doctor or attendant could come into the room three more shots rang out from behind the screen.

When Dr. Whitman reached the cot he found Dania with a bullet wound in his throat and the Bovee girl lying beside his cot shot in three different places, all of the wounds fatal. They were murmuring loving words to each other.

When she learned she was going to die Miss Bovee made a statment in which she declared she had fired the shots, but in this she was later contradicted by Dania, who declared that he had done so. The authorities are at loss to know which of the dying statements to believe. When, however, Dania learned that Miss Bovee had claimed the gruesome honor of the shooting, he said: "Oh, well, let it go at that."

"When father was arrested for killing Ledania, I promised him to get him out of his trouble, and I have in the best way I could," is all that Miss Bovee would say when told that Dania claimed that he fired the fatal shots.

HER CHECK WAS WORTHLESS.

Young Wife Admits She Passed It Because She Needed Money.

Mrs. Edith Lillie, the young wife of a compositor, living at 1,180 Fox Street, the Bronx, was arrested yesterday in her home by Detectives Buddemeyer and O'Mara, on the charge of passing a worthless check for $75 in a Bronx dry goods store. Mrs. Lillie, the detectives said, admitted that she had passed the check because she had been pressed for money. She took her eighteen-months-old son, Eugene, to the station house with her.

John Flanagan of 133 West Eighty-sixth Street, proprietor of the store, said Mrs. Lillie went there last Thursday and bought a hat and a pair of gloves for $7.52, and ordered two suits sent to 992 Boston Road. She gave the check in payment for the gloves and hat, but Flanagan said it was returned next day marked, "No account."

Mrs. Lillie had used the name of Mrs. Oliver Darrell, and when the suits reached the Boston Road address the wagon driver found no person of that name. The detectives learned that Mrs. Lillie had moved from that address to Fox Street some time ago, and as she answered the description of Flanagan's customer, they sent Flanagan yesterday from flat to flat in the Fox Street house, posing as a possible buyer for the property. Mrs. Lillie admitted him to her apartment, and then with a scream she ran and hid in a closet, the detectives say.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, Wash., April 9.—Giving his name as Jacob H. Schiff, Jr., and asserting that he was the son of the New York banker, a well-dressed young man was arrested last night on a charge of attempting to evade paying an $18 board bill at the Hotel Carlton. He was arrested in the hotel as he finished a letter addressed to the New York banker, in which he went into details regarding the Puget Sound district. He was short of money, but possessed a draft for a large sum on a Portland bank.

A person who has caused some annoyance to Mr. Schiff before by representing himself as the banker's son has been arrested at various places in the West. There is no such person as Jacob H. Schiff, Jr. Mr. Schiff has but one son, Mortimer L. Schiff, who is now in this city.

Judeans Discuss Educating Children.

The Judeans held a meeting at the Hotel Astor last night to discuss "The Problem of Religious Education for Jewish Children." One hundred members attended and Daniel P. Hays presided. The speakers were Dr. S. Benderly, Prof. M. M. Kaplan, the Rev. Dr. Rudolph Grossman, and Eugene Lehman. It was pointed out that the only method of instructing Jewish children in religion was in special schools by properly qualified teachers, and that the teaching of Hebrew was very essential, as it was the only means of communication among the Jews all over the world. Dr. Grossman said the Bible had been correctly described as the best textbook ever written.

row any money there, or that they were acquainted with or had any relation with the Savoy Trust Company.

"3. Mr. Gerli, the President, had been a co-Director with me in the Broadway Trust Company, and I knew him to be a conservative man of ability and integrity.

"4. The company, through its Secretary, by letters and interviews, had requested me to make deposits.

"5. Mr. Hammerling, one of the Directors who testified before the Grand Jury, was well known to me and had also requested me to make deposits.

"The following letters will explain to some extent the character of the persuasion upon which I was induced to act:

New York, March 1, 1910.

Hon. Charles H. Hyde, Chamberlain, City of New York:

Dear Sir: At a meeting of the Finance Committee of the City of New York, held in the latter part of January, this company was designated a depository of the funds of the city.

We own at the present time $350,000 New York City bonds and have on deposit with you $50,000 of such bonds as per receipt delivered to us Feb. 15, and fall, under these conditions, that we are entitled to receive a deposit from the city.

We also wish to draw your attention to the fact that we have always considerable sums of money due us by the city, by reason of assignments by clients of moneys due under contracts with the city.

Trusting that we may be favored with a deposit of $50,000 to $100,000 on which we will pay the customary interest, we remain, yours respectfully,

SAVOY TRUST COMPANY,
Arthur Bauer,
Secretary and Treasurer.

Savoy Trust Company, 520 Broadway,

Mr. Louis N. Hammerling, President,
American Association of Foreign Newspapers,
61 Park Row, City.

My Dear Sir: As a Director of this company I desire to enlist your services in the matter of our relations with the office of the City Chamberlain of the City of New York.

Under the old administration we had a deposit from the city of $50,000, whereas we now only have $25,000, although we have now on deposit with the Hon. Charles H. Hyde, the present Chamberlain, $50,000, New York City bonds, with which to secure a deposit of a like amount, and have offered in addition to this to give a surety bond of the best company in New York for a deposit of an additional amount of $50,000.

I am very anxious to make a record with my Directors in having secured a large line of deposits for the bank, and believe that you are able to assist me in this respect.

As you are well aware, this company is the headquarters for the very best that is in the Italian Colony of the City of New York, and any favors extended to it will, as you know, be reciprocated at the proper time.

Trusting that your efforts may bring results, I remain, with kindest regards,

Sincerely yours,
ARTHUR BAUER,
Secretary and Treasurer.

My Dear Mr. Hyde: Allow me to thank you most sincerely for your very kind reception to me and Mr. Bauer to-day. I assure you that I appreciate the reception you gave me, even if you did not state that you will give us a deposit of seventy-five thousand dollars ($75,000) more for the Savoy Trust Company.

I am a great admirer of the Mayor and yourself, and if I can be of any service to you in any capacity I hope that you will not hesitate to call on me.

Again thanking you for your great kindness to me, and wishing you the greatest success and happiness, I am, very sincerely yours,

Hon. Charles H. Hyde, City Chamberlain,
City Hall, New York City.

My Dear Mr. Hyde: I hope you will pardon me the liberty I take in writing to you again. The Savoy Trust Company, of which I am a Director, has only so far received since we saw you a $25,000 deposit. On the plea I made to you, I understood that you will give us a deposit of $75,000, which I am, of course, responsible in telling the Directors that such will be the case. I would be very thankful to you if you can arrange this conveniently, or if I can hear from you to the contrary. Assuring you my appreciation, I am, yours very truly,

LOUIS N. HAMMERLING, President.

Hon. Charles H. Hyde,
City Chamberlain.
280 Broadway, New York City.

My dear Mr. Hyde: I regret that I have to write you again, but as I told you personally that I am very much interested as a Director of the Savoy Trust Company and as I am leaving for Europe to-morrow, I desire to thank you for your past favors and hereby solicit an additional deposit of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000). I assure you that I shall never forget what you have done and I hope that you will favor us this time. I shall call and thank you personally on my return, which will be Aug. 10th.

Again thanking you, I am,
Yours very truly.
LOUIS N. HAMMERLING,
President.

"Those who have held public office and the thousands of people who daily ask assistance or favors, if you choose, in one form or another, will appreciate the pressure that is brought to bear on all officials. The number of people who have requested deposits for the various banks is almost beyond belief. I do not know the dates of the loans referred to in the published stories, never having heard of them before. One of the banks referred to in the reported testimony before the Grand Jury as having made a loan to Mr. Cummins or his associates coincident with the deposit of city money therein was the Hungarian-American Bank.

"I find that on the same day that the deposit was made in that bank I made deposits in the following other banks: American Exchange National Bank, Chatham National Bank, Citizens' Central National Bank, Fifth National Bank, Fourteenth Street Bank, International Bank, Mercantile National Bank, Night and Day Bank, Sherman National Bank, Broadway Trust Company, Lawyers' Title Company, Union Trust Company, Mechanics' Bank of Brooklyn, Brooklyn Trust Company, Franklin Trust Company, Hamilton Trust Company, Home Trust Company, Nassau National Bank, Kings County Trust Company, and these were in most cases increased deposits. There may be coincidences in all of these and the hundreds of other deposits I have made, but if there are the public knows as much of it as I do.

"Impossible to Get Redress."

"And yet it is impossible to get redress against these assassins of reputation as public officials have found to their cost. It furnishes the most potent reason why our best and most public-spirited citizens refuse public office, and why some of those who are beguiled into accepting service permit themselves to be terrorized in the performance of their duties.

"It would be impossible to follow these tales day by day with denials and explanations even if the newspapers that print the stories would print the denials with anything like the same prominence if at all—which they are not as a rule willing to do.

"All I ask is that the public in and out of the City of New York will suspend judgment upon these anonymous attacks on the assurance that nothing has taken place during my administration of the office of Chamberlain, of which I or my city or its citizens need be ashamed."

HULL OF THE MAINE SOON TO BE EXPOSED

Steel Caissons Completed and Pumping of Water Expected to Begin Next Month.

MUCH CARE IS NECESSARY

Cofferdam May Give or the Wreck May Careen When the Water Is Taken Away.

HAVANA, Monday, April 3.—With the completion by the driving of interlocking steel piles of the last of the twenty caissons forming the inclosing wall of the huge basin or cofferdam surrounding the wreck of the Maine, the first stage in the great work of removing the remains of the battleship sunk in the harbor of Havana on the night of Feb. 15, 1898, has just been brought to a successful conclusion.

The second stage of the work, that of filling the caissons with mud, clay, and rock dredged from the harbor bottom, has been going on as fast as circumstances would permit. It is expected that the work will be completed by the end of April, and after that the most interesting stage of the work—that of pumping out the great basin and leaving exposed the hull of the battleship in precisely the condition she was on the morning after her destruction thirteen years ago—will be proceeded with. First, however, a heavy timber platform will be erected on top of the caissons encircling the basin to serve as a stage of operations and foundation for cranes and other apparatus for use when the work of dismantling the wreck is begun.

While the simple pumping out of the basin presents no more difficulty than the emptying of an ordinary dry dock, the peculiar conditions of the work make necessary the exercise of extraordinary precautions, which will probably prolong the operation for many days. While Capt. Ferguson, the United States Army engineer officer in immediate direction of the operations, has the fullest confidence in the strength of the caissons and their capacity to resist the inflow of water, he is determined to take no chances, and as the water level in the basin sinks lower and lower, pumping will be suspended from time to time to permit of careful examination of each caisson.

The wreck itself will have to be carefully watched as the water level falls, there being some danger that, as the support of the water and the mud in which it rests is withdrawn, the hull may careen, just as ships have been known to do in dry dock when insufficiently secured. This will be guarded against by the use of suitable struts and bilge blocks.

As soon as the wreck is fully exposed the work of exploration in search of human remains will take precedence of every other consideration. It is practically certain that when this stage of the work is reached a United States man-of-war will be ordered to Havana and will be close to the wreck to receive th bodies as fast as they are recovered and transport them to their final resting place.

After that will come an exhaustive scrutiny of the shattered wreck by experts, who, in the opinion of engineer officers, will be able to determine beyond all question precisely the character of the agency whereby the destruction was effected.

Finally will come the extraction of the thousands of steel piles composing the twenty caissons and the dredging of the material with which they were filled. This may not be completed before the end of the year.

LINER IRENE AFLOAT AND NOT MUCH HURT

given with just as much gusto as if they hadn't been preluded with a surprised half-whispered chorus of:

The Irene, free at last, replied to the cheers ashore with two long blasts of her siren, and moved in tow of the tugs slowly out to sea.

At 4 o'clock, still towed by the Relief and Rescue, and with the Timmins astern, the Irene was standing about a mile off shore, just opposite the Lone Hill life-saving station, in the lookout of which Capt. Goddard gazed skeptically through his telescope, muttering again and again and yet once again that he sure would "be blowed"—a windy fate that is sure to beset Capt. Goddard almost any day, whether he wills it or no. He said later that even if he was surprised, he was pleased, too; and well he might be, for he and his men had worked untiringly.

When the Irene turned westward on the last lap of her interrupted journey she ran down the red signal, which spelled "Haul away on your cables," and ran up the German ensign. The crowd on shore broke into cheers.

A little later, when the vessel was well under way, her skipper wirelessed to the line's office the best message he ever sent there:

"The Prinzess Irene is free, and is being towed by the tugs Rescue and Relief. She is undamaged."

With the departure of the Irene and her rescuing tugs, there remained at the scene of the stranding only the Government revenue cutter Mohawk. The derelict destroyer Seneca, which had stood by the grounded Irene from the start, having departed earlier in the day, presumably to hunt a derelict she had heard of further east.

Some of those in the crowd of holiday spectators, hovered about the beach until darkness was settling and the Irene had become a mere toy ship on the western horizon. The rest trudged back across Fire Island to Great South Bay, where thrifty boatmen who for three days had found passenger ferrying much more lucrative than oyster dredging, slung them one by one upon their backs, and carried them, with feet dangling just clear of the water, to watiting flat-bottomed doreys and thereon out to waiting motor boats, oyster boats, and sailboats, further out in the bay. It was night when the last of them reached Sayville.

Sayville went to bed at 9:30 instead of 9 o'clock last night, all through talking of the launching of the Irene.

NOW RIDES AT ANCHOR.

Prinzess Irene Will Come Through the Ambrose Channel This Morning.

The Prinzess Irene anchored off Scotland Lightship at 10 o'clock last night, waiting for daylight to be towed through the Ambrose Channel and the bay to her pier at Hoboken, which she will reach at 10 A. M.

When the liner got into deep water from the sand bar, where she had rested for eighty-three hours, Chief Engineer Schmidt examined the machinery and reported to Capt. von Peterssen that, so far as he could see, there was no reason why the ship should not proceed slowly under her own steam up the harbor. After a consultation between the Captain, Chief Engineer, and Inspector Koeveneck, from Hoboken, it was decided that as the wrecking people had reported that the rudder post appeared to be damaged, it would be advisable not to use the propellers, and the two tugs then started to tow her along at three knots an hour. She was not leaking, and there was no sign to show that the hull had been damaged during the time she was ashore.

The North German Lloyd officials said yesterday that when the liner arrives at her pier divers will go down and examine her hull to see if any of the plates have been started, and then she will proceed to Newport News under her own steam, if possible, to go into dry dock for necessary repairs.

The Prinzess Irene was to have sailed next Saturday for Naples, and had 160 first and 100 second cabin passengers, who have been notified of her inability to leave on schedule time. The next North German Lloyd vessel to leave for the Mediterranean is the Koenig Albert on April 29, and if she arrives in New York in time her sailing date will be advanced, it was said, and the Prinzess Irene will take her place.

Officials of the company and the seafaring friends of Capt. Peterssen said last night that the ship having got off safely, with comparatively little damage, they hoped that he would not lose his position in the service, as it was his first accident during a long career, which included eleven years in command. So far everything went to prove that he had done his duty as a navigator and a commander in time of emergency.

Capt. Moeller, formerly commander of one of the company's South American liners and for several years the Marine Superintendent of the North German Lloyd at Hoboken, was sick in bed when the Prinzess Irene went ashore on Thursday, and in order to be in touch with the ship he had a telephone line hooked up beside his bed so that he could get the reports coming in from Inspector Koevenick, his assistant, who went on board the stranded liner.

It was stated that 200 tons out of her general cargo of 900 tons was discharged from the Prinzess Irene before she was floated.

TWO NEW COUNTERFEIT BILLS

Secret Service Sends Out Warning Against $10 and $20 Notes.

W. H. Moran, Acting Chief of the Secret Service here, has sent out a warning to banks, business houses, and ticket offices to keep a sharp lookout for two new counterfeit bills which have been discovered in circulation. One of the counterfeit bills is a $20 National bank note, its check letter being B. It is described thus:

On the United States National Bank of Los Angeles, Cal.; check letter B; series of 1902-1908; J. W. Lyons, Register of the Treasury; Ellis H. Roberts, Treasurer of the United States; Charter No. 7,632; Bank No. 2,771; Treasury No. M-458,118; picture of McCulloch.

This counterfeit might properly be classed as a raised note, as it is a pen and ink production, the paper being obtained by cleaning off a genuine one-dollar bill; but in many places parts of the one-dollar note have been left intact. This is particularly true of the lathe work, and these portions of the genuine note can be readily discerned under a glass. The portrait of McCulloch is very poor; there are many mistakes in the lettering. Immediately over the portrait the word "National" is spelled with a final "I" instead of "L"; at the bottom, face of note, "Cashier" is spelled "Casher." The counterfeit should not deceive any one accustomed to handling money.

The other counterfeit is a $10 United States note, its check letter being C. Here is Moran's description of it:

Series of 1901; check letter C; W. T. Vernon, Register of the Treasury; Lee McClung, Treasurer of the United States; portraits of Lewis and Clark. This counterfeit is a photographic production on paper of excellent quality. There has been no attempt to color the seal, number, or large numeral on the face of the note. The back of the note is a reddish brown, instead of green. This counterfeit should not deceive even the ordinarily careful handler of money.

Subway and elevated station ticket sellers have been especially warned against receiving the counterfeits.

DID NOT ATTACK GAYNOR.

Miss Milholland's Remarks About "the Mayor" Wrongly Interpreted.

Miss Inez Milholland writes to THE TIMES to say that her reference in a speech to the East Meadow Branch of the Political Equality Association at Hempstead, L. I., on Saturday night to her experience with the Mayor in trying to obtain better conditions in the Triangle Waist Company's shop before the fire was not with Mayor Gaynor, as stated in THE TIMES report, but with his predecessor, Mayor McClellan. Miss Milholland writes:

"I never approached Mayor Gaynor in regard to conditions in this or any other factory. Mayor Gaynor was not in office at the time the shirt waist strike began. It was Mayor McClellan whom the strikers petitioned to investigate the abuses of the police, and who replied that he was not interested. Mayor Gaynor had nothing to do with this particular situation, and I did not mention him in connection with it.

"May I take this opportunity of stating that suffragists as such and as a matter of policy attack no public officer unless he puts himself on record as opposing votes for women? And then they attack him for suffrage reasons only. This, as you will see, is a matter of tactics and good sense."

The error in THE TIMES report, it appears, arose from the fact that Miss Milholland, after speaking at some length of Mayor Gaynor and the subway situation, went on to deal with the shirt waist strike, referring in that connection to "the Mayor," without naming the Mayor.

TRY POLICEMAN SHERRY AGAIN

He's Now Accused of Writing to a Brooklyn Paper Criticising Gaynor.

Policeman William A. Sherry of Rockaway Beach, who, when arraigned before Commissioner Cropsey on Feb. 9 on the charge of being off post, told the Commissioner that he was making cowards of the police, will be again brought to trial to-morrow morning at the Brooklyn Police Headquarters, this time on charges of unbecoming conduct prejudicial to the discipline of the police force and insubordination.

The new charges are made by Inspector Schmittberger, and are the result of a letter alleged to have been written to a Brooklyn newspaper on March 3 by Policeman Sherry. In this letter both Mayor Gaynor and Commissioner Cropsey were severely criticised, the writer stating that the public could hope for little when the department was in charge of a person who knew nothing of the work except what he was told by others. A copy of the letter is incorporated in the complaint, which charges that by bringing criticism to bear upon the official acts of the Mayor the writer, as a member of the police force, is guilty of gross insubordination.

Friends of Sherry said yesterday that when he is arraigned he will take up the letter statement by statement and attempt to justify them all. Following his first trial and conviction, Sherry was fined fifteen days' pay.

PROTECTING THE BANKS.

Pinkerton Report for Year Shows 127 Forgers and Swindlers Arrested.

In its annual report to subscribers on its protection of banks and bankers Pinkerton's National Detective Agency says that from Feb. 17, 1910, to Feb. 1, this year, 127 forgers and swindlers were brought to book by its efforts. Of these thirty-five professional and sixty-six amateurs—that is, first offenders or forgers for petty amounts—were arrested by the combined efforts of the police and the agency; twenty-four amateurs were traced, but were not prosecuted at the request of the banks, and two amateurs gave themselves up through fear of pursuit. Altogether $23,395 was thus recovered by the banks, and eight bands of professional forgers were broken up.

The Pinkertons reckon that in the twelve months covered there was throughout the country an increase of 36 per cent. of bank burglaries and 47 per cent. in the amount stolen, but the yeggmen left the banks they covered alone. The agency also dealt with one sneak theft at Syracuse, N. Y., but was unable to get sufficient evidence to convict, and one hold-up robbery at Dillon, Mont., for which the criminal received a sentence of twenty years.

E. M. HOLLAND IS ILL.

Actor Stricken at His Apartment, but Is Not in Danger.

E. M. Holland, the actor, is ill at his home, the La Porte apartments, 1,161 Amsterdam Avenue. He is resting comfortably, however, and is not in danger.

Mr. Holland is suffering from acute indigestion. He was taken ill in his dressing room at the theatre, and was attended there by Dr. Davis. He was removed to his home, very ill, but since last Saturday has been regaining his strength rapidly.

Mr. Holland, who is 63 years old, was taken ill after the close of "The Blue Bird," which ended the season at The New Theatre. He was hurried to his home and Dr. Fellowes Davis, Jr., of 161 West Forty-seventh Street was summoned to him. Dr. Davis said last night that his patient was comfortable and not in danger. Mr. Holland's wife and daughter are with him.

REBEL AGENT TELLS OF PEACE MEETINGS

Limantour Sought to End Mexican Troubles, He Says, and Sent Men to Negotiate.

STANLEY WILLIAMS KILLED

American Who Led Socialists Shot in a Charge—Scattered Fighting in Various Mexican States.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 9.—In an issue of Mexico Nuevo, the insurrecto paper published by the Mexican revolutionary junta in San Antonio, Juan Sanches Azcona, the acting head of the junta, has a signed article on what he declares to be the inside story of the peace negotiations that have just failed. Throughout the story the statement occurs that at no time were the negotiations of an official nature, but were simply the joint efforts of certain members of the Madero family and Señor José Yves Limantour, the Mexican Minister of Finance, to reach some middle ground upon which possible peace might be attained.

Señor Azcona says that late in February, when he was in Washington, Dr. Vasquez Gomez, the insurrecto agent there, received a message from Francisco I. Madero, Sr., inviting him to come to Corpus Christi, Texas, to talk over plans looking to peace. At the conference which followed and which apparently came to naught Señor Azcona says President Diaz was represented by Iniego Noriega, an influential Spaniard resident in Mexico City.

Mr. Azcona thus describes what he terms the Madero-Limantour meeting in New York and the subsequent journey of Francisco I. Madero, Sr., and his son Alfonzo to El Paso in the interest of peace:

"On March 8 or 9 Don Francisco Madero, father of the leader of the insurgents, had in New York a meeting or welcome with his old personal friend, José Yves Limantour, who was returning from Europe en route to the City of Mexico. In the course of conversation both deplored the present events in Mexico and deemed it expedient to make an effort in behalf of the welfare of the country to see if it was not possible to arrive at some arrangement, which, assuming that peace would come within a short time, would yet give the satisfaction sought by the insurgents. With this object Don Francisco Madero arranged meetings, strictly private, between Mr. Limantour and Dr. Vasquez Gomez and Gustavo Madero, members, these last two, of the directorate of the revolution.

"Our representatives had four interviews with Mr. Limantour in the presence of Don Francisco Madero. These interviews, I repeat, were private, and once Mr. Limantour was put in possession of the minimum demands of the revolutionists presented to our representatives, he deemed it convenient for him to present these demands to the President of Mexico and his Ministry.

"Our representatives consented to get in touch with the leader of the revolution, Don Francisco I. Madero, and procure from him his views with regard to holding an official and open peace conference. The representatives of the insurrection immediately sent detailed information of the proceedings to Don Francisco I. Madero, who at the time was on the field of operations in Chihuahua. He was asked to favor us with his opinion on these matters and to dictate his orders.

"In the last days of March there arrived in San Antonio Don Rafael Hernandez and Don Salvador Madero, representing, confidentially, Mr. Limantour. The representatives of the insurrection thought it well to call me here from Washington, and in the evening of March 31 we had a conference in which the revolutionary element was represented by Don Roque Estrada, Don José Maria Pino Suarez, Don Gustavo, and Don Alfonzo Madero, and by me. Like other efforts, this meeting was not of any official character. There was no presentation of credentials by Messrs. Hernandez and Madero other than the simple declaration on their word of honor that they came as representatives confidentially of Mr. Limantour.

"After hearing Mr. Hernandez the representatives of the revolution expressed their point of view, saying that inasmuch as Mr. Limantour had sought ground close to President Diaz to initiate negotiations for peace we believed it no more than right that we should get in touch with our leader, Don Francisco I. Madero, to receive instructions and orders. Mr. Hernandez expressed the belief that it was possible to send a commission to Gen. Madero; that the Government of Gen. Diaz would give the Commissioners every kind of security and safeguard, with safe conducts, and an escort of soldiers to traverse the lines of the Federal troops.

"This idea in principle having been accepted we designated for our part of the commission Don Roque Estrada and Don Alfonzo Madero, who left for El Paso the night of March 21, accompanied by Don Rafael Hernandez as the confidential agent of Mr. Limantour, and by Don Francisco Madero, father of the insurrecto leader, who expressed hopes of again seeing his son.

"I deem it well in closing to mention the fact that the revolutionary party never has taken nor never will take the initiative to enter into peace negotiations, because no necessity for them exists, as we are winning daily. If it should arise that a peace meeting will be held we have not agreed to any armistice or suspension of hostilities pending the outcome. In all our discussion there was no mention of laying down arms or of an armistice. This is the opinion predominating among all the revolutionists and the group of directors of the revolution."

A telegram received here to-night by Francisco Madero, Sr., said a private car has been sent from the City of Mexico by Minister Limantour to carry Señor Madero to Chihuahua to confer with his son regarding peace negotiations.

What may have been nothing more than a comedy of errors prevented a start from El Paso by automobile to the rebel camp. Señor Madero received three telegrams from Señor Limantour that Col. Tamborel of the Juarez garrison had been ordered to deliver the passports to any one who should call with Limantour's card. This card was given to Señor Madero in New York. Col. Tamborel did not receive the passports from Señor Limantour.

Last night the Madero party thinking something wrong, determined to return here, where they arrived to-night. On the train Don Francisco met Gen. Cuellar, the Federal leader, who lost an arm at Casas Grandes, and the mystery was cleared up. The passports, he said, had been in the hands of Gen. Navarro, who is also at Juarez. The latter had said nothing to Col. Tamborel, and was waiting patiently for the messenger with the Limantour card.

Don Francisco asserted that if the assurances were satisfactory, he and his party would proceed at once to Chihuahua. He declined to view recent developments in the City of Mexico and the warlike preparations of his son in any other than an optimistic light.

SCATTERED FIGHTING GOES ON.

Long Engagement at Villardena—Much Trouble Around Torreon.

EL PASO, Texas, April 9.—The Mexican inhabitants of Casas Grandes and vicinity are apprehensive since the soldiers left there for Chihuahua and Juarez. They fear the insurrectos will take their property. Smallpox has broken out in the region, and also is causing considerable fear.

It is believed here the insurrectos will move back to Casas Grandes and will make their headquarters for a time there, especially pending present peace talk. There are no Federals in that region. Since the railroad has been opened from Juarez to Casas Grandes and Pearsons much railroad construction material has been sent through. Construction work on the railroad south of Pearsons to connect with the line extending west from Chihuahua will be pushed unless there is further interruption.

News from Culiacan, Sinaloa, is that reinforcements reached Lieut. Col. Morelos at Badiraguato, where the insurrectos had him cooped up, and that the insurrectos retired, leaving the Federals in possession of the town. The reinforcements had machine guns. The insurrectos have raided in Sinaloa, near Culiacan, and carried off many horses and supplies.

Federals and insurrectos were still fighting on Friday at Villardena, according to mail advices received by The Herald. The battle had been in progress since Wednesday morning.

Bridges have been destroyed between Torreon and Pasaje and the wires cut. Trinidad Bridge, near Torreon, has been destroyed a second time.

Reports from Rodario, a station on the Parral & Durango Railroad, says bandits raided that place Friday, and took $1,500 from the agent.

News from Paral to The Herald is that Guillermo Baca, one of the boldest of insurrecto leaders, is dead. He had been in Paral for some days, and was found dead near Mesa Sandia, close to Parral, Friday. He was 40 years old, and a former citizen of Paral.

STANLEY WILLIAMS KILLED.

Former American Regular Shot in Charge on Mexican Battalion.

MEXICALI, Mexico, April 9.—Stanley Williams was wounded yesterday in the spectacular assault, when his little force of eighty men engaged the entire Eighth Battalion of the Mexican Army, and died to-day in the improvised hospital established by the United States troops at Calexico.

Williams was formerly a Quartermaster Sergeant in the United States Army, from which he deserted. He succeeded Gen. Leyra in charge of the Socialist forces in Mexicali.

Together with the other dead brought from the battlefield, five miles away, the fallen chieftain was buried to-night in the little graveyard at Mexicali, just behind the breastworks.

EL PASO, Texas, April 9.—Asked what effect the defeat of Stanley Williams's rebels in Lower California would have on the insurrection in Chihuahua and other States of Northern Mexico, the insurrecto junta here to-day authorized this statement:

"The insurrectos in Lower California have no connection with the Maderists in other parts of the Mexican Republic. The rebel leaders in the peninsula, for the most part are American adventurers. They have no communication with Madero, and have never been recognized by the Maderists' juntas. The defeat of Williams' band by Col. Mayot's Federals will have absolutely no effect on the plans of the insurrectos in Chihuahua and other States where Francisco I. Madero, Jr., is recognized as leader."

MADERO GOES NORTHWARD.

Believed to be Aiming Toward Casas Grandes and Juarez.

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico, April 9.—News from the interior to-day confirms previous dispatches that Madero's forces are going to a point northwest of here. Madero and his staff occupy a train. Several trains, including about fifty coaches, carry the camp equipment. The objective point apparently is Madera. One report is that Madero is determined to throw his strength against Casas Grandes and Juarez with a view of gaining belligerency recognition from the United States.

Chihuahua has not relaxed in alertness in keeping the city fortified. A trainload of soldiers preceded by an armored car mounted with rapid-fire guns went south to-day to prevent interference with railroad communication.

SENOR ZAMACONA ARRIVES.

Mexico's Credit Much Better, Says the New Ambassador.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Señor Zamacona Inclan, who is to succeed Señor de la Barra as Mexican Ambassador to Washington, arrived here from London to-night and was met by the staff of the Mexican Embassy. Señor Zamacona arrived in New York on the Caronia today and came on to Washington. He will present his credentials to President Taft within the next two days.

Asked what effect the revolution in Mexico might have on business or credit of his country abroad the new Ambassador said:

"Just two facts will explain that. We consummated a 4 per cent. loan in Paris recently at 97⅝. Compare that with figures for Mexican loans ten years ago. Again, the latest reports of the railways indicate big increases in the amount of traffic over all lines."

Señor Zamacona was an attaché of the then Mexican Legation when his father was Minister to the United States from Mexico in the late seventies. On his return to Mexico in the eighties he became successively Collector of the Federal Taxes for the State of Hidalgo, Postmaster General of Mexico, National Treasurer, member of the House of Deputies, and member of the Senate. He was for many years connected with one of the largest banks in Mexico, and a year ago became financial agent in London. There he worked in co-operation with Señor Limantour in control of the Mexican loans.

STOP RIFLES AT LAREDO.

United States Authorities Intercept Boxes Sent to Pawnbroker.

LAREDO, Texas, April 9.—Two boxes, reported to contain rifles and ammunition, arrived here last night by rail. The United States authorities had advance information and maintained a strict surveillance until an attempt was made to deliver the boxes to the consignee, a pawnbroker. He disclaimed any knowledge of the shipment, and the boxes were returned to the railway station, where they remained under close watch.

It is learned that the shipment of guns, said to number twenty-five, is part of a large consignment to come. It is reported in railway circles that the total shipment numbers 1,000 rifles.

CONGREGATION IN TEARS.

Dr. Hill's Sermon on Fire Disaster Stirs Them—Tribute to Chief Croker.

"I pay tribute to-night to Fire Chief Croker, one of the most judicious, brave, self-sacrificing fire chiefs in this or any other country. He should be clothed with the greatest possible authority and should have the power to prevent conflagrations as well as to suppress them," said the Rev. Dr. John Wesley Hill, pastor of the Metropolitan Temple, last night in an address in commemoration of the dead of the Washington Place disaster.

The church was crowded. Now and then a sob came from the lips of some who had lost relatives in the fire. At times others of the audience applauded the preacher.

"This Washington Place disaster emphasizes a new scheme of fire protection, improved automatic fire alarms, and fireproof doors that shall be kept open," said Dr. Hill, pounding on the pulpit. Then he went on to portray step by step the events of the calamity. This brought a fresh outburst and for several moments the sound of the speaker's voice was almost drowned by the sobs of his auditors.

"This is but another illustration of the duty of the city to protect its citizens. The first duty of the city is not to harvest wealth, but to shield its people from peril of every description and character. This condition," he said, "can only be made effective by proper fire administration, compulsory drill of the toilers, and better fire-fighting arrangements."

What are most needed, he said, are "fire specialists," who shall report directly to the fire chief. He believed that owners of buildings should be held personally responsible for the fire-escape arrangements of their buildings.

TO OPERATE ON VANDEWATER

Condition of His Eyes May Keep Him Out of Pulpit for Some Time.

It was reported yesterday that the Rev. Dr. George R. Vandewater, for twenty-three years pastor of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church, 129th Street and Fifth Avenue, would not preach for several weeks, owing to a serious condition of his eyes, which will necessitate an operation. Dr. Vandewater, it is understood, has been gradually going blind for several years, and it was said that an operation would be performed on his eyes.

Dr. John E. Weeks of 47 East Fifty-seventh Street, his family physician, refused last night to discuss the condition of his patient.

THAW AIDED TO FREE MATTEAWAN INMATE

Mother Says Release of Mattheson, Who Shot Three Relatives, Is Partly Due to Him.

SON INSISTED MAN WAS SANE

Mattheson's Case, His Mother Declares, Worried Thaw Most After His Own Trouble.

Special to The New York Times.

FISHKILL, N. Y., April 9.—Mrs. Mary C. Thaw, mother of Harry Thaw, to-day issued a statement in which she said that her son was responsible in part at least for the liberation on Saturday of Frederick Mattheson from the Matteawan State Hospital for the Insane.

Mattheson shot his niece, Mrs. Amaba Hoffman, her husband, and her nephew while he was delirious from fever four years ago at 608 East 135th Street. His release involved two proceedings in court, Justice Goff having ordered his liberty last February. The asylum authorities ignored this order and Saturday's proceedings were brought before Justice Morschauser in Poughkeepsie on a habeas corpus writ. This is Mrs. Thaw's statement:

"In grateful recognition of God's overruling providence I make this statement, the first since Judge Mills sent my son back from the White Plains hearing two and a half years ago, in reference to the release of the sane and acquitted man from the Matteawan prison house. The illegal detention of Mr. Mattheson has worried my son more than any trouble outside of his own case. Mattheson was the only other acquitted man in the State of New York, who, although sane, was kept in prison dishonestly.

"Harry thought that it was unintentionally his fault that Mattheson was held. His badly presented case before Judge Morschauser injured his old workman as well as himself. Mattheson was insane in 1907, but soon recovered, and since his commitment to Matteawan, six months after my son, he has, as doctors admit, shown no evidence of insanity. Harry personally tried every way he could to get him out, and was then in communication with his nephew and niece in West New York, N. J. Justice for the old man seemed in sight, but, being anxious of all things that there should be no setback, which at his age would mean his death in misery, my son moved with extreme prudence.

"He helped start active proceedings four months ago. Then Mr. Lees took the case and its direction away from him. Mr. Lees forced Dr. Lamb on the witness stand, and then it developed that Mattheson's relatives, with Harry's assistance, had already driven Dr. Lamb to sign his release some months ago, but the doctor had never admitted this to the unfortunate man or his relatives.

"MRS. MARY C. THAW."

Dr. Lamb refused all along to discharge Mattheson even in the face of the order from Justice Goff, and even on Saturday he called to his assistance a deputy from the Attorney General's office. When Justice Morschauser announced that he would grant Mattheson's discharge, Dr. Lamb pleaded that he had not obeyed Justice Goff's order because he thought Mattheson had no home, and he did not wish to turn him loose when he had no place to go.

Justice Morschauser brushed aside this plea, saying that the original order must have been obtained by persons who would be responsible for the man's care. Between the time of the original order and Saturday's release Norman A. Lees, sponsor for Mattheson, examined Harry Thaw and other asylum inmates in the belief that he would have a fight to get his man out, and would need their testimony. Mr. Lees informed Justice Morschauser that Mattheson had friends in West New York, N. J., who would care for him.

Shortly after being taken to the asylum Mattheson became rational, and for a long time he served as trusty in one of the dormitories. Mr. Lees, who moved in his behalf, was himself at one time an inmate of the asylum. He has obtained writs for several patients there, and secured their release through the courts as cured. When Mattheson, who is 56 years old and well preserved, left the hospital he said:

"I feel as if I had stepped from hell into heaven."

Thaw became greatly excited over the news of the release. He said that he hopes to get his fredom by the same means.

BOY STABBED IN STREET.

Police Get Two Other Boys Who Held Him, but the Stabber Escaped.

Policeman McGrade of the East 104th Street Station saw two boys knock a third boy down and hold him on the pavement at 102d Street and Madison Avenue last night, while another lad bent over the one on the ground. He ran toward the group, and captured the pair who were holding the youth on the sidewalk. The third boy made off.

The boy on the ground was bleeding from the right wrist, and told the policeman that after the two boys had knocked him down and held him, the third had stabbed him with a penknife. McGrade took the three to the station, where Dr. Baker of the Harlem Hospital dressed the boy's wrist. He said he was Israel Gordon, 19 years old, of 51 East Ninety-eighth Street. The prisoners, each 16 years old, said they were David Epstein of 1,513 Madison Avenue, and Abraham Steinberg of 73 East 103d Street. Both said they did not know the boy who did the stabbing.

Gordon said the boys had accosted him as he passed the corner with two girls. He took the girls to their homes, and was returning when the three attacked him.

SWEEPERS WANT WHITE HATS

Tell Edwards That Their Helmets Are Too Heavy for Summer Work.

Though the weather is not now summery the sweepers of the Street Cleaning Department are out with the yearly complaint that their helmets are too heavy for the Summer season.

A committee representing various unions has called on Commissioner Edwards on behalf of the sweepers with the suggestion that lighter hats would be acceptable to them for the Summer, but nothing has come of the request so far, and a letter will be sent to the Commissioner repeating the request. The sweepers want white hats for the Summer. These, they say, would be in conformity with their white uniforms and besides would be cooler than hats of a dark color.

FAST LINERS FOR CANAL.

American-Hawaiian Company Plans a Service to New York.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 9.—An expenditure of $6,000,000 for four twenty-knot turbine passenger steamers to be operated between Northern ports—San Francisco and San Pedro on this coast, and New York—is to be made before the Panama Canal is opened, by the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, according to a statement of George S. Dearborne, President of the company, whose head offices are in New York. A fortnightly service will be established, the ships going directly to New York without any calls after leaving San Pedro except the necessary stop at the canal. As soon as the trade demands more steamers will be put on, and the sailings will be increased to one a week.

Information to this effect has been received by H. P. Durdan, Southern California agent for the American-Hawaiian Company, in a letter from Mr. Dearborne, who recently reached New York after an extended trip of inspection all along the west coast of America. It is said that the move of the company to go into the passenger business is a direct result of Mr. Dearborne's trip.

An extraordinary sale of Men's Custom-made shirts whose regular values are 3.00, 3.50, 4.00 and 4.50

Now 1.85

¶ Until a few weeks ago we operated, in conjunction with our ready-for-service shirt department, a Custom Shirt Shop. It was just as good as a Custom Shirt Shop need be. It made splendid custom shirts.

¶ But we do not believe it made better shirts than those supplied us by the best shirt manufacturers. It was not in a position to give our patrons better values than our ready-for-service department gives. It had, therefore, survived its usefulness and is now discontinued.

¶ But meanwhile, our Spring importations of piece goods were waiting patiently to be tailored into shirts. Our shelves were freighted with the finest fabrics that the looms of the world can produce. And as we surveyed that wonderful array of Spring shirtings, we had an inspiration.

¶ We decided to make the closing of our Custom Shirt Shop a gala event—to make its end as auspicious as its beginning—in short, to enliven the ceremonies with a festive offering of Custom-made shirts at One-Dollar-Eighty-Five! Verily, it is an ill wind that blows nobody any good.

¶ Our entire stock of custom shirtings for Spring, including English, Scotch, French and Austrian madras, in an endless variety of colorings and designs, has been made up into custom shirts. The models include six styles of plaited shirts, also plain bosom and soft shirts (some with double cuffs,) in all sizes and sleeve lengths. A practically limitless variety.

¶ There are 7,200 shirts in this wonderful assortment, which have hitherto sold for 3.00 or 3.50 or 4.00 or 4.50. Such were their values yesterday. Such are still their values to-day. But their prices speak as one! For expediency has writ in a bold, relentless hand—

One-dollar-eighty-five apiece!

The ceremonies will begin this morning at 8.30 sharp, and will continue for several days until every custom shirt has found the repose of an appreciative bosom

LION'S MOUTH USED AT VITERBO TRIAL

How Anonymous Letters Are Made to Assist the Interrogations Now Going On.

STRANGE CASE OF A LAWYER

Signor Fava, Who Was Expected to Accuse de Angelis and Amedeo, Identifies Morra and Others.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VITERBO, March 31.—In the old days, when Venice flourished under the Doges, there was at the top of the Giants' Stairway, just at the entrance to the antechamber of the Council of Ten, a curious letter box, shaped like a lion's head, and into its mouth were put anonymous communications denouncing this or that person of treason. To-day "The Lion's Mouth"—La Bocca del Leone—has become a synonym for anonymous accusations.

Owing to their methods of interrogating accused persons, the Italian authorities pay more attention to anonymous communications than is paid elsewhere. This is a direct result from the difficulty of securing witnesses for the State in great criminal trials and of making them speak when secured. They prefer that the source of their evidence should not be known on account of the often fatal consequences to the candid witness. Thus the experience of centuries has developed in the Italian judicial mind a keen sense of judging the contents of the Lion's Mouth.

From the very beginning of the Cuocolo affair the Lion's Mouth at Naples and later at Viterbo has been stuffed full. These communications began to arrive with the arrest of the Mimi a Mare supper party—the two Alfanos, Ibelli, and Rapi—developed through their incarceration, June 9 to July 17, 1906, and reached a climax on the arrest of Amedeo and de Angelis, the ex-convicts accused through Ascrittore by the priest Vitozi, in order to free Alfano and his friends.

With the letters describing the reputable characters of Alfano and others and threatening the examining Magistrate and the heads of the Questura, or local department of the National police, with all sorts of terrible calamities unless the prisoners were released, were others offering evidence to show that they were guilty. The same was true in regard to Amedeo and de Angelis. Aside from the moral and political influence brought to bear in the early stages of the case, Alfano and his friends were released and Amedeo and de Angelis held solely on the contents of the Lion's Mouth.

Many of the letters received at that time, which were taken possession of by Capt. Fabroni and turned over for investigation to Maresciallo Capizzuti, were of the utmost importance to the latter in securing the confession from Gennaro Abbatemaggio. They enabled the Carabiniere to assume a knowledge which mystified and then overwhelmed the young Camorrista. Some of these letters, while confirming his confession, offer the means of destroying the alibis put forward by the accused men for two specific occasions—May 26, 1906, when the Court of the Camorra, at which the Cuocolos were condemned, was held at the Aida Tavern in Bagnoli, and June 5, on the night of which the Cuocolos were murdered.

For example, in his confession Abbatemaggio gave a list of the Camorristi present at Bagnoli. Each one when interrogated denied this; some even declared that they had never been in Bagnoli, which is about five miles from Naples. One of these was Luigi Fucci. A few days later a letter was received, which contained the following passage:

> Luigi Fucci was there. Say to him that he sat at the table between Ciro Abbatemaggio, (a cousin of Gennaro Abbatemaggio,) and Carlo di Mella; say that in passing to him a glass di Mella broke it and cut his finger, and that he left the place with Erricone (Enrico Alfano) and took the same car to Naples.

So Fucci was again interrogated, and after recalling the episode of the broken glass said:

> It was on March 26, and not May 26, 1906, nor was it at the Trattoria Ida, but the Trattoria Coppola. I was there with Enrico Alfano and other individuals "a fare una gozzoviglia," ("to have a merry feast,") but no Camorra decisions took place. I am the chief of the Camorristi of the Reclusorio quarter, but I cannot say who the others were, for I do not know. About 8:30 P. M. I was in the Piazza san Ferdinando, Naples, in the same car with Enrico Alfano, but I do not remember the others. Erricone may have left the car at that place and the others went on home.

To-day, (March 31,) while being interrogated by President Bianchi at the Assizes, Alfano admitted having been present at the Aida Tavern on May 26, 1906, but added, with a reassuring glance at his fellow-prisoners, that it was only "un innocente pic-nic."

Long before Abbatemaggio made his confession, Capizzuti had heard from various sources of the nature of the Bagnoli affair, and was able to check the names of those present when the informer gave them to him.

The court at Viterbo has also been able to force Corrado Sortino, accused of aiding in Cuocolo's murder, and, with Giuseppe Salvi, of having slain his wife, to admit the futility of his alibi, solely on the evidence of the contents of the Lion's Mouth. Sortino's alibi was of the strongest, for it was backed up by the testimony of the police, who were supposed to have him under surveillance at the time. Still, when Sortino found that he was being pressed to admit the physical impossibility of being in two places at the same time, he declared that he had been released from surveillance by the intervention of a Minister of State whom he had shaved. This admission has brought a direct denial from the police, but also the admission that on June 5, 1906, he may have escaped their watchfulness.

Frequently a would-be informer, particularly if he has no criminal associations, will get a friend to communicate with the Lion's Mouth, not caring to take the initiative himself. This may or may not have been the case of Alfredo Fava, a respectable lawyer of Naples. A letter in regard to him reads as follows:

> On the evening of the Cuocolo crime, toward 21 o'clock (9 P. M.) at San Giovanni a Teduccio Advocate Alfredo Fava saw a carriage stop near a shop and three men descend dressed like sailors. His attention was especially arrested by the face of the one on the left, who had a flattened nose (il naso camuso.) The impression made on Fava was so deep that he retained the appearance of these types in his memory.
>
> In reading the papers the day after the crime Fava could not do otherwise than connect the three unknown men with the Cuocolo crime.
>
> Four years went by (June, 1906—August, 1910) and on Aug. 23 last Avvocato Fava was at the Naples Assizes in the case of d'Azio, Torquato and others charged with making counterfeit money. And he told the police agent Ippolito (of the Questura not the Carabinieri) what he remembered.
>
> The next day Ippolito brought photographs of de Angelis and Amedeo and showed them to Fava, who exclaimed:
>
> "Per dio, son proprio quelli," ("Dear me, they are those fellows.")
>
> There was present at that time Avvocato Fausto Mascavo.

Naturally Fava, Ippolito, and Mascavo were summoned before a Magistrate and interrogated. Ippolito and Mascavo bore witness to Fava's indentification; but Fava, when pressed, would not positively swear that the men he saw in the carriage were sailors; nor, when he came to think of it was he certain that one of them had a flat nose—still there was something peculiar about his face.

There was present at this interrogation the mysterious taciturn clerk from the Ministry of Justice in Rome, who at this time (August, 1910) had become an unbearable nuisance to the judiciary of Naples. This, of course, was Capt. Fabroni of the Carabinieri, who at another time and place interrogated Fava, and Fava spoke more freely.

Under the persuasive Captain, the "naso camuso" became a "sfregio" or scar—in fact two of them—and Fava's memory was still further refreshed so that he had no difficulty in identifying Nicola Morra, Corrado Sortino, and Mariano as the occupants of the carriage, thus confirming Abbatemaggio's confession on a certain point and destroying the alibis of the three Camorristi, if nothing more.

These examples will show the reader how the anonymous contents of the Lion's Mouth are made to serve the ends of justice in modern Italy. They also throw a side light on the methods of detection employed by the Carabiniere detectives, Fabroni, Farris, and Capizzuti.

NOT AIDING THE CAMORRISTS.

Buffalo Police Fail to Find Evidence of a Defense Fund There.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 9.—Agents acting under direction of Chief of Police Michael Regan have been trying for several days to contribute to a fund which it was reported was being raised for the defense of the Camorrists on trial at Viterbo. They met with no success.

"If Buffalo Italians have contributed to the defense of the Camorrists under threats of death I have been unable to learn of it," said Chief Regan to-night. "One of our detectives familiar with the Italian colony investigated the situation thoroughly in an effort to learn if Buffalo Italians were being mulcted. He could find no evidence of anything of the sort."

WANT BEER AT CORNELL.

Seniors Ought to be Trusted to Keep Sober, Says The Era.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 9.—The current number of The Cornell Era registers a protest against dry senior banquets, and urges the committee in charge of the last celebration of the senior class to provide enough beer to go around several times. The article says:

> One hopes that the committee in charge may avoid the mistake of last year, when the banquet closely resembled the social gathering of the W. C. T. U. It is indeed a sad commentary on the self-control of the members of the Senior Class when they are not trusted to keep sober for an evening unless prevented from getting something to drink.
>
> Include beer in the menu. Not as much as each man can drink, but enough to go around several times. We would like to see a successful senior banquet and not one attended by a very small percentage of the members of the class as was the case when the banquet was dry last year.

The Era admits that in the old days there was need for reform, but says that the percentage of students who now drink with regularity is so small as to be almost negligible.

TOKIO'S YOSHIWARI DESTROYED BY FIRE

6,000 Women Made Homeless and 5,000 Houses Reduced to Ruins.

FOUR SQUARE MILES BURNED

Flames Extend to Residential Section—Troops on Guard—Other Disastrous Japanese Fires.

TOKIO, April 9.—The Yoshiwari, the principal quarter of Tokio inhabited by the licensed hetairae, was destroyed by fire to-day. Many of the houses were almost palatial in appearance, and a thousand of them were burned in a little more than three hours. Six thousand women inmates were made homeless.

The Yoshiwari is conducted under Government licenses, which provide for the establishment of hospitals, and several of these institutions also were burned. The fire, which began at 11:30 o'clock in the morning, spread over a vast area. It was fanned by a strong southern wind, and the flames were swept to the surrounding structures to the north. Altogether it is estimated that 5,000 houses are in ruins, covering an area approximating four square miles.

A large number of women were severely injured, but so far as is known no deaths have occurred. Five hundred troops are guarding the territory to-night. It is impossible at present to estimate the total loss.

The Yoshiwari lies about a mile to the north of Asakusa Park. The district presented a spectacle probably unparalleled in any other country, but reproduced on a smaller scale in the provincial Japanese cities, with its gorgeous structures, guarded by iron bars, directly on the street line, and its thousands of gaily dressed residents.

This whole quarter was under special municipal surveillance, with the result that at all times perfect order prevailed, enabling strangers to observe, while walking through the streets, the manner in which the Japanese have solved, in their own manner, one of the vexed questions of all ages.

The district to the north was occupied largely by small and flimsy dwelling places and many tea houses.

In recent years several very serious fires have occurred in Japan. In August, 1907, a conflagration at Hakodate destroyed 1,300 houses, with an estimated loss of about $15,000,000. In March of the following year fire at Noda Soy, near Tokio, destroyed 400 houses, the damage being $2,500,000, and a few days later 4,000 houses were burned at Niigata.

In August, 1909, a terrible conflagration reduced to ashes a large part of the City of Osaka. The official report placed the number of dwellings destroyed at more than 11,000. These included ten business blocks and twenty temples. The most destructive fire last year was at Wajima, 1,808 buildings being burned.

AUBE VINTNERS PROTEST.

20,000 Object to Chamber's Proposal to Modify Their Champagne Label.

TROIS, France, April 9.—Some 20,000 wine growers in the Department of Aube held a demonstration to-day to protest against the report of the Committee on Agriculture of the Chamber of Deputies, which recommends that the law of delimitation with reference to the champagne region be modified so as to permit wines made in Aube to be labeled "champagne," but with the sub-title "made from grapes grown in Aube."

The demonstration was orderly. Many of those who took part in it came twenty or thirty miles on foot to record their opposition and to hear the speeches of the leaders. At nightfall all dispersed to their homes. The statement is made that the wine growers will never agree to adopt the sub-title as suggested, but will fight until they obtain the right to have their wine legally called champagne, as always in the past.

BUSY SUMMER FOR THE KING.

Many Ceremonies After Coronation Will Engage George V. and Queen.

LONDON, April 9.—Though few outside official circles will obtain a glimpse of the coronation of King George in Westminster Abbey, for which thousands are already arriving from America, there will be many opportunities in the course of the Summer of seeing the royal couple and witnessing ceremonies only a little less interesting. Five times in May and June their Majesties will drive through the streets of London. On May 12 they go to the Crystal Palace to open the Festival of Empire; on June 22 there is the coronation procession; on the day following the royal progress through London, when several miles of streets will be traversed; on June 29 the visit to the Guildhall and the return through North London, and on June 30 a second drive to the Crystal Palace, where the King and Queen are giving a coronation fête for 100,000 children from the elementary schools of London.

On May 16 the Queen Victoria Memorial will be unveiled, and the German Emperor and Empress will attend. The following evening a gala performance will be given at Drury Lane in honor of the German sovereigns. During the coronation week there will be gala performances at both Covent Garden Opera House and His Majesty's Theatre.

PRESSES CALENDAR REFORM.

Swiss Government Gives Notice That It Will Call a Conference.

BOSTON, April 9.—Notice that the Swiss Government is intending soon to call an international conference for the purpose of reforming the calendar and establishing a fixed international date for Easter has been received by the Boston Chamber of Commerce. The announcement came from the Permanent Bureau of the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce, with headquarters at Brussels, Belgium.

The matter of establishing a fixed international calendar has been brought before the last two biennial sessions of the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce and, it is expected, will come before that body in the Summer of 1912 when, for the first time, the congress will meet in America, at Boston. It is pointed out by the supporters of the reformed calendar idea that owing to the differences between the calendars of the Greek Church and the Gregorian calendar, which is adopted by practically all other Christian peoples, commercial intercourse is handicapped and the exchange of commercial paper becomes complicated. The unification of the Gregorian calendar is desired by the supporters of the plan. At the present time there is a difference of thirteen days between the Julian and Gregorian calendars.

BROUGHT BACK A FUGITIVE.

John Hartman, Accused of a "Wire-Tapping" Swindle, Here for Trial.

A man described by the police as John Hartman, a salesman, formerly living at 215 West 108th Street, was brought to this city from Baltimore, Md., last night by Detective Campbell of the Central Office, and locked up in Police Headquarters on the charge of grand larceny. According to the Police Department, Hartman jumped $5,000 bail in this city in June last, after he had been accused of engineering a "wire-tapping" scheme in which a baker from Harrisburg, Penn., was induced to invest $12,000 in "stocks."

SETTLE TURKISH NAVY AWARD

Chamber Confirms Acceptance of Armstrong Contract for New Vessels.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 9.—The Chamber adopted a motion to-day by a vote of 115 to 40, confirming the Government's action in awarding the contract for the vessels of the new Turkish Navy, consisting of three battleships of 16,500 tons each and several smaller craft, to Armstrong, Whitworth & Co., Limited, of London. The commission, which was appointed to investigate the complaint of the Palmers Shipbuilding and Iron Company of London and the Bethlehem Steel Company, that their joint tender, although the lowest, was not considered, reported that it was unable to reach a decision, as the Minister of Marine declined to supply the commission with the papers connected with the case.

The contract for the construction of Turkish warships was awarded to Armstrong, Whitworth & Co. on April 5. The original tender of this firm was $425 per ton, and they received the contract only upon reducing their price to $400, the figure submitted by the Palmers Company in conjunction with the Bethlehem Steel Company. Under the latter tender the warships would have been built in England with American armor and guns.

PRINCESS'S MURDER WILLFUL

Prosecutor Finds Baron Deliberately Killed Queen Elena's Lady-in-Waiting.

ROME, April 9.—The Crown Prosecutor has drawn up a report embodying the results of the investigation into the killing of Princess Giulia Trigona di Sant' Elia, lady-in-waiting to Queen Helena, by Lieut. Baron Paterno. The conclusion of the prosecutor is that Paterno is guilty of premeditated homicide. He dismisses the defense, based on Paterno's assertion that he committed the crime because of jealousy, in the belief that the Princess was about to leave him for another friend, Signor Serrao. This plea the Crown Prosecutor considers absurd, as, on the eve of the crime, Paterno wrote to Serrao in very cordial terms with reference to the Princess.

The prosecutor argues that the crime was due to the decision of Princess Trigona to abandon Paterno and to the fact that Paterno was angered at losing $4,000 which he expected to receive from her to pay his most urgent debts.

Finally, the prosecutor doubts the sincerity of the attempt of Paterno to commit suicide, expressing the belief that he wounded himself merely to influence public opinion.

The Choir Invisible

The Anthems of Easter, the Old Songs and the New Ones, the Music of the Masters as the Masters Played It, Are Brought Into Every Home by the

Sterling Playerpiano

It fills the house with music and the child with inspiration—an instrument in the possession of which the wife, the daughter and the mother feel justifiable pride. The Sterling—all built in the Sterling Piano factory—measures the fulness of artistic value. It errs neither on the side of too much nor too little—isn't an impossible musical instrument attempting to do the work of a whole orchestra, nor simply a player fitted inside of any piano.

The Sterling Playerpiano was built around the central idea of furnishing the complete piano—a player that is an integral part of the sweetest toned, most thoroughly built and durable piano in the world at its price. And the player is built by us, as thoroughly as the Sterling piano itself—bringing out its sweetness of tone and correctness of expression.

It isn't cheap, but it is moderate in price—$400 less than some with which it ranks. Its presence in the household is a recognized mark of musical appreciation—a source of competent and inspiring instruction to the children of the family. It is at the same time a piano to be played by hand, with no consciousness of the presence of the player.

Open Saturday evenings for the convenience of our customers.

Monthly payments are accepted when desired.

DENOUNCES COURT'S ATTACK ON MEDIUMS

Dr. Warne Declares Magistrate Kempner Would Not Dare Criticise Catholics.

MANY SPIRIT MESSAGES

Lincoln's Spirit Is on Their Side, Woman Asserts at Spiritualist Convention—Girl Medium Gives a Seance.

Chief Magistrate Kempner of Brooklyn was denounced yesterday at a convention of the First German Spiritualist Church in the hall of the Stephen Merritt Building, Eighth Avenue and Nineteenth Street, for his treatment of Spiritualistic mediums. Dr. George B. Warne of Washington, President of the National Spiritualists' Association, declared that Magistrate Kempner was a mere puppet politician, and that he had dared to do what not even the Supreme Court of the United States would do, to declare what a man's religion should be. At the conclusion of his address, while messages from the spirits were being delivered, a woman declared excitedly that she could see the spirit of Abraham Lincoln, and hear him declare he was on the Spiritualists' side.

"If Chief Magistrate Kempner is correctly quoted," declared Dr. Warne, "he has stated that our ministers should not receive justice in his court. This political puppet, of whom no man has ever heard, this Justice of the Peace, as we should call him in the rural districts—we would not dignify him by the name of Judge—has done that which the Supreme Court would never do. That court would never dare to say that Roman Catholicism or Methodism or any other ism alone was right.

"I want to tell all the biggest politicians from Mayor Gaynor and Charles Francis Murphy downward that Spiritualism is just as dear to us as Roman Catholicism is to most of the Magistrates and Methodism or other religion is to the minority."

Dr. Warne then testified to the marvelous fashion in which two mediums, one in Mount Vernon and another in Washington, had foretold to him truly that he would receive from an unexpected quarter a large gift of money for the good of the cause, and urged that it was the duty of Spiritualists to help the public distinguish between true mediums and "arrogant advertising fakers."

He explained that there were three classes of mediums, who could lawfully pursue their vocation: First, the regularly ordained ministers of a Spiritualistic church, who could perform any act legal for any other minister; Second, licentiates; third, associate mediums. These, according to the regulations of the National Spiritualists' Association, are "psychics and mediums, through whom physical phenomena can be produced and test and message mediums, who depend solely upon séances, circles and private readings for a livelihood, who are members in good standing of some auxiliary society or church, and are known to possess psychical powers of a genuine and edifying nature."

Such persons, Dr. Warne declared, undoubtedly could pursue legally their calling, and would be defended in case of prosecution by the State and National Spiritualists' Association. He denounced a bill now before the Legislature making it illegal for a medium to receive any salary, fee, or compensation, and declared that as no court had the right to say how a Roman Catholic priest should be paid, it could not interfere with the medium's income. He concluded by comparing the mediums to the "prophets" and to Christ speaking to the woman of Samaria.

A demonstration of spirit messages was then given by Frank Montsko, President of the First German Spiritualist Church. Standing on dais he announced that an elderly man wanted to reach his daughter.

"He wants to tell her not to worry. He's behind the lady with the apple blossoms. Right behind the lady with the white feathers. I do believe he's going to the lady with the baby."

The baby whimpered a bit and its mother looked a little startled.

"You've been worrying about your material condition," went on the medium. "And you didn't expect to come here this afternoon, and your husband quite agrees with you about the trouble. Is that not so?"

The mother smiled, and Mr. Montsko contiunued:

"Well, it's all right. You're not to worry. It'll all come right, and he sends you his love."

Next a spirit named Mike wanted to be heard. The medium found it a trifle hard to locate Mike's friend, but at last another woman said she knew Mike.

"Now, didn't you tell people you wanted to come here this afternoon? You didn't say so, but perhaps you thought it. That's just the same, of course."

The audience laughed, and Mike's friend received word that Mike would help her in her business affairs, and that her mother was well and would help her when she could.

Others received messages of much the same nature. Invariably somebody called by their first name was trying to talk to them, and always they were recognized after a moment's hesitation by the person the medium pointed out. William or Nicholas or Charlie agreed with exactly what they were doing in their trouble, and sent his love or blessing.

One spirit sent one of the roses on the platform to a German woman, and after the human donor had given assent to the spirit's wishes being carried out, it was handed over. None who were thus favored seemed to take it as unusual, and they received their communications from the departed with serene composure.

After Mr. Montsko had delivered a dozen messages, Miss Olga Neidlinger of Albany, a girl about fifteen years of age, took his place on the platform. She passed her hands across her forehead and began to send out messages similar to Mr. Montsko's except that she was more particular about the clothes in which the spirits were garbed, describing them with some accuracy. She also received a message from an Indian who, she said, wore a feather head-dress reaching to the ground, and who prefaced his remarks with the statement that:

"Indian brings good medicine."

Miss Neidlinger regretted that her control was not as ready to respond to calls on Sunday as on other days, but declared that she would try to give from him an address on any subject selected. Some one thought music would do, and she then said he wished to inform the audience that music was elevating in its character and refined the soul. Then she drifted into a defense of spiritualism.

As she stroked her hands once more across her forehead and returned to her seat Dr. Richard Schleusner explained to the uninitiated that she had been in a trance and knew of none of the things she had spoken. Dr. Schluesner was ordained pastor of the church at the evening session.

HOME FOR JEWISH MOTHERS AND BABIES

Retreat Where Wayward Girls Are Taught Useful and Better Lives Is Dedicated.

J. H. SCHIFF CHIEF SPEAKER

Praises Work of Council of Jewish Women Which Founded Lakeview Home—$12,000 Mortgage Soon Lifted.

The Lakeview Home, at Arrochar, S. I., which was founded by the New York Section of the Council of Jewish Women, was dedicated yesterday. It is the first permanent home for Jewish unmarried mothers and their infants in New York City. The home will be under the supervision of the New York Board of Charities, but will be maintained and superintended by the Council of Jewish Women with the aid of private subscriptions. Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff, it was announced yesterday, was the largest single contributor.

Plans for a home of this kind were started in 1905. Temporary quarters were provided at Rosebank, S. I., and the success of the experiment was so pronounced, according to Miss Sadie American of 448 Central Park West, President of the council, that 75 per cent. of the 150 young mothers who had been taken care of since that time were led into a new way of life. Several of them got married. Of the 150 babies cared for only three died. A letter from one of the "graduate" mothers was read by Miss American at the dedication services.

The new home stands on the old Wallace McFarland estate, near Fingerboard Road. Just across from it, on a sloping hill, stands the famous "house of a hundred rooms," now owned by David Milligan. On the other side, overlooking the bay, is the old Townsend mansion, now owned by Mrs. L. Gunst MacDermott. These two mansions were built about eighty years ago, and their Revolutionary type of achitecture stands in odd contrast to the modern red stone and brick building to be occupied by the Lakeview Home. The home has a frontage of 72 feet, is 61 feet in width, and the approach from the road is through a densely wooded driveway. It is three stories high and is equipped most modernly.

It was the opinion of the founders that every girl who comes to this home—only first offenders are taken—should not only be taught to live a better life, but should be trained with the view of being able to support herself and child and to be more certain of successfully obtaining beter-paid employment, to meet her added responsibility. To this end the home is equipped with a system of teaching in general housework, laundry work, cutting out dresses and undergarments for themselves and the children, and, if capability is developed by any of the girls, the teaching is adapted to her particular needs.

When a mother and infant are brought into the home they are put under the care of a physician, who prescribes the nature of work for which her health and strength fit her. Each mother must then take care of her own child, being assigned to a special room, built on the modern dormitory plan. Mother and child are kept there indeterminately, and are not allowed to leave until ample preparations have been made for the future of both. This thoroughness of attention, Miss American said yesterday, was responsible for the good record of the last six years. The new home is equipped with twenty-six individual dormitory rooms, aside from the workrooms and kitchen.

Jacob H. Schiff was the principal speaker at the dedication services. He referred to the work of the Council of Jewish Women as "the labor of love." "The Jewish religion," he said, "is simply a law of life. It does not require a temple or synagogue to do God's work. It is preached wherever labor of love is accomplished, and if that work is done here, then this will be a temple of God."

Other speakers were Theodore A. Mayer, the architect, who, it was said, did all of the work on the building without profit; Mrs. Joseph Proskauer, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the council; Justice Samuel Greenbaum, President of the Council of Communal Institutions, and Robert W. Hebberd, Secretary of the New York State Board of Charities.

Letters from John D. Rockefeller and Isaac Seligman, the latter with a check for $100 inclosed, were read. Several thousand dollars were contributed during the day, and at the close of the services it was announced that a twelve-thousand-dollar mortgage on the home would probably be lifted by the end of the week. The home, complete, cost $40,000.

NEW SYNAGOGUE DEDICATED.

Prominent Rabbis Join in Services of Congregation Pincus Elijah.

The new synagogue of the Congregation Pincus Elijah, at 118 West Ninety-fifth Street, was opened yesterday with impressive dedicatory ceremonies, in which prominent rabbis took part. There were few vacant seats in the temple, and in the course of the afternoon many persons came and went to look the new synagogue over.

The synagogue was formally opened by Richard Smith, a merchant. The Rev. Dr. Philip Klein made the opening prayer, and addresses followed by the Rev. Dr. Judah Magnes, the Rev. Dr. Philip Klein, the Rev. Dr. Davidson, the Rev. Dr. Abraham Koplowitz, the Rev. Mr. Cohen, the Rev. Dr. Margolis, and Judge Otto A. Rosalsky. Isaac Herman, who worked hard for the establishment of the new synagogue, was presented with a silver loving cup by the congregation, and Moritz Arnstein, his co-worker, with a gold medal.

The Congregation of Pincus Elijah had its beginning four years ago in a small hall in West 100th Street. It outgrew the hall and moved into a house at 148 West Ninety-ninth Street. The cornerstone of the new synagogue was laid last Fall. The new synagogue cost $40,000, and will seat 600. The congregation now has a paid membership of sixty. A rabbi will soon be called to the new synagogue.

This Great and Significant Truth

Is a place good enough for these firms to LEASE good enough for you to INVESTIGATE?

These buildings are built of reinforced concrete and are absolutely fireproof. They are equipped with an $800,000 sprinkler system.

They are 75 feet wide and 700 feet long. They are practically walled with glass and far lighter in the center of their floors than are many New York buildings immediately by their windows. They give any desired combination of space from 5,800 sq. ft. to 108,000 sq. ft., on one floor.

The directory of each of our Model Loft Buildings shows the names of from fifteen to twenty standard concerns. The space they occupy ranges from 10,000 sq. ft. to 110,000 sq. ft. A very, very few occupy only 5,800 sq. ft.

These concerns range through almost every line of merchandise. There are about sixty manufacturing concerns and over sixty wholesalers who have factories, stockrooms, distributing centers and shipping rooms in these six buildings shown above. Over four thousand of the Nation's standard merchants use the Bush Terminal.

No matter what your business is, we have one of your big competitors, or a concern doing a business very similar to yours, in our Model Loft Buildings. In some cases we have four or five very well known concerns in the same line.

Do you want to have one of your competitors save $10,000.00 yearly on cartage which YOU DON'T SAVE? You know the freight car of every line comes to the door of every building at the Bush Terminal.

Do you want one of your competitors to save $3,000.00 to $10,000.00 on insurance which YOU DON'T SAVE? You know his rate at the Bush Terminal is 10 cents or 20 cents, while your rate is $1.85 or $2.25 or $3.50 or even $4.00 per hundred dollars.

Do you want your competitor to save $2,000 to $4,000 yearly on power at the Bush Terminal which YOU DON'T SAVE? You know the rate for electric power with us is 2½ cents per horse power hour, while you pay 10 cents. You know our rate for steam is one cent per horse power hour, while yours is 3 cents.

Do you want your competitor to save $5,000 to $10,000 on labor which the Bush Terminal PERFORMS for its tenants and the charges of which its facilities eliminate for its tenants, while YOU HAVE TO PAY for this labor NOW?

Do you want your competitor to make other savings on rent, floor space, light, heat—a total saving of $20,000 yearly or $40,000 yearly?

You wouldn't like your competitor to beat you out on getting a $300,000 piece of business—gilt edged, sure credit, net cash business, would you?

You would travel to Chicago, to San Francisco, to Europe, to get the business, wouldn't you?

You would send your sales manager and your best salesmen off for a two months' trip to land this business, wouldn't you? Well, $300,000 of new business is only equivalent to the saving we make every year to competitors of yours or to concerns who operate exactly as you operate in a very similar line of business.

You don't have to go to Chicago, to Frisco, to Europe. All you have to do is to write and ask us "HOW?"

Don't you want to have us send you reproductions of letters from three buildings full of our tenants, showing just HOW we save them money and WHY we save them money? Don't you want to learn WHY the other fellow can undersell you and get an idea of just how much he can undersell you and still make money? Then write and ask us "HOW?"

FILLED CHURCH SAYS GOOD-BYE TO AKED

Retiring Pastor Thanks Fifth Avenue Congregation for $2,500 Farewell Gift.

HE STARTS WEST TO-DAY

In Last Sermon He Tells of "Brutal Misrepresentations" to Which a Pastor Is Subject.

The Rev. Charles F. Aked of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church preached his farewell sermon there yesterday. To-day Mr. Aked and his family leave for San Francisco, where he is to become pastor of the First Congregational Church. Several hundred persons who could not find even standing room were turned away from the church. After the services the clergyman shook hands with many of his congregation, who wished him good luck in his new undertaking.

In the church Calendar was the following, entitled "Farewell":

> The last words I write for this Calendar must be words of heartfelt gratitude.
>
> We leave for San Francisco to-morrow afternoon. The thoughtful kindness of the members of this church is continued to the very end of our official relations—and beyond. For my good friend Mr. Lovett, one of our Trustees, President of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific Railways, has placed his private car at our service for the whole of the journey, and we shall make the trip across the continent without a change and in conditions of the greatest luxury.
>
> Mrs. Aked carries away with her memories, the sweetest and profoundest, of the affection bestowed on her by the women of the congregation. Such memories never die, nor does such affection ever pass out of the life. She has tried to thank personally the givers of the rich gifts she has received during the last few days, but there are no words with which to thank those whose love has made four years of her life beautiful.
>
> And for myself, I do not know how to express my appreciation of the amazingly generous present made to me last Friday. A committee brought to me on behalf of members of the church and congregation a check for $2,500. My surprise was, and is, unspeakable. I have no claim to such generosity. I have done nothing to merit it. And this kindness will remain with me as a wonderful demonstration of your regard.
>
> In a sermon included in my volume "The Courage of the Coward," but never preached to you, I spoke of the shameless ingratitude which the physician so often meets in this world. I should not like to come under the lash of my own condemnation. There is one man in our church to whose rare skill and unfailing devotion I have twice owed my life, and to whose unremitting care I owe, under God's blessing, the magnificent health which I now enjoy. If the man who keeps you alive and sets you on your feet better physically, intellectually, and morally than ever you were before is entitled to any word of gratitude, what am I to say to my physician, Dr. A. R. McMichael? Dear miracle-worker, before whose strong face typhoid slinks away ashamed, God bless you, and the like of you, forever!
>
> I cannot thank each one of you in this way, you who have loved me so well and done so much for me. May God's richest blessing be with you all, dearest of friends!
>
> Ever affectionately yours,
>
> CHARLES F. AKED.

Dr. Aked's sermon was entitled "Ships That Pass in the Night," and he said, in part:

"Men have dared to dream of war—war between the American and British branches of our English stock, war in which pain would be endured to agony and blood shed in rivers. They have dreamed that brothers in speech and in spirit may look into each other's faces through the smoke of battle, while the hate of nations affronts the very heavens. Let us dream of peace. Let us dream, with Mr. Taft, of a treaty making for international brotherhood. Let us dream wth Andrew Carnegie the biggest, bravest, boldest dream that moral man has dared to dream—let us dream of the federatiton of the English-speaking peoples of the earth!

"Our gospel is peace among the Churches—is a gospel, that is to say, of spiritual unity. The American is the product of absorption, and America is not so much a term of greography as of human spirit. This country takes of the restless, the aspiring, the ambitious, the young of every nation. It absorbs Teuton, Celt, Scandinavian, Slav; and it produces, not an Englishman with a dash of the German in him, nor a Dutchman with traces of the Italian in his blood, nor some other peculiar person of that character; but America takes them all, and with her climate, her institutions, her life, that for which you have no name but 'America' produces the American, a new person upon the face of the earth.

"And so I conceive of the Church of the future, taking from all the Churches, absorbing the best for which all the Churches have always stood, losing nothing that has been worth retaining, and doing in her sphere in America what America does in her own. As America has not in producing the American lost that which is best in the Englishman or the German or the Hollander, so the Church will not willingly lose the Episcopalian's reverence for order, the Presbyterian's demand for accuracy, the fire and fervor of the Methodist, or the contribution of the Congregationalist and Baptist to civil and religious liberty. And the product will be, not an Episcopalian Baptist, or a Presbyterian Methodist, but a Christian, without adjectives and without limitations, heir of all the Churches in the foremost files of time.

"I have dared to dream of some great temple of the Living God in this City of New York, and in many a great American city, wherein shall gather for worship all good men and good women who desire only to worship in spirit and in truth. It shall not be Protestant or Catholic. It shall not even be Aryan or Semite. It shall be built, if you like, by a Christian and endowed by a Jew. It shall learn from the prophets of every name whom God has sent to every age and people. It shall hold fellowship with all who have purely lived and bravely died. It shall unite all who love for the sake of all who suffer."

In conclusion Dr. Aked said: "The preacher must forego much of that which has always been thought to constitute the rewards of worldly life. The successes of his day are not for him. Only through half a lifetime of self-discipline—through a lifetime, indeed—does he school himself to see with imperturbable content the prizes of life, as men reckon its prizes, go past him. He sees men of inferior ability, narrower mind, and lower attainments rich in the things all men desire, house, home, possessions, money, reputation, power, and the delights of the sons of men. These things he deliberately chooses to let others have. He looks for other joys, and chooses to count these things not worth the winning. For him the supreme joy of life is to get his teaching accepted. It is reward enough, prize enough, crown enough for him that his words have reached the consciences of men, that his messages have won their hearts for God.

"Public life is very cruel. So far as one's reading enables one to form an opinion, it always has been cruel. The form of injustice, of cruelty, of persecution changes. The spirit is the same. We who stand in public view suffer intensely from senseless, reasonless, brainless, misunderstandings; from conscienceless, brutal misrepresentations, from carpings, jealousies, miserable pin pricks of the hour, unprovoked, idiotic—poisoning our days. There is one sermon which I shall never preach, or, if I do, it will be the best sermon which I shall preach on earth. It will be born of my own pain. The subject will be just this: Avoidable troubles ought to be avoided! It sounds simple. A fool could understand it. Yet if the world would believe it, if men and women would avoid avoidable troubles, this world would be a Paradise, the kingdom of God would be realized over all the earth. Avoidable troubles ought to be avoided. But we misknow one another, slander one another, wound, crush, slay one another, and, busy as the devil is, all for no reason discoverable by man or God. The preacher bears more than a double burden of this load of care.

"But the supreme reward which consoles him in every sorrow is the assurance of work well done. This richly compensates for all the piled-up injustice of the world. This inspires him for every conflict and fills his heart with gladness. Brighter than fame, richer than gold, more to be desired than imperial possessions and powers is the peace beyond all understanding which is God's best gift to the preacher who sees men and women won to righteousness, found and saved by Christ, kept by the grace of God, made as the salt of the earth, and the light of the world."

HONOR TO HAYM SALOMON.

Revolutionary Financier Deserves a Statue, Says the Rev. Mr. Peters.

The Rev. Madison C. Peters lectured yesterday morning in Temple Beth-El, Fifth Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street, on Haym Salomon, the financier of the American Revolution. Dr. Peters said:

"Haym Salomon, the Jewish broker, did for the Nation's credit what Washington did on the field for freedom. He was the confidential friend and adviser of agents and representatives of foreign powers in sympathy with the Revolutionary movement. Most of the money advanced by Louis XVI. and the loans negotiated in Holland passed through his hands.

"Salomon furnished to the Government $658,007.13, as shown by documentary evidance submitted to Congress, but not one cent has ever been repaid. Not only did Salomon advance large sums, but the services of James Madison, Judge Wilson, Gens. Mifflin, St. Clair, and others were retained through his bounty.

"Madison in 1827 urged that he be indemnified, and reports in favor of his heirs have been made frequently by Congress, but not a dollar has ever been repaid, a fact which affords support to the oft-repeated observation of the ingratitude of republics. Haym Salomon gave all he had to the American cause, when money alone saved the day, and it is only just to ask that now, in the days of their prosperity, the American people erect a monument to this ardent lover of freedom."

The distribution will be continued to-day and Tuesday, and to-day will be taken up also by the Edward Rosenstein Association, 155 Clinton Street. Arrangements have been made by Jewish charitable institutions to supply matzoths to the immigrants on Ellis Island, at Quarantine, and on Hoffman Island. Supplies will be sent also to all penal institutions.

JERRY M'AULEY MEN GIVE REMINISCENCES

Graduates of the Mission Tell of Other Days at the Last Service in the Building.

COME FROM MANY PLACES

Bank President and Baseball Umpire Tell Their Experiences—Sailors in the Gathering.

Yesterday was alumni day at the old Jerry McAuley Water Street Mission, and the old graduates from Bowery saloons came back to tell about their post-graduate experiences. They came from Newburg, Newark, Jersey, Bath Beach, and every section of Manhattan. Some had quit their bad habits as long ago as thirty years, and others only within the week.

The occasion was the last day of services ever to be held at the mission in its present quarters. The old altar where the converts knelt to the number of 250,000, out of a total of 1,500,000 who came through the mission's doors in its thirty-eight years of existence, is to be torn down this morning to make way for a fireproof building of five floors and two wings, in which will be the mission's new headquarters.

Foreshadowing the need of demolition water had leaked down from the roof. John H. Wyburn, the present Superintendent, led in singing "We'll Never Say Good-bye in Heaven," and other songs of their undergraduate days. He read a letter from the Rev. Dr. J. H. Jowett regretting the fact that delivering two sermons a day in a Fifth Avenue church had proved such a tax upon his strength that he could not come down to look at the old mission.

"I was panhandling around the corner in Roosevelt Street," said one young man whose appearance was that of an athlete, "and I asked an old gentleman for a dime. He turned and asked me why he should give it to me. I looked at him a minute, and then admitted I couldn't see any reason why he should. The more I thought it over the more certain I felt he was right. I came in here, and now I am a confidential clerk in a large establishment out of whose door I was kicked six years before."

"I have been sometimes criticised by my business associates," said Joseph J. Rafter, President of the Broad and Market National Bank of Newark, "for continuing my association with this mission, and for allowing the newspapers to tell the story of how I found friends here after I had become bankrupt in all that makes life worth while. But I feel I would sadly repay the interest that was lavished upon me and the help given to me if I did not come and keep a helping hand out for others who may stagger in the doors as I did."

William H. Johnstone, baseball umpire, wanted all present to know how he had succeeded in umpiring a baseball game in a Christian spirit. "I thought I had to drink to be a sport and keep in with the bunch," he said. "Then I found there were some nights that gave me mornings after that would be terrible unless I could get a half pint of whisky to start me going again. The manager said he couldn't carry a drunkard on the staff, so I was down and out."

From Sailors' Snug Harbor several old seamen came to the gathering, testifying in voices that faltered to the happy times they had had in the mission bread line and afterward at its confessional.

Mrs. Bradford L. Gilbert, wife of the old river pirate, Jerry McAuley, in the days when he was sent up for fifteen years for taking East River things that didn't belong to him, told of her pleasure in carrying on the mission work after her husband had begun it in 1871. The new building that is to replace the old mission was designed by Bradford L. Gilbert, an architect and alumnus of the mission, to whom Mrs. McAuley was married after the death of her first husband twenty-five years ago.

During the rebuilding of the mission house its work will be carried on at the Mariners' Temple, Oliver and Henry Streets.

RESCUERS OVERCOME IN THE BANNER MINE

Eleven Physicians and Aids Have Narrow Escape from Death by the After Damp.

200 DEAD IN TWO MINES

No More Bodies Found at Pancoast Colliery, Near Scranton — Three Brothers Lie Side by Side.

LITTLETON, Ala., April 9.—Twenty-three bodies have been taken from the Banner Mine, in which an explosion occurred yesterday morning. The work of rescue is progressing rapidly. It is now believed 128 men were in the mine, in addition to those taken out yesterday.

The first party of ten Government rescuers, headed by Dr. J. J. Rutledge, who entered the mine at 3 o'clock this morning, had a narrow escape from death. An accident occurred to the blower used for the fans, and the air was stopped for several minutes. Within a few seconds a faint cry for help was heard from below, and men with oxygen helmets hurried down. The entire party was overcome by the after-damp, and when brought to the surface physicians worked over them for nearly an hour before they could be moved to the rescue car.

Members of the first party told a thrilling story.

"We were going along all right until we got to the fourth entry," said Dr. H. M. Hamilton, "and in a few seconds nearly every man in the party was down. I attempted to carry one man over the lift, but failed and fell myself. That is the last I remember until the surface was reached."

Dr. Caraway staggered to the bottom of the shaft and cried: "Get us out; we are dying!" Then the second party, headed by Dr. Wright, was sent down.

Those overcome were Dr. J. J. Rutledge, Dr. W. S. Rountree, Dr. Caraway, J. D. Weldon, J. W. Newby, A. R. Brown, J. W. Key, William Routenlusch, H. H. Hamilton, George T. Gambill, and Harry McCrerie. Rutledge, Rountree, and Gambill were at first thought to be dead. All returned to work a few hours later.

The cause of the explosion is still a mystery.

While the loss of life at Banner is the most disastrous in the history of Alabama mining, the damage to the mine itself is slight. Mr. Ramsey estimates that $1,200 will cover it fully.

The entire State Board of Convict Inspectors is on the scene. Of the 128 men in the mines before the rescue work started, five were free, two whites and three negroes; 123 were convicts, 12 of whom were white. Practically all of them were short-term men sent from Jefferson County.

One of the most pathetic incidents was the death of O. W. Spradling of Leeds, Ala., one of the mine foremen. He escaped with others and then returned to the mine to render aid. He was found sitting to-day on a rock with his head in his hands. He was only a short distance from the open air. He leaves a widow and one child. He had been handling convict work for the past twenty years.

PANCOAST DEATHS 74.

Three Brothers Lie Side by Side—All Bodies Recovered.

SCRANTON, Penn., April 9.—Every nook and cranny of the workings of the Pancoast colliery where the seventy-three miners and United States rescue foreman, Joseph M. Evans, lost their lives Friday have been gone over by squads of searchers since noon yesterday, but no more bodies have been found.

The laying out and burying of the bodies is now going on. Among those that lay beneath sheets awaiting caskets were three brothers and a cousin in one room. Five funerals of Hungarians were held this afternoon. The wailing and crying in the cemetery were pitiful. The 1,200 surviving miners of Throop marched from one house to the other to pay respect to the dead and then to the cemetery to attend the funerals. All the church bells tolled continuously during the afternoon. The other funerals will be held to-morrow morning and afternoon.

President Taft telegraphed his sympathy, and as head of the Red Cross Society offered aid. Mayor Von Bergen called a meeting of a dozen citizens yesterday to take charge of a relief fund. The fund has reached nearly $10,000, including the Red Cross contribution of $7,000.

J. B. Dickson, President of the Price-Pancoast Company, which operates the Pancoast colliery, told the Relief Committee to not concern itself about the burial expenses or immediate needs of the families of the victims. Each of the adult victims belonged to the "Colliery Keg Fund," which provides $100 as a benefit to the family of each member who dies. The fund had $1,300 in it. Mr. Dickson has agreed to make up the difference. It is intended by the local relief committee to raise $200,000.

Nothing new has developed in the story of how the catastrophe occurred except the verification of the company officials' claim that prior to sending men in to urge the tunnel workers to hasten out, a telephone message was sent into that part of the mine to warn them of the fire and order them to get out. This verification is found in the fact that no dinner pails, lamps, or coats were found in the chambers where the victims had been at work. This tended to show that they had received word of the fire and had gathered up their pails and coats before starting out.

POLICE KEEP CORRIGAN BUSY.

Nearly a Hundred Prisoners in the Night Court for Him to Pass Upon.

The activity of the police resulted in ninety-eight prisoners being arraigned in the Night Court on yesterday morning, a record for a stormy night. The activity of the detectives was due to the fact that Magistrate Corrigan is sitting in Night Court, his friends said.

Of twelve panhandlers, ten were sent to the workhouse for thirty days each, and two fined $10 each. All the arrests were made by Headquarters' men.

Two pickpockets, arrested in East Houston Street by detectives, who saw them attempt to rob women and two pickpockets found in Mulberry Bend Park were sentenced to six months.

Joseph Hellman, 16 years old, of 360 East 114th Street, was arrested as he was leaving the hallway of 101 Norfolk Street. He had a jimmy, a lock pick and a bunch of skeleton keys. He had been arrested before on a charge of burglary and he was held for trial.

Near the close of court early yesterday, a well dressed man was discharged with a reprimand for fighting in the street. He thanked the Magistrate and said:

"If you will permit me, your Honor, I wish to congratulate you for your courage in making the statements regarding the increase of crime and to"——

He was hustled out of court.

TAFT AT AERO BANQUET.

President Expected to Announce Opening of National Laboratory.

The endowment and establishment of a permanent aeronautical laboratory at Washington, D. C., will be announced at the dinner to be given by the Aeronautical Society at the Hotel Astor, Thursday, April 27. As this laboratory is to be a National institution similar to the Smithsonian Institution, President Taft, who will be present at the dinner, will be asked to make the formal announcement of the details, according to Dr. Hudson Maxim, President of the society.

The laboratory will be the first of its kind ever organized in the world. The movement for its organization was started by the Aeronautical Society some time ago. It will be endowed by one of the most conspicuous philathropists in America. It is expected that this institution will have a material effect in developing the usefulness of aeroplanes.

Some of the men who are expected to be in charge of the various departments of the institution will be present at the dinner, and notable public men from all parts of the world, will speak. Thomas Sopwith, the English aviator, will represent the Royal Aero Club of Great Britain.

TECHNICAL MEN TO MEET.

Influence of Science on Business to be Told in Boston.

BOSTON, April 9.—An epitome of what has been done by the application of technical science to the world's business in the last half century will be embraced in addresses by renowned scientists, educators, and captains of industry at the Congress of Technology, to be held to-morrow and Tuesday to celebrate the semi-centennial of the granting of the charter of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Technology Alumni will gather in what is expected to be the greatest alumni reunion in the history of the institution, while, in addition to the formal programme of scientific papers, there will be alumni smokers, fraternity and class gatherings, banquets, and entertainments of an interesting and varied nature.

Plan an Aeronautical Laboratory.

At the dinner of the Aeronautical Society to be held at the Hotel Astor on Thursday night, April 27, the endowment of a permanent aeronautical laboratory at Washington, D. C., will be discussed. The laboratory will be the first of its kind ever established, it is said, and is expected to have a material effect in developing the usefulness of aeroplanes in the near future. President Taft, who will be present at the dinner, will be asked to make the formal announcement of the details of this new departure.

THINKS LABOR LOSES MANY OPPORTUNITIES

Congressman Littleton Says Wageworkers Should Be Guided to Employers with Jobs.

WOULD HAVE EXCHANGES

Expansion of the State Labor Bureau Suggested as a Remedy—System in Vogue in Germany.

Congressman Martin W. Littleton made a plea last night for the establishment of labor exchanges by the State authorities, on the model of what has been done in Germany, England, and other European countries. He was speaking at Carnegie Hall in aid of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, at a meeting over which the Right Rev. Thomas F. Cusack, Auxiliary Bishop of New York, presided. His subject was "Man and His Opportunity."

"Economic liberty is the finest fruitage of our civilization, but it contains the worst dangers. It brings us miracles of comfort and contains terrible problems. If the Standard Oil Company and the Tobacco Trust represent one sort of achievement of economic liberty, I, too, have the liberty to sell my labor, and the problem is how to restrain one and not the other. The Supreme Court is likely soon to decide this question.

"It is curious that the only branch of the Government which holds office for life is called on to decide this matter, for the other branches seem to have abdicated their right to discuss economic liberty. What is the true meaning of the Sherman anti-trust law? How will the Government bring it about that there shall be enough competitive freedom between you and me, so that I shall not always be fettered in the race and you always win, or you be fettered and I always win?"

The Congressman then took up the subject of labor exchanges, and asked how men find their place in the world—those who are always face to face with the problem of making a living.

"Do you know," he said, "that of all commodities labor is treated the worst in its search for a place to work in. If you desire cotton or wheat, horses or clothes, you can go to the telephone and in fifteen minutes have a contract with price and place of delivery fixed, for there is a market place for these things. But labor wanderers aimlessly about the earth looking for a purchaser or sits in the parks wearied with knocking at doors that will not open.

"That is one reason for the discontent in this land with all its resources and riches. It is the endless pursuit of a job with no means of finding it. If we could only bring work to the workless man, I believe that we should have done one of the greatest services to the human race."

Mr. Littleton said the State could do much in this direction within the limits of the Constitution and without pauperizing any one. Some place must be provided where reliable news of vacant jobs can be obtained, and this could be accomplished by expanding the State Labor Bureau so that it might become a resort for men looking for work and employers looking for labor, and might preserve the independence of both.

He instanced the great labor exchange of Berlin with its two wings, one for skilled and the other for unskilled men, each capable of holding 2,000 persons. It is in communication with other cities and can send them labor. He told how Lord Northcliffe once found a German trudging toward Leipsic and gave him a lift in his automobile. The man said he was going to work and was certain of getting it, because he had the address provided for him by the labor exchange of another city. Lord Northcliffe found that the job was waiting for him just as he said.

REPORTED CANTON RISING.

City Besieged and Tartar General Slain, London Hears.

LONDON, April 10.—A special dispatch to The Daily Express from Hongkong says that a serious rising is reported to have taken place at Canton.

It is stated that the Tartar General commanding the troops has been murdered, and that other troops have been hurried to the city, which is in a state of siege.

There is no confirmation of this report from other sonrces.

Tribes Hesitate Between Submitting to Sultan and Attacking Fez.

FEZ, April 9.—The situation here is very unsettled. The tribes which surround the city have not yet decided whether to submit to Mulai Hafid or attack the town.

On April 2 the tribesmen charged down upon the Government troops under the walls, but were quickly dispersed by sharp artillery fire.

Turkish Troops Defeat Arab Rebels.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 9.—The Government troops, after stubborn fighting, have defeated the Arab rebels in the vicinity of Sanaa, in Yemen, killing more than 100. The rebel forts have been destroyed.

STREET AFIRE UNDER PAVING.

Smoldering Blaze at Work for a Week and Hotel Filled with Smoke.

Fire, thought to have been raging for more than a week, was discovered yesterday afternoon beneath the asphalt paving in West Thirty-second Street, directly in front of the Hotel Aberdeen. One hundred and fifty square feet of the street paving was torn up by the firemen with axes, and it was found that a lot of wooden planks were burning. These planks constituted a shoring which was supposed to have been left beneath the bed of the street when the Pennsylvania Railroad tunnel was built. The firemen believed that heat from the boilers in the basement of the hotel, which extends under the sidewalk, ignited the planking.

Clerks and guests at the Aberdeen had complained of smoke in the building for the last week, it was learned last night. In the basement of the hostelry a pale blue haze filled the engine rooms, and employes of the hotel hunted in vain for the cause. John Dunn, manager of the hotel, finally discovered where the fire was.

FINDS LONG LOST CHILD.

Dr. Gonnley Recovers Daughter Taken by Mother After Divorce.

Special to The New York Times.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, April 9.—After a search covering nearly two years Dr. H. H. Gormley of New York has recovered his daughter Myrtle, aged 5 years, at the home of G. F. Foley, in this city. The little girl was deserted at the Foley home, it is said, six weeks ago by a woman, who said she was her mother.

Two years ago Dr. Gormley is reported to have been diverced from his wife, who, he says, later obtained possession of the daughter. After a long search Dr. Gormley got trace of the child. The Foleys, having no children of their own, were just on the point of adopting the little waif when Dr. Gormley claimed her. The girl did not recognize Dr. Gormley as her father. He has returned to New York, taking the child with him.

The name of Dr. H. H. Gormley does not appear in the New York City Directory.

Mrs. W. V. Moody for Cornell Trustee.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 9.—The authorities of Cornell announced that three candidates have been nominated by the alumni for the two seats on the Board of Trustees to be filled in June. Herbert D. Mason, a New York lawyer, is one of them. The others are James H. Edwards and Mrs. William Vaughan Moody.

POLICE INTERRUPT A DUEL.

Quarrel Over Camorra Trial Led to a Mortal Challenge.

FORT PLAIN, N. Y., April 9.—A squad of police interrupted a duel of Italians in a wood near here at daylight to-day, stopping what had been agreed upon as a fight to the death. Principals and seconds saw the gleam of the bluecoats' brass buttons and escaped in a thicket. One of the duelists is said have been badly wounded in the breast and the other is said to have lost an ear.

The fight was arranged on Friday night, the police say, after a bitter quarrel over the trial of the Camorra in Italy. The two men started a fight at the beginning of the quarrel, but were separated. The police expect to arrest one or both of the duelists shortly.

SAYS AMERICA LEADS IN PHYSICAL WORK

Columbia's Gymnastic Director Finds Training System Here Ahead of That of Europe.

A MODEL SCHOOL IN LONDON

Woman Principal's Method One of the Most Effective He Observed, Says Prof. Meylan.

Prof. George L. Meylan, President of the American Physical Education Association, medical director of the Columbia University Gymnasium, and Associate Professor of Physical Education at that institution, has just returned from a two months' study of the systems of six European countries convinced that the American system is the best in the world.

Prof. Meylan will report to the association this week in Boston, where the eighteenth convention of the physical educators will be held. He will tell of the things he saw abroad and compare the physical education systems of England, France, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, and Italy with that in vogue in the colleges and schools of the United States.

"Taking the United States as a whole, we are far ahead of all the countries I visited," said Prof. Meylan yesterday. "While our system is not at all uniform, there is no doubt in my mind that the physical educators of the foreign countries I visited have much to accomplish yet before they arrive at the stage that prevails in the United States. Next to our own country are Germany and Switzerland, where the educational system is under Government supervision.

"The reason we have gone ahead in that direction is that we had the start on them. About twenty years ago there was a wave of the Swedish system of physical education, or Ling system, which swept through the United States. It was adopted in Boston in 1891. This system has been generally given up or modified. It has been improved upon to a great extent. Our system is really a combination of the Swedish and German systems, added to by our own educators, and is based on a practical knowledge of physiology.

"In teaching hygiene and looking out for the health of the school children we are, on the whole, ahead of Europe. But in certain cities there this part of the school system is excellent. In Brussels, for instance, I found that every schoolboy received a medical examination at the beginning of the term. Out of 800 in one school, 117 were picked out this year by the school physician as not being properly nourished. Every morning at 10 o'clock these 117 boys receive a tonic of cod liver oil or a preparation of iron. At 11:30 about 200 boys, whose parents work away from home, receive a big plate of soup and a slice of bread. This is done partly by the municipality and partly by philanthropic bodies.

"In the same school there is an excellent system of shower baths for the boys who have no such facilities at home. The boys are obliged to take at least two baths a week.

"The finest physical training for girls I saw while abroad was in a London girls' school. The Principal was an exceptional woman, who was successful in teaching hygiene to the girls and making it a part of their lives. Every morning she inspects every child in one class. She examines their faces and hands, sees that their nails are clean, their hair in order, and clothing neat and clean."

QUEENS GRAFT TRIAL TO-DAY.

Former Deputy Sheriff Phillips Will Again Face a Jury.

Trials on the indictments which were found by the Grand Jury in Queens under the direction of former Special Deputy Attorney General Arthur C. Train are to be resumed this morning before Justice Samuel Maddox, in the Supreme Court at Long Island City. John M. Phillips, former Under Sheriff of the county and one of the leading Democratic politicians of the Long Island City section, will be put on trial. He is charged with obtaining money from the city on questionable contracts for repairs to flushometers in the Queens County Court House, and also on culvert repairs on highways in Queens.

Phillips was acquitted a week ago on charges growing out of culvert repairs on the Blackstump Road in Queens because the prosecution was unable to prove his handwriting.

The prosecution to-day will be conducted by Deputy Atttorney General James A. Parsons and District Attorney Frederick G. De Witt.

BLIND WORKERS' EXHIBITION.

To Open at the Metropolitan This Month—Class Work to be Shown.

What the Board of Education is doing for the teaching of blind children will be demonstrated to the public at the Blind Workers' Exhibition, which is to be held at the Metropolitan Opera House from April 26 to 30. A room has been assigned to Miss Gertrude E. Bingham, Inspector of classes for blind children, and a staff of her assistants, and there they will carry on the actual work of teaching the afflicted children.

Every grade of school work from the kindergarten to the high school will be illustrated, and the children will also go through their regular games, to show that in spite of their lack of sight they can take part in organized play, and in such games as tag, running, and basket ball.

The textbooks used are embossed in the Braille system of raised writing, and are manufactured in the city's own Braille printing plant, which is under the supervision of Miss Bingham. She has the use of her eyes, and reads the embossing as a proofreader, by sight and not by touch. In eighteen months her plant has turned out 6,500 embossed plates, from which have been printed 28,000 sheets.

Other special apparatus for the blind which will be shown will include the Hall-Braille typewriter, by which the children can take down notes, and which they will use for a regular monthly examination in writing, reading, spelling, arithmetic, history, and geography. Ordinary writing is also being introduced by the Board of Education for the blind children. The chief difficulty met with is the keeping to a straight line. Miss Bingham has devised a method of overcoming this. She folds the paper horizontally at the correct distance between the lines, and she finds that the children, by the aid of their delicate fingers, can maintain a reasonably straight line of writing. The letters are taught them by means of an embossed alphabet composed of the fewest possible number of strokes.

HIS BODY STOPS ELEVATOR.

Operator Caught Trying to Kick Door Shut—Released Not Badly Hurt.

Tenants in the apartment house at 601 West 113th Street were startled at 8 o'clock last night by yells and screams. They ran into the halls to find that Caesar Bailey, the negro elevator boy, had been caught between the floor of his car and the ceiling of the first floor.

The engineer, John Hall, operating the car from the basement, lowered it to the ground floor, releasing Bailey. Dr. Smith took the boy to J. Hood Wright Hospital. He found that the boy's legs were bruised, but that he was not badly injured.

Albert McKune and George Thompson, hallboys, said that Bailey had started the car upward in response to a call from the second floor, and had tried to kick the door shut on the ground floor. He had slipped and fallen and his body, caught between ceiling and car, had stopped the mechanism.

Soldier Wouldn't Pay His Carfare.

A young man who said he was William Shaffer, a United States soldier, but who didn't tell his regiment or the post to which he is attached, was sentenced by Magistrate Corrigan in the Night Court last night to five days in the workhouse. Charles Franklin, the ticket agent at the downtown station of the Second Avenue elevated road at Fourteenth Street, said he refused to pay his fare and beat him and a special policeman.

BATTLESHIPS BACK FROM TARGET TRIALS

Men of the Connecticut and Michigan Get Extended Shore Leave.

SHIPS TO BE OVERHAULED

Men Tell of Good Shooting Off Cape Henry, with the South Carolina Holding the Record.

The battleships Connecticut, flagship of Rear Admiral Seaton Schroeder, and the Michigan of the First Division of the Atlantic Fleet, arrived yesterday from the drill ground off Cape Henry. Both vessels are here to go into the navy yard for overhauling, and in consequence the crews will have extended shore leave. The Connecticut was the first to arrive, and as soon as she came to anchor off Tompkinsville the men gathered on deck anxious to get ashore.

Fifteen days' leave was at once given to 400 of them, and when they report back the remainder will get the same period.

The Connecticut had not been in port here since Nov. 2, when she sailed to head the division on the European cruise. She returned to Guantanamo for manoeuvres, remaining there from Jan. 16 to March 13, when she sailed north, leading the way to Hampton Roads, and then to the drill grounds, sixty miles off Cape Henry.

The battleships are fresh from target practice, and the men are enthusiastic over the fine showing they made at the guns. Flag Lieut. R. D. White of the Connecticut said no scores could be given out as the results are sent to Washington, where the general efficiency report is worked out. Some of those who made up the gun crews were not so reticent. They said this was the first time that target firing had been done with the vessel steaming seventeen knots. In the past, twelve knots was the recognized top speed for practice work. The target fired upon was moving at a six-knot gait in the opposite direction. The range for the twelve-inch guns opened at 14,000 yards and narrowed down to 9,000. The best score for twelve-inch guns, the men said, was thirteen hits out of fourteen shots. Three shots were allowed to pick up the range. The range for the five-inch and three-inch guns of the secondary battery was from 4,000 to 1,500 yards. The best record for three-inch guns was thirty-three hits out of thirty-four shots.

The men admitted that in all probability the South Carolina was the holder of the record for target firing. This is Roosevelt's favorite battleship, and two of hen twelve-inch guns bear the painted "E," signifying excellent shooting, and their crews bear upon their sleeves the same letter.

"We have had some hard work," said one of the men as he waited for the launch to take him ashore. "We have also had plenty of fun. While we were at Guantanamo a smoker was held on each vessel in the division. We have musicians, orators, dancers, story tellers, magicians, and some creditable actors and some very good fighters on the ships, and so the programme was always an interesting one."

The fights created the most interest for the men. The Connecticut, it is said, has the best fighters. There is Kotch, the heavyweight who won his title of champion of the fleet through the default of Schlossburg of the New Hampshire, the holder of the title. Then the men had a story to tell of the hot figh in which "Young" O'Donnell of the Connecticut wrested the lightweight honors from Musso of the Mississippi.

The Michigan and the Connecticut will go to the Brooklyn Navy Yard to-day.

JERSEY CITY HAS A PECULIAR PITCHER

Justis of Dayton Went Into the Game Too Late to Stop Giants' Victory.

The veteran baseball warrior, Jack Ryan, strapped on his armor yesterday at Jersey City and led his Jersey City team in a scrappy game against the Giants. The Giants won, 6 to 3, but the Skeeters made them hop some to do it. Three of Jersey City's regulars, Gettman, Green, and Dolan, are laid up, and Ryan covered third base. He chopped off real bits of baseball, too, just to show his youngsters how to play the game. Jack devoured a red-hot liner, propelled from Snodgrass's bat in the second inning, and made a double play all alone on Crandall when he crept too far from the third station. The Skeeter manager also leaped up for a high throw in the sixth, and finally stabbed the ball on Hartley for an out when he was being run up and down the baseline.

New York's heavy hitting in the first five innings off Kessler won the game with runs to spare, but when Jersey City introduced a new slabman from Dayton, Ohio, the Giants ceased clouting the ball. This boxman was Justis, who has a weird and queer delivery. He has something on the ball, just the same. He winds up with all the quivers of an Oriental dancer and then shoots the ball over quick. In the four innings he pitched New York didn't get a hit.

It was raw, cool, and cloudy in Jersey, but nevertheless 2,500 spectators went to West Side Park to see the game, not a few of them tubing it over from Manhattan. Manager McGraw sent his regular team against the Skeeters, with Crandall in the box. While he wasn't invincible in the box, he held the enemy safe, and slammed the ball hard, one of his drives being a three-bagger. Dick Rudolph relieved him in the sixth inning, and made the Jersey Citys behave properly. Looking at the contest from this way and that, it was pretty good baseball for February weather and a rain-soaked field.

The Giants started just as soon as the bell rang for the first round. Devore singled and stole second. Doyle walked, and a single by Snodgrass scored Devore and landed Doyle at third. Larry went home on Murray's sacrifice fly to centre. Merkle grounded out, Warner to Abstein, and Bridwell sent Snodgrass home with a single to centre. Another run came in the second, when Schlei tripled and could have made the circuit with a little speed afoot. Crandall scored the catcher with a single to left. Doyle contributed a double in this session, but it went for naught.

In the fourth Schlei grounded out, short to first, and Crandall hammered a triple to deep left. Devore's sacrifice fly scored him. Doyle went to first gratis, and Snodgrass singled to right. The ball was tossed to third to head off Doyle, but when that failed, it was shot to first to get Snodgrass off the bag. Snodgrass was chased up and down the base line and gave Doyle enough time to get home. At this point, Mr. Justis entered the fray, and the New York activity got a bad jolt. No more hits, no more runs. And the Jersey City crowd warmed up to the new pitcher and complimented him frequently for his peculiar but effective pegging.

Jersey City didn't score until the fourth. Abstein, who used to play with the Pittsburg world champs, smashed a triple to centre and scored on Deininger's single to right. Ryan was thrown out at first by Schlei, after he had laid the ball in front of the plate. Warner singled, scoring Deininger.

In the ninth inning, with Rudolph pitching, Ryan went out, second to first. Warner singled to centre and Butler grounded out to first. Spahr, batting for Justis, rolled a grounder to Devlin, who juggled the tap for a moment, and then made a wide throw to Merkle at first. This slight mistake gave Warner a chance to romp home with Jersey City's third run. The line-up:

JOHN T. BRUSH RETURNS.

Owner of the Giants Here to Attend Opening at Polo Grounds.

John T. Brush, owner of the Giants, arrived in the city last night from San Antonio, Texas, where he has been living since last Fall. Mr. Brush is much improved, and he hopes to be able to stay here for some time. Mr. Brush's health failed last Summer, and he went to Chicago, later going to Texas. During the Spring training trip the Giants visited San Antonio, and Mr. Brush met all of the recruits and saw his team play a game.

He has returned to New York to be present at the opening of the season on Wednesday at the Polo Grounds. Mr. Brush is very optimistic about the team and believes that it has an excellent chance to win the pennant this season. The seats for the opening game will go on sale this morning at the club's offices in the St. James Building. There will be a band concert at the grounds on Wednesday beginning at 3 o'clock.

Champion Cubs Expect to Repeat.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Better prepared to play championship baseball than since the Spring of 1906, the Chicago team, champions of the National League, will open the season here Wednesday, with the St. Louis club. Manager Chance believes Chicago will again win the pennant, but in the same breath names New York as the most formidable contender. The team is in splendid condition, and is almost the same that won the championship last year. The third base position alone is changed. Hein Zimmerman has been picked to fill the place made vacant by the veteran Harry Steinfeldt, who was sold to St. Paul. Six new players have been added this season, and it appears as if four of them will be retained. They are Shean and Doyle, utility players; Saier, a promising first baseman, and Ball, an outfielder. In the infield Chance, Evers and Tinker will appear again, while Sheckard, Hofman, and Schulte will hold down the outfield positions.

Reds Have Big Sick List.

CINCINNATI, April 9.—In case the fair weather heralds the National baseball season here next Wednesday, League Park will receive more patrons than on previous opening days. Every reserved seat has been sold for the game with Pittsburg, and in anticipation of a record-breaking attendance, 5,000 circus seats were erected in the outfield. The Cincinnati team is far from being in perfect condition. Since its arrival from the Southern training quarters at Hot Springs, Ark., two days ago, it has encountered only one day of fair weather. As a result seven men have been reported sick with colds. Notwithstanding this, Manager Griffith believes his regulars will round into form in time to present his strongest line-up on opening day.

Pirates Look for Victory.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 9.—Pittsburg will open the season on Wednesday at Cincinnati with the same line-up as it did the opening game with St. Louis last year, except in one instance. Hunter will guard the initial corner while a year ago Bud Sharpe took care of it. The Pittsburg club has not opened at home since 1893, when it was beaten by Cleveland, 7 to 2. Reports reaching the home city from the team has inspired the fans with an assurance, unusual at the opening of the season, and that so far as conditions go Clarke's men ought to have a shade over their opponents. While Cincinnati has been trying to play exhibition games at home in cold weather Pittsburg has been coming from the South by gradual stages, and good weather has apparently followed them. In no year since they have been training in Dixie have they been so signally favored by sunshine and temperature.

SNOW STOPS YANKEES.

Manager Chase Announces Batting Order for Opening Game.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., April 9.—Hal Chase and his Yankees were bitterly disappointed this morning when they awoke to find a snowstorm raging here instead of bright and warm weather which would have permitted them to play Wilkesbarre of the New York State League this afternoon and round up for the opening game with the Athletics in Philadelphia on Wednesday in tiptop condition. Chase had expected the two games here and the one in Scranton to-morrow to be played in warm weather, and they were just what his men needed following the steady cold, raw weather they have experienced on their trip North. He says, however, that they will be in quite as good condition as the Athletics, although neither team is likely to be as fast as if they had had several good workouts in warm weather.

Chase has decided upon his batting order for the Athletics' game. It will be Wolter, right field; Hemphill, centre field; Chase, first base; Hartzell, short stop or third base; Knight, second base; Cree, left field; Johnston, third base or short stop; Sweeney, catcher, and Jim Vaughn, pitcher. Fisher will be kept warmed up to relieve Vaughn if the big fellow is not effective.

Detroit Players Due To-day.

DETROIT, Mich., April 9.—The first of the Detroit players who will be in the line-up when the club meets Chicago in the opening game of the American League season here Wednesday, will reach Detroit early Monday. Among the first arrivals will be Mullin, Crawford, Cobb, Willett, and Summers. All of the other players will be here by Tuesday morning. Manager Jennings says that the squad left Monroe, La., the training camp, in such splendid shape that all of the regulars can be expected to start the season in good condition. George Mullin is the pitching choice for the opening game and Schmidt will probably catch.

St. Louis Ready for Opening.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 9.—All is in readiness for the opening of the major league baseball season Wednesday, when the American League team here will play with Cleveland. With the exception of twenty days at Hot Springs, Ark., Americans have attempted to get in condition on their own grounds. The Nationals, with Manager Bresnahan in control, spent a few days at an Indiana health resort, and with the exception of one trip to Kansas City, have played almost daily on their own field. Rhoderick Wallace, shortstop for several years, will have his first experience as a manager of the Americans.

Washington's New Park Ready.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—In a modern baseball plant, reconstructed from the ashes of the old one, destroyed less than a month ago by fire, the Washington baseball club of the American League will inaugurate the season of 1911, next Wednesday with the Boston team as its opponent. New steel and concrete low-deck stands have replaced the ancient wooden stands, and accommodations for 12,000 persons will be available when the time for the game is at hand. Eventually, when the new plant is completed, at a cost approximating $150,000, it will have a capacity of 17,000. Thomas C. Noyes, President of the Washington club, declared to-day that the work of reconstruction had been unusually gratifying. The Washington team, minus Walter Johnson, who refused to sign a contract for a salary less than $7,500 a year, returned to-day from the Spring training camp at Atlanta. Twenty-four men were in the squad, including Ainsmith, Henry, Somerlot, and Cunningham, recruits of the latter part of last season; Hughes, the veteran pitcher, obtained from Minneapolis, and several promising new recruits.

FIAT CAR MAKES NEW WORLD'S MARK

Twenty-four-Hour Auto Race at Los Angeles Ends with Fiat Well in Lead.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 9.—Driving an Italian Fiat of sixty horse power, Valentine Hust and Frank Verbeck won the twenty-four-hour race over the Playa del Rey motordrome to-day, piling up the remarkable score of 1,491 miles, an average of 62⅛ miles an hour, breaking the American record of 1,253 miles made by Poole and Paschke with a Stearns car at Brighton Beach Aug. 20 last.

An American Cadillac of thirty horse power driven by Adair and Baudette was second with a score of 1,448 miles, an average of over 60 miles an hour. Ten cars started the long grind at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon and seven finished. The race was remarkable on account of the freedom from tire trouble and accidents and because of the great mileage of the first and second cars.

The race was the first of the kind to be run on a specially constructed speedway in America. The Brighton Beach course on which the previous record was made is a one-mile dirt track used for horse racing, while the motordrome here is a one-mile board course with steep banking.

The greatest score ever made for twenty-four hours driving was made by F. Edge with a Napier car over the Brooksland, England, speedway in 1907. Edge covered 1,560 miles, but it was a record trial and not a competition event.

The Cole made a good showing during the early hours of the race, but broke two pairs of cylinders and was off the track two hours. During the second hour the Cadillac got inside the Brighton Beach record and broke the marks up to the end of the fifth hour, when the Fiat took the lead and broke every hour mark to the finish. Following was the standing of the cars at the finish:

Fiat, first, 1,491 miles; Cadillac, second, 1,448 miles; Cole, third, 1,219 miles; Cutting, fourth, 1,186 miles; Warren-Detroit, fifth, 1,167 miles; Croxton, sixth, 1,153 miles; Schacht, seventh, 1,012 miles.

The Velie, Cameron, and E. M. F. did not finish.

Match Race Date Changed.

The date for the fifteen-mile race between Hans Holmer and Gusta Ljungstrom, which is to take place under the auspices of the Twentieth Century A. C. at the St. Nicholas Rink, has been set for next Monday, April 17, instead of the 18th, as was previously announced. This will be the first indoor professional contests of importance that has been held in New York since the twenty-mile team race last Fall at Madison Square Garden, which was won by Holmer and Queal.

Mackenzie School Baseball.

Mackenzie School has arranged the following schedule, which includes many of the best schools in this part of the country. A number of last year's men are still in school, and there are many good players among the new ones. April 8, Polytechnic Preparatory School, at Brooklyn; 12, New Rochelle High School; 15, Erasmus High School; 19, open; 22, Columbia freshmen; 26, High School of Commerce; 29, Montclair Academy; May 3, Princeton Preparatory School, at Princeton, N. J.; 6, Chestnut Hill Academy; 10, Irving School, at Tarrytown, N. Y.; 12, Blair Academy, at Blairstown, N. J.; 13, alumni game; 17, Riverview Academy; 20, Salghill Golf Club; 24, Hackley School, at Tarrytown, N. Y.; 27, Wesleyan freshmen, at Middletown, Conn.; 31, Holbrook School; June 5, Faculty game; 7, St. Paul's School, at Garden City, L. I.

CHAMPION ATHLETICS READY.

Philadelphia Fans Will Greet Yankees on Wednesday.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., April 9.—Full of the spirit that carried them to baseball glory last Fall, the world's champion Athletics will open the American League season at Shibe Park Wednesday with New York, which expects to make a strong bid for the pennant this year. For the first time since the American League has been organized the Philadelphia representative in that circuit will start the season with a "stand-pat" team. Connie Mack, their astute leader, has looked over the veterans and has tried out his youngsters and has decided that the men who brought the highest honors in baseball to this city are good enough for another campaign.

The only position in doubt is left field, which gave the tall manager considerable worry last year. Mack had picked "Bill" Hogan, from California, to fill the place, but the manager now says that to win the position he will have to play better ball than that shown by Amos Strunk, who is putting up a game that pleases Mack.

Much is expected of the Philadelphia Nationals this year by reason of the addition of several lively players acquired through the Cincinnati deal. Manager Dooin thinks he has the right combination for a winning team, and declares that he expects to be one of the two teams that will fight it out next Fall for the world's championship. The Phillies open the season at New York the same day the American League season opens here.

Other Baseball Games.

At St. Louis—Nationals, 9; Americans, 5.

At Kansas City—Boston, (Americans,) 4; Kansas City, 3.

At Memphis—Minneapolis, (Americans,) 8; Memphis, (Southern,) 5.

At Baltimore—Boston, (Nationals,) 10; Baltimore, 1.

At Omaha—Boston, (Americans,) No. 2, 1; Omaha, 1.

At Toledo—Toledo, 2; Cleveland, 1.

Tenney Has Band of Youngsters.

BOSTON, April 9.—Manager Fred Tenney leads his band of youngsters on to the diamond Wednesday for the first game of the season with the Brooklyn Nationals. It will be under the critical eye of President Thomas J. Lynch, who has chosen to honor Boston with his presence on that day. In addition there will be the Governor and staff, and the Legislature, while Mayor Fitzgerald will pitch the first ball. The Boston team starts the season with a new aggregation of young and untried players, but Manager Tenney is so confident of his material that he declares the team is fully 25 per cent. stronger than last year. Local fans believe that Graham will eventually sign again for catcher, although the matter is still in abeyance.

STILL ANOTHER RECORD BROKEN

Driving a Lozier stock car, Fred Hall, another "unknown," on March 30th twice broke the record between Denver and Colorado Springs. He covered the 73 miles of mountain road in 1 hr. 43 min., twelve minutes less than the former record made by a 6-cylinder Thomas 70 and which has stood for two years. He then turned around and raced back to Denver in 1 hr., 40 min. and 30 sec., clipping two and one-half minutes off his own phenomenal time. At the end of the run, says a dispatch, the car was still fit to make the race of its life.

Seventeenth Consecutive Victory

This remarkable performance comes right on the heels of the Tetzlaff's victory over De Palma at Los Angeles on March 19th, when he broke all world's competition records from 25 to 100 miles, covering the 100 miles in 1 hour, 14 minutes and 29 seconds—an average speed of 80.71 miles per hour.

Hall's Denver-Colorado Springs double record run was the seventeenth consecutive event in which Lozier stock cars have won National Championships, defeated great cars and great drivers, or broken records. In not one of these contests has a Lozier car broken down or failed to finish—a record unparalled in the history of automobile contests.

What This Means to You

One hears so much of automobile contests these days that it is difficult to realize their significance. But think for a minute what a record like this means. It means that Lozier cars taken from stock, with bodies removed, but chasses absolutely standard, have defeated repeatedly, consecutively, regularly, the highest powered racing machines of America and Europe.

It means that Lozier cars are built to endure—that they will give you genuine lasting service. A car that can survive unscathed the grind of a championship race will give you more than double service under the ordinary wear and tear.

Lozier cars win races and endurance tests even in the hands of beginners at the racing game. Hall had never driven in a race until he broke the Denver-Colorado Springs record. Tetzlaff was a novice who leaped into fame by his victory with a Lozier at Santa Monica. Joe Horan drove his first race at Atlanta, yet he won the $3000 Grand Prize and broke the 250 mile American record. Mulford won his first race with a Lozier and every succeeding victory has been achieved with a Lozier car.

The power, the strength, the winning qualities are in the cars themselves—the stock cars you can buy from the Lozier dealer. The skillful driver merely gives the car a chance to show what it can do.

Legitimately High Priced

Lozier cars stand for the highest refinement of motor car building. They are the highest priced cars sold—and deservedly. For they add to marvelous mechanical perfection a beauty and grace and quality that give Lozier cars a character of their own. Their owners are those who demand the best regardless of price.

Please call at our salesroom and learn why Lozier cars win races and why they have won their high place in the buyers' esteem.

Results of Midwinter Record-Breaking Run to Philadelphia and Return of the Buick LIGHT DELIVERY TRUCK:

1st: Curtis Publishing Co. have adopted and placed order for the BUICK. 2nd: More BUICK TRUCKS sold in month of March than any other make.

The trip which brought these results is as follows:

The Buick Motor Company of New York, operating a Buick Light Delivery Truck, completed for the Curtis Publishing Company, owner of Saturday Evening Post and Ladies' Home Journal, the greatest and quickest record run ever made by a Commercial Car in America over snow-covered roads in the dead of Winter.

The New York office of the Curtis Publishing Company found on Wednesday night that they were short of Saturday Evening Posts to fill their orders. In looking for the quickest method to secure 2,000 extra copies from their press in Philadelphia they turned to the motor truck and selected the Buick on account of its speed, reliability and well-known reputation for delivering the goods in time of emergency, no matter what weather conditions might be. Needless to say the Buick made good to the complete satisfaction of the Curtis Publishing Company. Over snow-covered roads and through a heavy snowstorm the Buick Truck established a record to Philadelphia and return which will not be broken until the Buick makes another trip. No adjustments of any kind were made—not a tire was punctured. This is the schedule:

REFEREE DECLARES ROAD RACE VOID

Obertubbesing Nullifies Pennant A. C. Event Owing to Mismanagement.

Herman Obertubbesing, handicapper of the Metropolitan Association, acted as referee yesterday at the road race of the Pennant A. C., and declared the contest void because of mismanagement. Nearly 100 runners participated in the event, and this number would have been increased considerably had he acceded to the demands of the club officials to permit the post entry of about two score men who showed on the scene.

After Obertubbesing had shaped things up to his satisfaction, prior to the start the Pennant officials undid all his planning for getting the entries away according to the handicap marks by letting them go almost at their own will. Obertubbesing immediately declared the event no race, and told the club officials to get in touch with the checkers of the event in order that they could so inform the runners who had started off wrong marks that it was no race.

Very much disgruntled, the sponsors for the race asserted that they would appeal to the Registration Committee for permission to award the prizes as the men finished. The prize list was long, twenty-one being scheduled, in the way of plaques, cups, and bronze and silver medals.

J. Richmond of the Glencoe A. C. was the first man home, his time for the distance, approximately four miles, being 20:35. At frequent intervals the others passed the judges, and all were very much upset at the decision of the referee, which in a case such as happened is not subject to appeal.

Thirty clubs were represented by competitors, the course being from the clubhouse, at 146th Street and Third Avenue, to St. Ann's Avenue, to 149th Street, to Southern Boulevard, to Bronx Oval, and returning over the same route. The result follows:

Scratch Man Wins Yorkville Run.

Starting from scratch, A. O'Connell of the Yorkville A. C. carried off the honors of the club's weekly run yesterday from a big field, in which he allowed good starts to the contestants, ranging up to three minutes. O'Connell's time for the course was 23:00. The event was an open one, but the field was made up largely of Yorkville A. C. members, all of whom came in for the first three places, with R. Trietler, who ran unattached, finishing fourth.

OARSMEN IN ROAD RUN.

Ryan Wins Metropolitan A. C. Race Across Country.

Twenty-seven members of the Metropolitan Rowing Club competed yesterday in the cross-country run of the club over a course of approximately three miles. The event was the second of a series in which the organization hopes to tune up the oarsmen for the grueling work on the river for the coming season, and from the interest shown in the events indicates it will probably serve its purpose.

J. Ryan of the "senior four," with a handicap of four minutes, being one of the limit men, captured the honors yesterday, after a hard battle with G. Berner of the "junior eight."

The next event, which will be held in two weeks, will be over a longer course. The order of finish:

J. Ryan, G. Berner, W. Smith, F. Derring, A. E. Gauss, J. F. Callahan, I. J. Emery, J. Schultz, Captain; W. J. Daly, J. Reulin, R. J. Hyland, W. Kruger, J. D. Corbett, N. J. Murphy.

PORPORA TAKES TROPHY.

Mohawk A. C. Closes Cross-Country Season with Memberws' Run.

The Mohawk A. C. of the Bronx closed its cross-country season yesterday with a members' handicap run of six miles, with which went the point honors of the season and the cross-country cup for the member scoring the greatest number of points throughout the season.

T. Porpora won the closing event with a three-minute handicap, and was awarded the cup, with 17 points. The series consisted of four events at the same distance, in which individual prizes of gold, silver, and bronze were awarded the first three to finish in addition to the season's cup.

Porpora received the limit in the final run as an incentive for a fast run, and with the mark he set out at the start and made a fast pace, showing the way for the entire distance. McGah, who was sent off fifteen seconds later than the winner, was soon at his heels, and trailed him for a distance, but was unable to overhaul him, as Porpora always sprinted as the pack tried to catch him, and in the last half mile he opened up on his final dash with plenty of speed, and finally beat McGah to the taps by thirty-five seconds. The order of finish: T. Porpora, F. McGah, F. Wilson, T. Meehan, T. Dwyer, C. Green, W. Kaval, C. E. Smith, P. Alexander, H. Steinhart, and T. Gunzer.

The club will begin its outdoor season with a set of games at Macomb's Dam Park Sunday, May 14, with a good list of track and field events. The same rules will apply to the outdoor season regarding the point honors as that of the cross-country one, with prizes to the individuals and a trophy for the highest point score, which will also be a silver cup.

STUART SCOTT IN FORM.

Larchmont Y. C. Gunner Carries Off Trap Honors.

Shooting conditions at the Larchmont Yacht Club traps were anything but favorable yesterday when the regular weekly fixtures were called. The attendance was good, but no full scores were made in the nine matches decided.

Stuart Scott carried off the honors of the day. He won the ten-target scratch contest with eight clay birds smashed, and captured the fifteen-target scratch event, with all but one of his targets broken. He also won the 125-target scratch contest with a score of 102, and the leg for the Commodore's Cup with 24 to his credit. In the final shoot for that trophy, however, in which five shot to decide the winner for the season, G. L. Bready captured the coveted prize. His total score was 275, Stuart Scott being the runner-up with 274 targets broken. Bready was also the winner of the special match at 25 targets. He succeeded in breaking 23 of them.

T. R. Hooker proved the winner of the leg for the Monthly Cup, for which ten competed. His score was 24. He also captured the prize for the 125-target handicap contest with a score of 104. W. J. Elias won the leg for the Saur Gun with a score of 23 to his credit.

Yale to Row Penn May 13.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 9.—President Randolph of the Yale navy to-night announced that the arranged race with the University of Pennsylvania eight would be rowed at Springfield, Mass., on the Connecticut River, May 13. The Yale crew will leave here Wednesday, and while in Springfield will be the guests of the Rock Rimmon Boat Club. From the time of their arrival the eight will have daily practices on the river. The race will be rowed at 4:30 in the afternoon, and will be two miles straightaway.

"TIM" HURST WILL HOLD BOXING SHOW

Pastime A. C.'s Tournament in Garden Will Be Under Famous Umpire's Management.

The proposed international boxing tournament in Madison Square Garden next month, under the name of the Pastime Athletic Club, promises to become a distinct innovation in the amateur fistic world, as it will mark the first really public boxing show held in New York since the repeal of the Horton law.

It is generally conceded that the affair will be a winner for the Brazilian Cross organization, as the promoter, Tim Hurst, absolves the club from all financial loss, and guarantees a very enticing slice of the gate for his use of the club name. As a matter of fact, the club is insured against any claims against it by Hurst, and a committee of three, made up of John Lee, Frank Brennan, and Vic Andrews, will look after the club interests when the affair takes place.

Among the rank and file of the members the scheme is hailed as being "just great." Among the officers of the club there is a feeling that the club name should not be passed around for such use, but these objections faded quickly in view of the prospective money benefit, as it is conceded that the club can very well stand an addition to its coffers.

Hurst has had a representative abroad closing negotiations with the pick of the English and French boxers, and is said to have had variable success. He is only desirous of having in his series the best type of amateur, and will not countenance any contestant who cannot show a clean bill of athletic health from the governing powers of the country he will represent.

Distinctly a series involving great financial outlay, Hurst intends to have none but the best, and is prepared to furnish the men he chooses with all their expenses from the time they leave home until they get back. It develops that some trouble is likely to ensue for the promoter when he presents his plans for paying expenses to the English boxers he has in view, as the English have a rule which precludes the payment of the "exes" for any amateur boxer.

The Bellsize Boxing Club of London, which has about all the best amateurs, will not countenance the acceptance of expenses by any of its members, and the general feeling throughout England is that amateurism among boxers does not exist, except in the so-called better-class clubs.

R. F. McKiniry, President of the Pastime Club, could see no reason why the affair would not be a great success. He admitted ignorance as to whether a sanction had been asked for in the club's name, and was apparently ignorant concerning the fundamental points of the scheme.

The Amateur Athletic Union authorities assert that no sanction has been given for a championship session among boxers, international or National, for this city—this statement being evoked by the announcement that the tournament in question was to be for the international championship.

As the local authorities have up to now insisted, among other things, that the various boxing clubs must confine themselves to their members for their patronage, the Pastime Club will undoubtedly have some trouble filling the big Garden, as its membership has never been over 400.

The show must have been presented in enticing shape to the management of Madison Square Garden, for only a few days ago F. K. Sturgis, Chairman of the Board of Directors, and James C. Young, Secretary of the Garden Company, announced very emphatically that the Garden could not be leased for a boxing entertainment.

It is conceded among fistic fans that the bout on Wednesday night at the National Sporting Club towers above any of the scheduled events of the coming week. In this Tom O'Rourke presents Freddie Welsh and Pal Moore for the star attraction at ten rounds. There is much speculation among the followers of the Philadelphia lad as to whether he will score over Welsh in the fashion he treated Jem Driscoll.

Originally scheduled for decision last week, a postponement became necessary because of an injury to Welsh's hand. The trouble is now completely mended, and he is expected to show at the top of his form. Welsh is well remembered in the States through his bouts several years ago against Memsic, Johnny Murphy, Jack Goodman, Packey McFarland, and men of that class.

Several of the clubs have postponed the holding of bouts this week, because of it being Holy Week, so the members of the Sharkey, New Polo, and the Fairmont Clubs will use their affiliations with other organizations if they wish to witness any competition in their favorite sport.

At the Olympic Club to-night Manager McMahon has arranged for the appearance at the uptown club of Jeff Perry, the "Walloping Welshman," and Benny Frankin, a local scrapper, who is credited with a delight for a mix-up. Perry was formerly the sparring partner of Owen Moran, and is said to have a great deal of cleverness.

Welterweights will be seen in action at the Long Acre Athletic Association Thursday night, when Kid Wilson of New Jersey and Young Kurtz strip. Wilson has just returned from a tour of the British Isles, where he says he defeated some of the best men of his weight England could produce. Each aspires to the title of welterweight champion of New Jersey, and this affair was mainly framed to give them a chance to battle for the honors.

On Thursday night the Whirlwind Athletic Club which now holds forth in the Clermont Avenue Rink, in Brooklyn, announces a ten-round battle between Jack Dorman and Jack Dohan. Dorman has had a number of successes lately, the most recent being a defeat of Tommy Maloney at the Fairmont Club on Saturday night. He insists that he will continue his winning career in his go with Dohan. The Princess Athletic Club will show on Wednesday, and the Prestone Athletic Club Friday night.

CLOSED RUN AT BROOKLYN.

M. Foster Captures First Place in Putnam A. C. Road Race.

Cross-country runners of Brooklyn yesterday competed in the special run of four miles under the auspices of the Putnam A. C., which was closed to Brooklyn clubs. The event brought out one of the largest fields seen in Brooklyn this season, and M. Foster of the home club, who captured the run, established a new record for the course when he completed the distance in 21:00, lowering the old mark by ten seconds.

The contest was a nip and tuck affair from the start, with Foster and C. Maxwell of the Good Council A. A. fighting hard as a pair, with the remainder of the field only a short distance away. Foster continued to make pace and refused Maxwell to overtake him, despite the efforts of the latter, and the pair worked neck and neck until the last half mile was reached. Here Maxwell made his last bid, but still found his rival possessed of a sprint, and Foster crossed the finish line with a small margin. The order of finish: M. Foster, Putnam A. C.; C. Maxwell, Good Council A. A.; S. Riechard, Trinity Club; J. Paravino, Trinity Club; J. Doerr, Trinity Club; S. Dunn, Sprocket A. C.; R. Rigby, Sprocket A. C.; F. Ochenrieter, Trinity Club; F. Kehoe, Rival A. C.; F. Schwartz, Putnam A. C.; R. Kelly, Sprocket A. C.; J. J. O'Connell, Trinity Club; W. Schmaliz, Trinity Club; S. Donifaro, St. Michael's A. C.; H. Smith, St. Michael's A. C.; J. Carr, Trinity Club; W. Duvall, Jamaica A. C., and J. McGill, Putnam A. C.

In the three-mile run of the Maplewood A. C. first and second places went two members of the Italian-American A. C., W. Meyer and H. Jackson, respectively, while the third place was won by P. Massaro of the Trinity Club.

Only a small field was out for the four-mile chase of the Jamaica A. A. The run was closely contested, although there was not many to make the running, and after a close finish H. Strumble was returned the victor over H. Saville, Trinity Club, and M. Strong of the American A. C. finished third. The winner's time for the four miles was 22:03.

ALCO

First of All Your Car Should be Safe

THREE things you have a right to demand in your automobile—safety, dependability, the stability of the builder.

Materials that stand all the tests it is possible to devise, structural rightness and searching inspection make for safety. The steels that go into an Alco car have been tried, so that their last limit of endurance is known—then the load given them to bear is far below that point. The Alco factor of safety is an unprecedented one.

ONE detail of Alco construction will suffice to illustrate our high ideal of structural perfection. We bought the biggest drop hammer in the world to forge our rear axle from a single piece of steel. The rear axle is the key to safety in a shaft driven car, and we spent $51,700 to make the Alco rear axle safe.

No Alco car goes out for sale before it has passed the inspection of sixty men. They are protecting you.

AS for dependability, Grant drove a stock Alco an average of 65.2 miles an hour in the Vanderbilt race of 1910 which he won. But beyond the mere speed, the car came through that race and the Vanderbilt of 1909 which Grant won in the same stock Alco without strain, and a road race tries the very soul of a car. The Alco you buy is the same general type of engine and chassis.

Finally the American Locomotive Company, builders of the Alco, is a fifty million dollar corporation, that can take ample care of your car after it is in your hands. Our locomotives have been moving the world's goods in many lands for half a century and customers of 30 years' standing still re-order them. We know how to build motors that move vehicles either on roads or rails. We stand back of what we make.

DEMOCRATIC DOCTRINE.

A correspondent whose letter we printed the other day insists that Canadian reciprocity is a measure concocted by a Republican President in order to make a campaign cry, and that "if the Democrats pass the Reciprocity bill, or any other bill, before they tackle the tariff they will be untrue to their constituents and will pave the way to a Republican victory in 1912."

Any man is at liberty to take the purely partisan view of the reciprocity agreement, to put aside and ignore the general merits and benefits of the policy, and to regard only the effect of its enactment upon the fortunes of the Democratic Party. But this partisan way of looking at a measure of National policy does little credit to the understanding, and is about as narrow and unpatriotic a way of viewing public questions as can be imagined. Besides, our correspondent is altogether wrong.

Reciprocity is a time-honored doctrine of the Democratic Party. Speaker Champ Clark pointed that out the day after he was installed in the chair so recently vacated by Uncle Joe. The Democratic Speaker had made no mention of reciprocity in his address accepting the position of Speaker, and that we are convinced was a mistake. But the following day he declared his position, as he had before declared it, as altogether favorable to the ratification of the agreement. He then pointed out that it was in 1854, in the Administration of Franklin Pierce, a Democratic President, that our former reciprocity arrangement with Canada was negotiated. A Republican Administration abrogated this agreement in 1867, when the spirit of protection in this country took on that rabid and extreme form from which have sprung all our tariff abuses. The Republicans themselves more than twenty years later took up the policy of reciprocity, but it was theirs by adoption. The Democratic National platform of 1892 reasserted its paternity by declaring that the principle of reciprocity was "a time-honored doctrine of Democratic faith," and it denounced the sham reciprocity arrangements made by the Republicans. Speaker Clark is on safe ground when he insists that any policy which would open the way to the free exchange of our products with other countries, near or remote, is in entire harmony with the Democratic faith.

Bringing the record down to date, the Speaker showed that when the Canadian agreement was before the House all the Democrats but five voted for it, although all the efforts of the President failed to muster a majority of the Republicans in its support. The Democrats are committed to the ratification of the agreement, and, so far from prejudicing their cause before the people next year, it is as plain as anything can be in politics, our correspondent to the contrary notwithstanding, that ratification would furnish for them a basis for about the most effective appeal they could make to the voters.

THE PART OF THE JUDGES.

In The Sunday Times yesterday there were some remarkable statements made by two Judges of the County Court of Kings County, Judge Dike and Judge Fawcett. They submitted a number of facts on which they based the conclusion that there is a certain degree, and an extended degree, of organization among the criminals of various classes, by which they co-operate with each other in avoiding punishment for their crimes. This organization enables them to command considerable sums of money, to employ able counsel, to secure influence of personal or political sort to induce or impel the courts to deal mildly with them, or to keep their bail low enough to permit them to forfeit it and escape. The instances given by the two Judges could not possibly have occurred in such number and of so much importance as the result of the efforts and resources of single criminals, however successful in their vile occupation. Nor could the crimes of which many of them have been found guilty, and for which they have been punished in the Kings County Court, have been accomplished single-handed.

It is not, perhaps, surprising that the conditions which make organization necessary for the transaction of all sorts of legitimate business should be recognized and met by the criminals, many of whom are of no mean order of intelligence. It is needful that this policy on their part should be combated by a like energy and skill on the [illegible] of the general community and their agents. And in this process the part of the Judges is of immense importance. It is believed by many men of probity on the police force that mistaken leniency from the lower courts makes the work of the police largely useless. It wastes the time of the police, belittles their authority and prestige with the lawbreakers, and stimulates the influences that tend to create the organized criminal gangs. What these two upright and efficient Judges have to say should make every one, from the voter to the Governor, who has any part in the selection of Judges, feel the direct and heavy responsibility that rests upon them. One good Judge can put life and vigor into the hearts of a hundred good policemen, and one poor Judge can paralyze a whole precinct.

MR. HYDE SPEAKS.

At last Mr. Hyde has spoken, and the voices of his detractors should hereafter be silenced. We know now that only the influence of his counsel has hitherto caused him "reluctantly to refuse to reply to inspired reports." A malign political conspiracy has been assailing his reputation in the dark. It has been a rather visible darkness, to be sure, a darkness so visible as to be almost glaringly conspicuous and to throw into the shadow the brightly illuminated innocence of its victim.

The charges against Mr. Hyde are branded as "grotesque falsehoods." He declares that "not a dollar of the city's money has been lost, not a dollar is in jeopardy." This is good news and reassuring. Mr. Hyde declares that the number of people who have requested deposits of city money for various banks is beyond belief, but we believe him, for the number of requests for pecuniary assistance moderately poor persons are compelled to refuse every day is considerable, and measurably increases the wholesome friction of ordinary life.

Mr. Hyde explains that he has been made the victim of "assassins of reputation," and that the loathsome press has refused to print denials and contradictions of statements it has spread before the public. This seems strange, as everything relating to Mr. Hyde has been so much a matter of news that we had supposed every scrap of information touching his various transactions had been printed.

We have not overlooked that part of Mr. Hyde's coherent explanation of his conduct in which he endeavors to show that not he but Controller Prendergast was responsible for the deposit of city money in the Northern Bank. But that is a mere detail. Ill-judged placing of city money is only a small part of the general complaint against Mr. Hyde, which he has now silenced with a few deft strokes of his pen.

THE OUNCE OF PREVENTION.

It was an admirable paper on the protection of life from fire that Fire Commissioner Waldo contributed to The Sunday Times yesterday. There was only one suggestion lacking in it. The Commissioner outlined the measures necessary to protect life, urged that they should be placed under a central bureau, and that this bureau should have authority to enforce them. He did not state specifically the powers he would grant for the purpose of enforcement.

The measures proposed by him are all practical, are not excessively costly, would in the long run be to the profit of all really sound business, and could be applied with a good deal of promptness. The three that seem to us the most needed are: Suitable apparatus for automatic alarm and automatic sprinkling in buildings where many lives are exposed, proper regulations of passage ways and provision for adequate escapes, internal or external, and, finally, provision for thorough fire drills, with accompanying vigilant and intelligent inspection. We think that it will be a surprise to our readers generally to learn from Mr. Waldo how extremely simple and feasible the installation of all these measures and precautions really would be under proper and energetic central control. They relate almost exclusively to buildings in which material is used and a number of persons are employed, in such a manner as to endanger life unless sufficient safeguards are enforced, a class of buildings of which the Asch factory is a concrete example. That is to say, that with these precautions not a life would have been lost in that building, and these precautions would make practically safe thousands of buildings of the same general order, and would literally protect hundreds of thousands of lives now imperiled in them.

Unfortunately there would undoubtedly be opposition to the enforcement of these precautions among a certain class of employers, not because they are willfully indifferent as to the lives of their employés, for they frequently are reckless as to their own and those of their families, but because they are ignorant and thoughtless, are engrossed in their immediate aims, and have not the foresight to understand the risks they run or impose on others. In reality, however, the conditions of safety proposed by Mr. Waldo would in the long run be to the profit of the men engaged in business where these are necessary. The simple element of insurance, and of exemption from loss by fire, would repay the most if not all of the cost. There is a large and increasingly numerous class of employers who understand this, and they would co-operate in creating a public sentiment that would aid powerfully any measures really tending to sane and sufficient means of fire prevention.

The practical question in connection with the measures proposed is that of prompt, efficient, impartial, and general enforcement. The means now available for such regulations as are required by law are ridiculously feeble, slow, and negligible by those to whom they apply. In the main, about all that can be done in case of violations is to turn the evidence over to the Law Department of the city, which will enforce sundry fines which, in comparison with the nature of the offense, are ludicrous, and this only after a delay of from three months to three years. There is, we are convinced, only one means of enforcement that will apply immediately to all cases and will secure reasonable promptness in obeying the law. That is the power in the hands of responsible officials to close buildings, or parts of buildings, in which failure to comply with the law endangers life. The proper officials should, in other words, have the right, and it should be their imperative duty, to establish a quarantine, to enforce absolute isolation, in case of peril to life from fire, precisely as the health authorities now act in case of peril from infectious disease. This is recommended generally by Commissioner Waldo, who plainly sees the dread analogy. We only wish to emphasize the need of power to stop a dangerous business at once and completely where those engaged in it will not remove the source of danger. Such power would, of course, be subject to some abuse, but its exercise would involve such plain and conspicuous interests, those of the insurance companies, for example, and those of all engaged in possibly dangerous business, that it would be watched with the utmost jealousy.

A RUN FOR HIS MONEY.

All that Col. Roosevelt asks is that his statements should be taken at their face value. At the time of writing, however, this seems a great deal for the ex-President to ask. Nearly everybody has learned, by more or less painful experience, that it is generally better to take Col. Roosevelt's statements in a purely Rooseveltian sense. The mood, the time, the place, all must be considered, or the statement leads you astray.

In Spokane on Saturday Col Roosevelt did not want to be his party's candidate for President in 1912. That is what his assertion that he was not an aspirant for anything because he has had everything meant, if it meant anything at all. But how he will feel somewhere else next Wednesday or next Saturday is quite another matter. It will be noticed, by the way, that the Colonel is looming up again in the news. He and Mr. Bryan came to the surface about the same moment. "No other man alive has had such a good run for his money," says the ex-President. We believe that statement to be strictly true. And he is still having his run, in the good old Roosevelt way. To say "You won't have to puzzle as to my motives if you will accept my statements at their face value" has the true Roosevelt ring; it sounds like the utterance of a plain, straightforward man, with the gift of putting his thoughts forward attractively. If he had said "If you always believe everything I say you will never lose faith in me" it might have sounded banal.

BRAINS.

We are sure that the deepest sympathy will be felt in all classes of society with the anatomists who are complaining that they are deficient in knowledge of the anatomy and structure of the human brain merely because of the difficulty of obtaining first-class brains for dissection. This long felt want should certainly be supplied, but that the plan of the editor of American Medicine to urge intelligent men to will their brains to Science is a sure way out of the difficulty may well be doubted.

Many men of reasonable intelligence will, in the circumstances, be careful not to trust their brains to the investigators, even when they have no further use for them. The difference between the ordinary pauper brain, so easily obtainable for laboratory use, and the brain of the supposedly intelligent citizen may not be so great after all. There are many men accounted extraordinarily intelligent in their generation who may entertain secret doubts of their own mental powers.

We are afraid the scientific investigators will have an oversupply of very ordinary brains on their hands if the suggestion of American Medicine is carried out. A better way would be for the men of science to select the brains they think they want, on the hoof, so to speak, apply for the use of them, when the time comes, and be content to wait. It would undoubtedly be esteemed a high honor for a man to be singled out this way, stimulating to the object himself, and immensely gratifying to his family. It would be a new and precious order of merit.

THE NEW YORK DIFFERENTIAL.

A litigation with the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade, the Merchants' Association, and the Produce Exchange as plaintiffs, and thirty railroads as defendants, deserves more attention than it has received. A generation ago New York was such a favored destination that it was necessary to charge more for freight coming here if any was to go anywhere else. A differential was therefore imposed in order to reduce New York's monopoly through its commercial and physical advantages. If the rates to other destinations at the seaboard were not lower they could get trade only by a rate "war." It was generally agreed that the hostilities ought to be averted, and the country's commerce distributed in this manner. The Inter-State Commerce Commission held hearings, and could discover no other or better way.

Now there is no longer danger of a rate war, and New York stands some chance of coming into its own. The Inter-State Commerce Commission controls rates, and those to New York may be lowered safely to an equality with all seaboard ports. The rebate to other cities may be abolished, with the aid, advice, and consent of the Commissioners, and the result may be the same as in the abolition of other rebates. That is, those who profit by the abolition of the discrimination will applaud the law, and those who lose their accustomed privilege will be in some danger of revising their opinion of a law which works so differently from expectation. It was a bitter discovery to the rebate takers that the law forbade both giving and taking them. It was the other fellow's rebate which was objectionable, not the rebate received by the man who complained of his competitor's advantage. And when the abolition of rebates raised rates there was a rush to get the rebated figure made the lawful figure by complaints before the Commission. New York's case is similar. She wants nothing more than equality, and those who have enjoyed an advantage like nothing less.

It is just, but it is a hardship. The outports have striven hard for what they have gained at New York's expense. They have not idly collected their rebates or differentials, but have improved their facilities until they equal or sometimes surpass ours. Now there is hope of a tariff which shall not seek to remedy the natural disadvantages of our competitors, but which shall allow us to profit by ours. It is only the overflow which will go elsewhere under such conditions, and it is our concern to limit the outflow by making our accommodations as good and cheap as any elsewhere. New York may come to think the inter-State commerce law is not so bad after all.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Gay Uniforms Do Have Attractiveness. There may be something, and even a good deal, in the suggestion made by one of our readers that the National Guard regiments could be more easily kept up to regulation strength and their number increased if the former picturesqueness and magnificence of their uniforms were revived.

There is no doubt that the human male, like the males of other species, and for precisely the same reason, has an instinctive yearning for personal decoration. And though in recent years this inclination has been fought and to a considerable extent conquered by the men who are or call themselves civilized, there still remains in them all the old belief that fine feathers do make fine birds, and not a few gladly avail themselves of any decently good excuse for returning to the bright colors and elaborate ornaments which all men who could afford them wore only a few generations ago. Almost beyond question, therefore, gay uniforms with many brass buttons and much gold lace would appreciably increase the attractiveness of military service.

But that buttons and lace would also increase the military efficiency of the men who wore them cannot be as easily maintained. On the contrary, the recent tendency in all armies has been to minimize the visible difference between officers and privates as much as possible, and to make them both as inconspicuous objects in the landscape as severely plain uniforms of neutral tints rendered feasible. Just as warships are painted a dull drab, so soldiers are dressed in sad khaki. Long range rifles and the pageantry of war do not go well together.

An attempt to combine the attractiveness of the old system with the practical utility of the new by having one uniform for service in the field and another for the parades of peace would bring forward at once the vital matter of expense, and it is not by making membership in the National Guard more costly that young men will be brought into it.

Power Put Where It Belongs. Justice Goff's decision that the County Medical Society could not refuse a doctor's resignation simply because it wanted to try him on charges affecting his relation, not to the society, but to the public, was a severe blow to that organization. In effect, the decision upheld the society's right to discipline its members in the comparatively trivial matters that affected itself, but left it powerless to control or punish them in those vastly more important because involving grave public interests.

With all due respect to Justice Goff, therefore, it is fortunate that the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has taken a view of the law different from his and holds that the County Medical Society not only can but that its first duty is to do exactly what he declared illegal. The reversal is complete, and the society can now go ahead with its beneficent endeavors to enforce the ethics and moralities of the medical profession, unhampered by an interpretation of its powers which, plausibly supported by technical arguments, made it helpless to deal with a man who preferred resignation to trial.

As to the merits of the particular case that elicited these two decisions, we have not even an opinion to express, but of the society's competence to settle it, and of its intention to settle it fairly, there is not the slightest question—or at least none that is at once disinterested and reasonable.

If, now, the County Medical Society can only win a like victory in the suits it has instituted against two Christian Science "healers," its utility to the public will be even more increased. In those suits, however, it will have to contend against the specious plea of "religious freedom," and apparently there is no possibility of convincing juries, and little chance of convincing Judges, that the Eddyite practitioners ever do anything for their patients except the one thing which they never do—pray for their recovery. That prayer is no part of the Eddyite system, which is a pantheism far too vague to include personal appeal to a deity, is a fact which even a little study of the sect's books reveals, but people outside of the sect seem to be incapable of learning it.

A Difficult Task Well Done. Capt. Petersen will be the object of so much criticism—most of it highly inexpert—for the grounding of the Prinzess Irene, that it is only fair to call attention to the skill and success with which 1,700 passengers were under his supervision transferred to the Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm.

That was an achievement the magnitude of which even landsmen can understand, for most of them have had some experience of the difficulties and dangers encountered when men, women, and children have to be moved from big boats to little ones, or in the reverse direction. Even in landlocked harbors, and where nothing worthy to be called a "sea" is running, this is always a rather ticklish operation. Doing it on the open ocean, where a big surf is running up on a shelving beach, means exposure to accidents of half a hundred kinds, and the avoidance of them all in handling passengers by the hundred was a triumphant combination of good luck and good seamanship.

A fine feature of the transfer was the giving of precedence to the steerage folk over the cabin travelers. It would be snobbish to call that magnanimous, but it was certainly wise, since whatever danger of panic there was lay in the steerage, and nothing was more likely to calm the immigrants than the news that they were to go first.

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT PARSONS

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The grotesque statement which Commissioner Stover laid before the Park Board on Thursday last, preliminary to his motion to dismiss the landscape architect, Samuel Parsons, presents the ever recurring conflict between the Park Commissioner inflamed with ambition to alter the parks according to his own fancies and the expert, one of whose prime functions it is to protect the parks against such undertakings.

I write to call attention to the singular likeness between this attempt to get rid of the landscape architect and that which occurred during the term of Mayor Grant. Commissioner Stover announced that his further proceedings in the case would wait upon a report from the Commissioners of Accounts. Twenty years ago the enemies of the landscape architect sought to put him out of office through the help of a report by the Commissioners of Accounts, at the head of whom at the time, I believe, was Commissioner Wahle, afterward a Magistrate.

The attack upon Mr. Vaux, the landscape architect at that time, failed, and it is to be sincerely hoped that it will fail now in the case of Mr. Vaux's worthy successor, Samuel Parsons. PAUL DANA.

Sunday Times's Illustrated Supplement

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Norman Hapgood's commendation of The New York Sunday Times illustrated supplement at the meeting held to promote the improvement of newspaper comic supplements, as reported in to-day's Times, moves me to tell of a recent satisfactory experience of mine with The Times "picture page." During a stay of several months last year at a beach resort, near San Diego, Cal., I both found and gave much pleasure by sharing with a family of three children The Sunday Times supplements mailed to me from New York by my father.

Seated in a Morris chair, with a 6-year-old girl on my lap, her 9-year-old brother on one arm of the chair, and the baby of 2½ years, held on the other arm, I would spread out the sheet and show all the pictures, explaining them; sometimes, for the baby's sake, turning the explanation into a sort of story by adding a few imaginary details.

Every picture had some interest for at least one or two, many for all three of the group; and their questions often made me wish I knew more than I did of European monarchs, airships, boy-scouts, foreign cities, and the hundreds of other subjects depicted. In many cases I could find something in the minds of the older children with which to connect the knowledge newly-obtained from the pictures. I recommend The Times supplement as a delightfully entertaining means of enlarging the mind-world of a child.

A Cat's Affection.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your "mildly critical" remarks in this morning's paper in regard to cats has moved me to rise from a sick bed to state a few facts which have come under my personal observation and which can readily be vouched for.

You say, "Nobody really likes cats." I am sure I am not alone in confessing to a sincere and loyal affection for the cats which have sojourned beneath my roof, and there is no doubt but this affection has been reciprocated unselfishly.

Three years ago my home in the western part of the State was broken up, and one of the real sorrows of this upheaval was the parting with a beautiful cat named "Tiger." He went to a good home, where he has been tenderly cared for, but when I have gone back at yearly intervals if you could see him come bounding toward me at the first sound of my voice, with every manifestation of delight possible for a creature not endowed with the power of speech, I think you would be moved to retract your statement in regard to their lack of affection. Baltimore's Segregation Law.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read your editorial comment, "An Experiment Full of Uncertainties," and as I think you mean to deal fairly with the question, I thank you. The segregation law of Baltimore, like the other (in)-famous Jim Crow laws of the South, is designed only, purposely, and intentionally simply to degrade and humiliate the negro. It is a most peculiar measure to remedy "troubles created by race antagonisms and animosities." As for segregating the white man, that part of it is a huge joke. It brings to mind the Jim Crow cars and other Jim Crow places in the South which white men are forbidden to enter, but into which they go when they wish to.

As for the negro living under social and economic standards of his own, and building a public sentiment, &c., white people have some responsibility in the matter, and it is useless to try to shunt the negro aside, malign him, and endeavor to crush him and think thereby you are building up your own standards. In helping us to rise you help yourselves! RUTH HAMPTON.

The Prinzess Irene's Predicament.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Could a more impressive argument be found (and we have many of them) for making Montauk Point the port of entry for the huge transatlantic leviathans than the Prinzess Irene fast in the sands? Why cannot we have a comprehensive scheme for this port that will embrace all of its possibilities, and not have a $100,000,000 scheme for Jamaica Bay, a $100,000,000 scheme for South Brooklyn, a $1,000,000,000 scheme for the extension of Manhattan Island down the bay, and no scheme at all for the best dockage of the whole lot, viz., Staten Island?

What ought to be done with the upper bay should be to make it an immense basin like the East India Docks on the Isle of Dogs, below London Bridge, or like Tilbury. The old notion of docking in the mouths of rivers where there is no sea room is ridiculous nowadays when we build such large ships.

Schoolgirls Spoiled the Lectures.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is the rising generation selfish and without thought for the comfort, nay, the rights, of other people? The New Theatre has given New York the privilege of hearing four lectures on "The Development of the English Drama," by Prof. Brander Matthews, illustrated by plays and scenes from plays. Truly a treat, and we considered ourselves fortunate in obtaining tickets for the course. Alas! our joy was short-lived, for we had the misfortune to sit near a group of schoolgirls, who chattered and giggled to such an extent that it was impossible to hear one word out of three that were spoken from the stage.

THREE SUFFERERS.

ENLISTED MEN NOT MENIALS.

Says Line Drawn Between Them and Officers Is Military, Not Social.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to take exception to the letter of "N. W. C." in this morning's Times, declaring that the soldier's uniform "marks him as a menial." I do not think for a moment that the public at large have this feeling in regard to our soldiers, and the fact that at certain times and certain places there has been a tendency to discriminate against soldiers and sailors entering places of public amusement has attracted attention by reason that it is so unusual.

The history of this country shows that all classes in times of National emergency, such as the civil war and Spanish war, enlist and wear with pride the uniform of the enlisted man regardless of social ties. I, myself, am the son of a naval officer and a brother of a West Point graduate, but enlisted as a private soldier and was proud to be accepted in the Spanish war. Indeed, our crack militia organizations throughout the country have their enlisted men, and also the Naval Militia has its enlisted sailors, composed at all times of the best social element in the community. I belonged as a private to Squadron A of this city which is composed almost exclusively of college graduates and club members, and the record of the squadron in the Spanish war was met with the highest commendation by the regular army officers. In my regiment in the Spanish war, the Rough Riders, we had men enlisted whose families are historic. Indeed, in the regular army a very large percentage of the officers are men who have been promoted from the ranks of the regular service and given commissions, and also men who served in the volunteer armies in the ranks and have risen through regular promotion for merit. These facts would not be so if "N. W. C." were right and soldiers were treated as "menials."

The relation of an enlisted man to an officer is one drawn, not for social reasons, but because of necessity to maintain strict military discipline. I experienced this personally in the Spanish war, when I was subsequently promoted from a private to a Captain, and served as staff officer with many regiments, and the superior discipline which was maintained in the regular army regiments over the militia regiments was largely due to the fact that the enlisted man was treated as a unit in the organization under the established code, where each inferior unit had to obey respectfully his superior. For instance, the private soldiers salute and use the expression "Sir" to their officer, but the Second Lieutenant also salutes salute and use the expression "Sir" to their Lieutenant, and the First Lieutenant to the Captain, and so on up the line, each one observing this attitude and language as a mark of respect to a superior officer from whom he must take orders. In the volunteer and militia regiments, where this code was not so strictly followed, there was a marked deterioration in discipline and efficiency.

Social Status of Governesses.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The discussion now being carried on in your paper in regard to the insult recently offered to a young woman of birth and education at Annapolis raises a question that seems to me equally, even more important though less debatable than that other: Are women to receive equal pay with men? A man, no matter how inferior his connections, nor how insignificant the position he holds, may be received in the best circles of society on a footing of equality. A woman of the best connections, birth and education, and engaged in no less responsible work than the training of the modern plutocrat's children, is treated by her employer and his guests as a social pariah.

No doubt this idea of the necessary social inferiority of the governess or tutor originates in the tradition of the English novel. But how absurd to apply to the nouveau riche society of America conditions that are true only in a hereditary aristocracy of long standing. Undoubtedly the governess in England or on the Continent is almost invariably the social inferior of her employer. In our society this is not so, and should not be.

A SELF-SUPPORTING WOMAN.

A "Poser."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would be glad if I could get expression from your readers on the following question: "What is the measure by which it may be determined whether an individual has attained the highest form of general knowledge attainable by man?" This should be expressed in something the individual ought to be capable of doing in the line of mental reasoning. It is very important that men, who profess to teach us things worldly or divine, should measure up to some certain standard, but what that standard shall be who can tell us! WILLIAM VONDERFEINE.

Unlimited Time to Reverse Action?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If, as you say,

then every amendment would pass. It would be only necessary to coerce the unwilling and wait for time, apparently unlimited, to change their ideas. Please let us know.

A Piercing Whistle.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Where is the Anti-Noise Society located? Is it possible to arrest the man who whistles on Sixth Avenue, Fortieth and Forty-first Streets? He has a hurdy-gurdy, and makes existence unendurable. That piercing whistle will cause a couple of hundred people now sane to become raving lunatics if he comes around here another day. Can you do anything to make him stop? R. G.

Bright Uniforms Interdicted by Law.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, "Guardsman," is correct in his statement to the effect that handsome dress uniforms are an aid to recruiting and incidentally to discipline. Unfortunately, since the State surrendered its power through the Dick Militia bill, there seems to be no hope that anything can be done to bring about a change, so that every organization would have its own distinctive dress. THE FLY.

The ghost of the author, moved by the sight of Dr. Fred S. Lee's moving pictures, desires to make some alterations in his well-known verses, as follows:

Most injurious typhoid fly,
Drink with you no more will I.
When you settle on my cup,
I, perchance, bacteria sup.
After what I've seen to-day,
I would have you chased away.

I dislike those feet of thine;
What they've touched I shall decline.
Carrier of germ and spore,
Get thee hence! Return no more!
Spreader of disease, begone!
Kindly leave my food alone.

FOR PUBLIC HEARINGS ON GAYNOR CHARTER

Joint Legislative Committee Likely to be Named—Ivins Is Ready to Talk.

MORE SURPRISES FOUND

Further Provisions for Increasing Powers of the Mayor Revealed in Full Text of Document.

All the members of the New York City delegation in the Legislature received yesterday printed copies of the proposed City Charter presented on behalf of Mayor Gaynor just before the adjournment at Albany last week. They will put in a large part of their time between now and the reconvening of the Legislature on April 17 in perusing its various provisions.

While none of the leaders of the majority will say what the probable attitude of the Democratic organization will be toward the Mayor's Charter, they all give the impression that it will be most carefully and minutely considered. From what they have to say privately about the Charter it is gathered that in all probability a joint committee of both houses of the Legislature will be appointed to hold hearings in this city.

William M. Ivins, Chairman of the Charter Revision Commission of two years ago, which drew an elaborate document only to have it thrown out by the Legislature, is giving a great deal of attention to the Mayor's recommendations, and says that he will have a good deal to say if he has an opportunity. Julius Mayer, counsel for the Hammond Committee, the joint legislative body on charter revision appointed by the Republican Legislature a year ago, whose recommendations were submitted to the Legislature recently, also will take a prominent part in the hearings.

A careful examination of the Gaynor Charter has revealed several important points which were not touched upon in the digest of it given out by Corporation Counsel Watson. It was remarked then that there were many provisions for increasing the powers and jurisdiction of the Mayor and of the departments directly under him, and it is found that there are several other provisions in the document to the same end.

One of the most important of these relates to the new Board of Administrative Detail, to be composed of the Mayor, the Controller, and the Corporation Counsel, the Mayor thus having control through his own vote and that of his appointee at the head of the Law Department. This board is to have practical control over the appointment and tenure of office of all cashiers in the various city departments, including the offices of the elective county and borough officials. The section granting this power reads:

> The head of any department, bureau, or office, or any board or commission of the city or of any borough thereof or any county comprised therein, may, with the approval of the Board of Administrative Detail, appoint, and may at pleasure remove, one or more cashiers and may designate one or more of such cashiers to act as a purchasing or disbursing officer and to sign the name of the head of such department, bureau, or office or that of the President or Chairman of such board or commission to official communications, documents, negotiable instruments, or other papers as may be described or enumerated in said designation.

The last clause would seem to mean that the Board of Administrative Detail is to have control of the appointment of Acting Commissioners or other department heads, even in the county and borough offices, in the absence of the chiefs. This is similar to the control that the Fire Commissioner has now over the designation by Chief Croker of a Deputy Chief to act as the head of the fire-fighting force in his absence or sickness.

Some comment is being made over the absolute control given the Fire Commissioner in the new Charter over promotions—under civil service restrictions, of course. Under the present Charter the Chief submits the list from which promotions are to be made, and if the Commissioner rejects the names he submits another list. All this power of the Chief is eliminated in the new Charter. The section on promotions in the Fire Department reads:

> Promotion of officers and members of the uniformed force shall be made by the Commissioner upon the basis of seniority, meritorious service in the department, and superior capacity as shown by competitive examination. Individual acts of personal bravery may be treated as an element of meritorious service in such examination with the relative rating to be fixed by the Municipal Civil Service Commission. The Commissioner shall transmit to the Municipal Civil Service Commission in advance of such examination the complete record of each candidate for promotion.

Another provision in the new Charter, the subject of which is not touched upon in the present Charter, is that which specifies the qualifications of the Mayor and Borough Presidents. The former must have been an "elector" of the city for ten years, and the latter must have been enrolled voters in their respective boroughs for at least five years "immediately" preceding their election.

The office of the Commissioners of Accounts is changed by cutting its membership down to one man. There has only been one incumbent since Mayor Gaynor came into office. The office is also placed more specifically under the control of the Mayor in the new Charter, it being stated specifically that the Commissioner shall conduct only such investigations as the Mayor shall direct. The present Charter says that the Commissioner, in addition to this, may conduct "such other investigations" as he "may deem for the best interests of the city."

HITS CARNEGIE FOUNDATION.

Presbyterian Suggests Christian Colleges Raise Their Own Pension Fund.

The Rev. Dr. William S. Plummer Bryan, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, Chicago, attacks the policy and practice of the Carnegie Foundation in its dealings with colleges founded by Christian bodies in an article published in The Princeton Theological Review for April.

He assails President Pritchett of the foundation both for his own theological views and for his presumption in defining the theology of the churches, and proposes the raising by all Protestant bodies of a rival fund to the Carnegie for the pensioning of professors.

The Carnegie Foundation is a fund of $10,000,000, the income of which is used to pension college professors. At first colleges supported by the State were excluded, but later practically all colleges were let in, save only those whose trustees were named by some religious body and limited to members of that body.

Dr. Bryan relates the story of a dozen or more colleges in its relation with the foundation and sounds alarm for the Christian religion if such money power is to govern in education of young men who are to enter the Christian ministry and sit in pews of Christian churches.

Mr. Bryan argues that if all Christian bodies get together they can, for all of their colleges and all who wish to get out of bondage to the Carnegie Foundation, establish a fund that will be even larger than the Carnegie, and that will be administered not by Andrew Carnegie and by a foundation President who declares that prayer is ineffective, but by Christian men in sympathy with modern Christian ideals.

"Many colleges now in the Carnegie Foundation parted from the Church with great reluctance," he said. "Their attachment to the Church remains. The establishment of the Christian rather than the Carnegie foundation might mark the glad day of their return."

DENIES GARDEN'S SALE.

Henry Corn Says He Has Not Bought the Madison Square Property.

Henry Corn, the well-known real estate operator, who was reported on Saturday to have purchased Madison Square Garden for $3,400,000, with the intention of using the site a year hence for loft and office buildings, denied yesterday that he had purchased the property. Mr. Corn said that there was not a word of truth in the assertion that he was the buyer.

"I never had an option on the property," he added. "I never traded in an option on the property. I am not even acquainted with any of the Directors of Madison Square Garden."

CLOWN OFF DUTY A SATURNINE MAN

Smiles Painted on His Face to Keep Him from Looking Dour in the Ring.

A HARD WORKER, HE SAYS

No Easy Matter to Catch the Public Eye and Harvest a Good Laugh —The Goose Comedians.

Every day fifty dour-faced men can be seen going by twos and threes into Madison Square Garden, where Barnum & Bailey's folks, human and otherwise, are staying these days. They are the clowns.

"And why," demanded a curious layman, buttonholing one of them the other day—"why are you so saturnine? Why don't you smile?"

"Because," answered the clown, with deep gloom, "I am gay during working hours. Being saturnine is my only form of relaxation. You don't mind, do you? And, anyway," he went on with even greater melancholy, "you never saw a clown smile in your life. He doesn't have to. The grin is painted on him, for fear, I suppose, that he might loaf on the job and look serious when the whole audience was laughing and saying, 'Ain't he comical?'"

"No, the clowns never, never smile. You will see this clearly if you drop in some day to watch a rehearsal and see the circus in its shirt sleeves. While the acrobats and animals are plunging about in the rings you become aware, from time to time, of small groups of persons, coatless and dusty and commonplace enough, wandering around the oval. They make strange gestures, meaningless because the properties are missing, and now and then, in a casual sort of way and apparently without animus, they knock each other down. They are the clowns, rehearsing.

"I am a clown," admitted Fred Egener the other day when a reporter caught him on his way for a chat with his tamed geese, who share stellar honors with him when the big show is on. "I think a clown is just like the wandering minstrel of old. He has to make the rounds of the oval, doing his stunts again and again and trying to catch the eyes (he can't possibly catch the ears) of the people in the audience. A theatrical comedian has his audience penned up before him, and they either have to watch or go to sleep, but our audiences have plenty of other things to look at, and you've got to work to catch their attention. It's hard work, a clown's life."

But that the clowns do get the attention, particularly of the children, is gracefully admitted by the circus owners, who go down deep in their pockets to buy the fun. The older patrons can appreciate the skill or daring displayed in the rings, but the waves of glee are inspired by the clowns, who work hard for them. They are not allowed to obscure the activities in the rings, however, and the sound of a certain whistle brings them all to a standstill, so that no eye may be distracted from something of particular importance in the centre of the arena. Their acts are poured in between for good measure, and are allowed to proceed in riotous fashion when the setting is being shifted, or for a moment or two while the equestrians pause for breath.

The clowns are the busiest people in the whole circus. The stars in spangles, the wonderful folk of the trapeze and the dashing riders, who hang by their teeth or dive through the air, can come out and be applauded and disappear into private life again behind the scenes. It is not so with the clown. His performance is continuous from the time the band strikes up until he has ridden the finish of his burlesque of the animal race, made up, perhaps, as a monkey or dodo. He rehearses every morning to keep in practice and to keep up with the times. When he isn't rehearsing or performing his own act, he is likely to be found serving as the hind legs of the trick donkey, or the front legs of the educated giraffe. And when he is doing none of these he is scratching his head in a wistful pursuit of some new idea that will please the ringmaster and bring down the house.

The clown has to carry his properties with him like the strolling player, and some wonderful properties the clowns have this year. One of them wanders around with his own Atlantic Ocean, so labeled in case you should not recognize it, and from this he yanks large fish, and into this he disappears, waving bare toes, and reappearing from time to time to splutter water for yards about. Egener, he of the geese, forsakes them from time to time, to make the rounds with his own rainstorm, which spouts absurdly out of the very umbrella which protects him from it.

Those geese of Egener's accompany him at times, each hitched to a tiny gig and racing for all they are worth, which isn't much, though you mustn't tell Egener that. He is immensely proud of what comedy they possess, for he says he had to work hard to pound it into them.

"When once they learn a trick," he says, "they never forget it, and that is one comfort. My hardest work is training pigs, for they have even less sense. It took me all Winter to train my pig to squeal at the right time, and I am growing gray with the constant fear that he will miss his cue."

Egener's pig makes the round of the arena, embraced in the clown's arms and squealing furiously. This is largely because a milk bottle is held tantalizingly out of reach, but every now and then, when the refreshment is furnished, the squeal drops into a gurgle of contentment.

A bunch of the clowns this year are doing a suffragette act, that involves skirts and a raid by the police. Finaliy the patrol wagan arrives, and the whole chattering party is thrown in and rushed off, while the Japanese acrobats take up the general attention, and the clowns prepare to come in and be absurd again at the next interval. Harry La Pearl, the clown who was married at the Garden last year, wears the harem skirt this season.

The show enters its last fortnight at the Garden with this afternoon's performance, after which it will pack up and move over to Brooklyn and the beginning of life beneath the tents.

PLAYERS GOING TO BUFFALO.

Nine from The New Theatre Will Form a Home Organization There.

Nine players recruited from the regular and associate members of The New Theatre company will start for Buffalo this week to form the nucleus of a stock organization to give plays during the Summer at Teck Theatre in that city. The members are A. E. Anson, Frank Gillmore, Cecil Yapp, Leah Bateman-Hunter, Reginald Barlow, John Sutherland, Russell Reid, Edwin Cushman, and Miss Grey. Additional members of the company will be Ruth Chester, Laura McGilverey, and Bertha Noyes.

Mr. Anson and Mr. Gillmore intend to run the stock company much on the lines of The New Theatre, without stars or featured players. The season will open with a presentation of "The Liars."

Cast Filled for a New Play.

The company engaged for Wagenhals & Kemper's production of "What the Doctor Ordered" will assemble for rehearsal at the Astor Theatre this morning. The cast was completed yesterday by the arrival on the Coronia of Allan Pollock, the English actor, who has been appearing here in "Seven Days." He had just two days' vacation at his home in England. Other members of the company are Jacob Wendell, Jr., Virginia Hammond, William McVey, Anne Meredith, Kate Meek, and Mrs. Harriet Otis Dellenbaugh. It is the intention of Wagenhals & Kemper to present the play at the Astor on April 17, but it may be necessary to advance the date.

THE LAST SUNDAY CONCERT.

A Long and Varied Programme Performed at Metropolitan Opera House.

The last of the season's popular Sunday concerts, the twenty-first was given last evening at the Metropolitan Opera House. The audience was large and seemed able to extract enjoyment from every number of the programme, which, like most of the twenty that have preceded it this season, was calculated to give a large amount of music in great variety. The MacDowell Chorus, under Kurt Schindler, occupied an important place upon it. The women's choir sang the "Spinning Song" from "The Flying Dutchman," with Miss Rennyson and Miss Sapin in the solos of Senta and Mary, and "The Messengers of Peace" from "Rienzi," with Mme. Gluck in the solo part. The whole chorus sang the sonorous "Hymn to Apollo," with Mme. Gluck, from Chabrier's incomplete opera, "Briséïs," and the very characteristic cantata, "Joshua," by Maussorgsky; also Borodin's "Danses Polovtziennes," from "Prince Igor," all of which the chorus gave at its recent concert.

Mme. Alma Gluck also sang the air "With Verdure Clad," from "The Creation," with beautiful tone and in musical style. Mr. Herbert Witherspoon was heard in three old ballads, in which his excellent English diction counted for much, and Mme. Louise Homer gave a fine performance of Gluck's air, "Divinités du Styx." Violin solos were contributed by Mr. Francis MacMillen, who played Paganini's D major concerto and Wilhelmj's transcription of Schubert's song, "Ave Maria." Mr. MacMillen disappointed those who had heard him play much better earlier in the season. Nobody is obliged to play Paganini's showy and empty concerto, fortunately; but nobody should play it except with accurate intonation of all its difficult passages and a generally brilliant and incisive execution to make it tolerable. Mr. MacMillen was far from accurate in the passages of double stopping, especially those in octaves; and the same was true in other pieces that he played.

Mme. Bernice di Pasquali, who was heard a few times in previous seasons in some of the coloratura parts in Italian operas, and lately in the Sunday night concerts, sang the mad scene of Ophélie from Thomas's "Hamlet." Her singing seemed to please the Sunday night audience more than it did the operagoers on subscription evenings, who did not like the strong tremolo that afflicts her voice, nor its rather thin quality, nor her lack of distinction and style and real brilliancy in music of a florid character. But this audience was indulgent. Mme. Pasquali, like everybody else on the programme, was recalled several times. Only Mr. Macmillen appeared to be exempt from the rule printed on the programme of "positively no encores," and he broke it twice.

THE SYMPHONY SOCIETY.

Last Concert of the Season with Mme. Gadski as Soloist.

A special concert for the benefit of the pension fund of the organization ended the season of the Symphony Society of New York yesterday afternoon in The New Theatre. Mr. Damrosch had arranged a popular programme for the occasion. Mme. Gadski was the soloist, and the audience was a large one in consequence.

Mme. Gadski first sang the air from "Der Freischütz," to which she added a song, Mr. Damrosch playing the accompaniment. Later she was heard in a group of songs: Schubert's "Who is Sylvia?" and "Gretchen am Spinnrad," two songs by Franz, and two by Schumann. To these she added Mrs. Beach's "The Year's at the Spring." Mr. Damrosch played the accompaniments for all of these songs.

The orchestral numbers in the programme were the overture to "Mignon," a serenade of Haydn, a gavotte of Bach with instrumentation by Dr. Leopold Damrosch, Tschaikowsky's "Mozartiana" suite, Saint-Saëns's symphonic poem, "Le Rouet d'Omphale"; Johann Strauss's waltz, "Voce di Primavera," and Ochs's humorous variations on a German song. The programme mentioned the fact that these variations would parody the manners of Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Verdi, Gounod, and Wagner, but forgot to mention Johann Strauss, whose variation came in the centre of these.

SIX-DAY WEEK A SUCCESS.

Post Office Is Preparing to Meet the New Law, Effective July 1.

The Post Office clerks held a special meeting yesterday in Terrace Garden, 145 East Fifty-eighth Street, at which 150 new members were enrolled. Delegates were presnt from Newark, Yonkers, Newburg, Brooklyn, and other places, and the bills for retiring and pensioning civil service employes were discussed.

Preparation for the six-day week, which becomes effective July 1, was discussed. Experiments began here two weeks ago by giving the letter carriers a Sunday off in restricted sections and extending it until all in the city had the day off. The experiment has been extended to the clerks, each of who has a day off each week.

It was stated that similar experiments in Jersey City, Newburg, Newark, Yonkers, and other places have been successful. No extra appropriation is provided for the new conditions, so that they must be met by a readjustment of the work. The Post Office officials say that when the law becomes effective conditions will have been arranged to comply with it without a hitch.

POULTNEY BIGELOW MARRIED

Makes Miss Pritchard His Bride in Quiet Ceremony at Sharon, Conn.

The marriage of Poultney Bigelow and Miss Lillian Pritchard of Malden-on-Hudson took place on Friday at the home of the Rev. L. E. White, pastor of the Congregational Church of Sharon, Conn. Mr. Bigelow and Miss Pritchard drove over from Malden, where the bride had been the Public Librarian. Mr. and Mrs. Bigelow stayed at Sharon till Saturday and then drove back to Malden.

This is the second marriage of Mr. Bigelow, his first wife being Miss Editha Evelyn Jaffray of this city, whom he married in 1884. In 1902 Mrs. Bigelow obtained a divorce and is now living with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Francis A. Clark, at 1,014 Fifth Avenue. SOCIETY PLAYHOUSE PRESSED FOR FUNDS

Unable to Meet Expenses, Although Members Are from Washington's Wealthy Set.

NEIGHBORS COMPLAIN OF IT

Ambassador Bryce One of Those to Protest at Late Night Noises—Restaurant Abandoned.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Washington's latest club, The Playhouse, established by a score of the richest men and women of society, is reported in serious financial difficulties, and threatened with disorganization, even before the close of the social season. While every member of the club is a person of wealth, and its membership culled from the most fashionable and exclusive circles, both resident and official, its revenues are insufficient for its running expenses. New members are deterred from coming in by the fact that the residents of the aristocratic neighborhood in which it is situated have drawn up a protest to the District authorities against its continuance.

Directly opposite the British Embassy, in N Street, just off Connecticut Avenue, Ambassador Bryce was the first to raise his voice against the noise of dance and song several nights each week, with carriage calls more or less numerous in the small hours of each morning. Mrs. Bryce, according to her friends, was obliged to leave town to get a necessary amount of sleep.

Other distinguished residents of this once quiet neighborhood where slumbers are disturbed by "the players" are the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador and Baroness Hengelmüller, Mr. and Mrs. Ekengren of the Legation of Sweden, the Chargé d'Affaires of Agentina and Mme Villegas.

A meeting of stockholders, who include nearly the entire membership, has been called for the coming week, when a new financial policy will be presented to enable the club to continue its very pleasant existence.

The restaurant has already been abolished for lack of patronage, although one of the special features of the house was the serving of luncheon or dinner with all the elegance of a private home and no trouble to the hostess. The buffet is still in active operation, with the pretty artistic tea room open each afternoon. The theatre, which also answers as ballroom, is engaged for several amateur performances during the Easter season, but has not proved the successful feature anticipated.

Preston Gibson is President of the club, while among its active promoters are Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Legare, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Mitchell, Gist Blair, John Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Edson Bradley, and Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins.

GEN. PILCHER DEAD.

Major and Brigade Surgeon of Volunteers in the Spanish War.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 9.—Gen. James Evelyn Pilcher of Carlisle, Penn., surgeon, author, and lecturer, died late last night at St. Joseph's Hospital. Mrs. Pilcher was with him when the end came.

Major Pilcher was born in Adrian, Mich., March 18, 1857, and was the son of the Rev. Elijah Holmes Pilcher. He was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1879, and then entered the Long Island College Heospital in Brooklyn, where he took his medical degree a few years later. While an undergraduate at the latter institution he was made curator of the Anatomical and Surgery Society, and published the monthly journal of that organization.

Having passed the examination before the Army Examining Board is 1883, he served as Acting and later as Assistant Surgeon of the United States Army in various army posts until, in 1887, he became Captain of the station on Governors Island. On the first call for troops for the Spanish-American war he was sent to Mobile, Ala., and then to Tampa, Fla. The Regimental Hospital which he maintained gave him recognition among the higher authorities, and he was made Major and Brigade Surgeon of Volunteers. While in the active service he interested himself in the newly organized Hospital Corps, and became an authority on the latest methods of "first aid." He retired in 1900, the tremendous strain to which he had been subjected during the war having manifested itself in a severe illness. He hoped to regain his health in Sevannah.

Upon his retirement from the army his services were sought by Dickinson College, in which he held the Chair of Anatomy and Embryology in 1900, and that of Economics and Sociology in 1901-1903. He also was Professor of Medical Jurisprudence in Dickinson School of Law.

He was an honorary member of the Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Chi fraternities, and in 1902 was honored by Allegheny College with the degree of L. H. D.

LAST TRIBUTE TO ADLER.

East Side Turns Out in Force for the District Leader's Funeral.

The east side paid a last tribute yesterday to the memory of Charles S. Adler, for many years Republican leader of the Eighth Assembly District. Nearly 20,000 persons jammed the streets of the east side, through which his body was borne to Mount Hope Cemetery at Cypress Hills, and stood with bared heads as the funeral procession passed through the streets. Hundreds of houses and shops and stores of all descriptions were draped in black on the lower east side, and many were the expressions of sorrow from those who had known and been helped by the leader as the hearse bearing the body passed.

Funeral services were held in the morning at Temple Rodoph Sholem, Sixty-third Street and Lexington Avenue. Rabbi Rudolph Grossman officiated. The temple was filled. East side bankers and business men sat side by side with peddlers, while on the dais sat men whose names are well known in politics. The honorary pall bearers included Justice Giegerich, Judge Charles H. Murray, Judge Joseph F. Mulqueen, Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, Congressman Henry M. Goldfogle, Congressman William S. Bennet, Samuel S. Koenig, Edward Lauterbach, Lloyd C. Griscom, William Barnes, Jr., Herbert Parsons, and Abraham Gruber.

The funeral procession was followed by about 2,000 marchers. In line was the entire Republican organization of the Eighth Assembly District, headed by members of the Lincoln League Club, the Federal Club, the Republican Organization of the Fourth Assembly District, the Progress Club, and a large representation from the Masonic order.

REFORMED ANARCHIST DIES.

Man Held for Homicide Says Usay Had Insulted His Wife.

Luigo Usay, a divinity student, 28 years old, who, two and a half years ago, was an Anarchist, died yesterday in Flower Hospital from a fracture of the skull received in a street fight on Saturday. Last night detectives arrested a man who said he was Otto Schaffer, 24 years old, a laborer, of 417 East Sixty-fourth Street. He was locked up charged with homicide.

Detectives McGee, Skelly, and Digilio say Schaffer admitted striking Usay, having heard that Usay had insulted his wife. Detectives are looking for Schaffer's wife.

Usay was attacked Saturday afternoon at Fifty-ninth Street and First Avenue. Thomas Cronan, a boy, of 34 Sutton Place, the only witness the police have found, said a man of medium build, wearing a black soft hat and dark clothes, knocked Usay down, and then escaped by running up Fifty-ninth Street to Second Avenue. Dr. Crook took Usay to Flower Hospital. He remained in a semi-conscious condition until he died, and was unable to give any reason for the assault.

Usay was a student in the Bible Teachers' Training School, Lexington Avenue and Forty-ninth Street, and lived at 239 East Sixtieth Street, in a home for students of the school. He came from Sicily five years ago, a red Anarchist. One night he wandered into an evangelist's tent and was converted. He immediately took up a study of the Bible and entered the training school. Recently he had been an assistant to the Rev. Francis Trapani, in the John Hall Memorial Chapel, Sixty-third Street and First Avenue, and was to have been ordained soon.

FURLONG'S FRIENDS WANT HIM PAROLED

Minimum Term of His Sentence for Bribery Will Be Completed This Week.

NOW IN SING SING HOSPITAL

Unable to Work, as His Conviction Required, and His Friends Expect Parole Board to Act.

Friends of ex-City Magistrate Henry J. Furlong of Brooklyn, who is serving a sentence in Sing Sing for bribery, are confident that when the State Board of Parole meets, on April 18, it will order his release on parole. The minimum sentence in his case will be completed on next Thursday, when he will have served one year. The maximum sentence was two years and one month. Martin T. Manton of Brooklyn, who was associated with W. Bourke Cockran as counsel in the defense of Furlong, said last night that he was sure the former Magistrate would be paroled.

Prison life, it is said, has impaired seriously the health of Furlong, who, although sentenced to hard labor, has spent much of the time in the prison hospital. If he gets his liberty at this time he will be required to report monthly to the probationary officers of the board until the expiration of the maximum sentence. During that period he must be on his good behavior or he may be rearrested, to serve out the longer term.

So far as can be learned, the former Magistrate has no definite plans for the future. His friends, however, say that he has sufficient funds not to become a charge on the city. He has been disbarred from the practice of law.

The trial of Furlong was sensational. For several years he had been prominent in the political and social life of the East New York section of the borough. The trouble which led to his conviction of bribery began with the arrest for pocketpicking of a manufacturer in East New York on the complaint of a street car passenger.

Jacob Gotthelf, a "runner" in Furlong's court, who was a close friend of the Magistrate, got into trouble through his activities in this case, and appealed to Furlong for help. When he was ignored Gotthelf made an exposé of Furlong's conduct on the bench. Gotthelf told of the use of a piece of real estate owned by Furlong as security for bail, the Magistrate sharing in the fees paid for its use.

The Magistrate was convicted of bribery, and began serving his sentence on April 13 last year. His conviction in the lower court was affirmed by the Appellate Division.

VASSAR'S SUFFRAGE FIGHTER.

Miss Wagner Wins in Wisconsin in Face of Strong Opposition.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 9.—The undergraduates at Vassar are watching with interest the progress made in the Wisconsin equal suffrage movement by Miss Mary S. Wagner, proprietor of the College Inn here. Miss Wagner is following in the footsteps of Miss Inez Milholland, formerly a Vassar student.

Miss Wagner went to Milwaukee in October to work up two meetings for Mrs. Snowden, the English agitator, whose wit and beauty drew much attention. Miss Wagner stayed in Wisconsin and succeeded in her work so well that a suffrage bill was passed by the Senate. During the campaign the opposition used the argument that if women wanted the ballot they would come in crowds to demand it. A jubilee was planned by Miss Wagner, and women flocked to Madison, Wis., from all over the State on the occasion of the hearing on the bill before the joint committees of the Senate and Assembly.

Assemblyman Dorner of Milwaukee said that no woman under 25 years of age would be found in the suffrage movement. That under that age they were busy looking for husbands.

The women ignored the attack and issued circulars giving eight sensible reasons why they demanded equal suffrage. Miss Wagner wrote a song which she sang, and printed copies of which were sent broadcast. It was entitled, "A Song to the Senate." Each verse ended, "And we're wanting the suffrage still."

When the bill was passed the more staid members of the Equal Suffrage Party revolted against Miss Wagner's methods. Miss Wagner became an insurgent and formed a new party, called the Political Equality League of Wisconsin. A mass meeting is to be held in Milwaukee on Monday and Tuesday of this week. Ten thousand dollars is to be raised to support the movement.

The James bill, which Miss Wagner was instrumental in passing, provides for a constitutional amendment to be voted on a year from next November, but which must first be approved by the people of the State at the next election, in the Fall of 1911.

CALLS SUFFRAGETTE HEROINE

Keeper of English Gaol Tells of One Who Wouldn't Eat.

Among the passengers who arrived on the Caronia yesterday were Walter J. Bellis, Liberal M. P. for Wallasey, and W. S. Chantrell, Conservative member for the same borough. Mr. Bellis is Visiting Magistrate of Walton Gaol in Liverpool, and is a keen sympathizer with the woman suffrage movement. He told of the imprisonment in Walton Gaol of a young suffragette, Selina Martin, who was charged with throwing a bottle at Premier Asquith.

"During her eight weeks' imprisonment," said he, "she kept to her resolution to take no food, and all that sustained her was what we forced her to take through a tube. I consider her the greatest heroine I ever met."

The two M. P.s, who are both in the fruit business, will go to California, thence to Canada, and then back to England.

$275,000 FIRE IN DALTON, GA.

On the evening of the same day they will appear in "Thusnelda," by Aldolf Wildbrandt; "Die Statue," by Constantin Rancu, and "Jutta Sanden," by Margarete Zoelner. The performances will be in German.

BRADY'S NEW THEATRE TEST.

Acoustic Properties of The Playhouse Tried by Some of His Stars.

A private view of William A. Brady's new theatre, The Playhouse, in West Forty-eighth Street, was given yesterday afternoon. Mr. Brady and some of his stars, with a few non-professional friends, looked over the house and enjoyed an impromptu entertainment given to test the acoustics of the auditorium.

In the party were Grace George, Robert Mantell, Thomas A. Wise, Douglas Fairbanks, and several other prominent actors, and Charles A. Rich, the architect of the theatre.

A discussion arose as to the acoustics of the house, and in order to test them Miss George read a scene from "Divorcons," Mr. Mantell recited Hamlet's soliloquy, and Mr. Wise and Mr. Fairbanks ran through a scene from "A Gentleman from Mississippi."

The security behind sound investment bonds represents values far in excess of the outstanding issues. It is not uncommon for properties to have a value of from two to three times the amount of the first mortgage bonds. THE FINANCIAL SITUATION. | THE MARKETS OF EUROPE.

Traders on the floor of the Stock Exchange busied themselves last week with a variety of rumors, some of which they sought to translate into terms of forward or backward movements in an unwilling stock market. They and many others looked anxiously ahead to the handing down of the Supreme Court decisions in the American Tobacco and Standard Oil cases, which were hoped for—and yet feared—on Monday last, but did not come. These and still others watched with apprehension the convening of the special session of Congress. Meanwhile the foundation of future business expansion was being laid deeper and stronger in the grain and cotton fields of the West and South. However important the text of the decisions in the "anti-trust" cases, however broad the discussion of legislative proposals at this session of Congress, their importance will be overshadowed by the outcome of the crops already planted or now going into the ground. With increased acreage and with general conditions more favorable than any that have started the crops on their way in recent years, there is promise of harvests fully equal to the best that the country has ever yielded. More rain fell last week where it was needed, and the testimony of private experts as well as of official State reports was added to the assurances previously had of the favorable progress of the crops in their early stages. All of this goes to the fundamentals of the situation, and if the present promise of the farms is fulfilled an impetus will be given to enterprise and trade which may be retarded, it is true, but which cannot be blocked either by interpretations of the Sherman Anti-Trust act nor by enactments of Congress. It is true that the impending decisions have long been a restrictive influence not only upon financial operations but upon general business as well. The latter, moreover, has been further unfavorably affected by the possibility of tariff revision. When, however, the Supreme Court decisions are handed down to-day, or within the next few weeks, as they almost certainly will be, one check upon fresh undertakings will have been removed. After that with the growing conviction that far worse might happen to the business of the country than a revision of the existing tariff, even granting that the present session of Congress will accomplish anything definite in this direction, there will be borne in upon investors and upon the business men of the country the conviction that the promise of bountiful crops, despite some handicaps which are admitted to exist, will mean unquestionably growth in business and strengthening of the inherent prosperity of the country.

There seems to be very little doubt that the session upon which the Congress has entered will be a prolonged one. Far less certain is it that much tangible work will be accomplished. Much discussion there undoubtedly will be, and if the proposals already laid before the Senate and the lower house can be taken as an indication of those that are to come the discussions will probably cover the entire field of legislative endeavor. This, though, is not a time at which the mere introduction of a resolution in Congress or the proposal of some new law will suffice to cause distrust. The mere fact of the divided political faith of the present Federal law-making body will put a check on the output of new laws. Moreover, it is a gratifying truth that the corporations of the country have less reason to-day to fear legislative investigation or the enactment of new laws than they had in days which have gone by. This is a fact which augurs well for every business man and every citizen of the country. Its influence upon immediate financial affairs is intangible, but none the less real. It is against this background that will be projected the pronouncement of the Supreme Court of the United States regarding the two corporations whose policies and methods are now in the balance. It is not going too far to say that it has almost come to be accepted as a fact that the decisions will be against both these companies. This statement is set down here in no sense as a prediction of what the court may do in these cases, but for the purpose of emphasizing the fact that nothing is to be feared from the decisions even in that event. There are many views of the technicalities of the Sherman Anti-Trust act, but it can be said without hesitation that the enforcement of the principles which are popularly embodied in that law cannot possibly work harm to any of the country's industries. There is, therefore, much more to be hoped for from these decisions than to be feared. This is a fact which it will be well for all concerned to remember when the decisions are at last rendered.

There is little that need be said of last week's operations on the Stock Exchange. Even though they were enlivened for a time by some expansion in trading with conflicting price movements, principally among relatively inactive issues, the operations as a whole reflected nothing more than an effort on the part of traders to do something at a time when they were far from clear in their own minds as to what should be done. Their attitude toward the market means nothing when viewed at a distance from the floor of the Stock Exchange.

Side by side were presented last week further indications of the accumulation of money at this centre and of the caution which is being shown in trade. That the latter, however, has not prevented normal expansion in some directions was indicated by the report of the country's iron output in March, which averaged 6,500 tons a day more than in February, with a still larger increase over the January production. Despite this increase in output the stocks of pig iron seem to have decreased during the month, and the capacity of iron furnaces in blast was larger on April 1 than on March 1. The copper producers' figures, too, though they showed an increase in stocks at the close of the month, indicated consumption of copper during March well in excess of either the January or February deliveries of that metal. Still another fact of hopeful import was the reduction in the surplusage of freight cars reported in the bulletin of the American Railway Association issued on Saturday. Between March 15 and March 29 the idle list was reduced by over 12,000 cars, or very nearly 6 per cent. Thus the steady increase in equipment surplusage on the railways of the country which had been under way since last October was cheked during the second half of March, when the volume of traffic called into use many cars previously idle. In another direction, however, the lack of any such growth was reflected in the reduction in the dividend on the H. B. Claflin Company's common stock from 8 per cent. to 6 per cent. a year. The textile trades, however, have occupied a position somewhat distinct from most others, and the fact that they are particularly susceptible to the present talk of tariff revision was assigned as one of the chief reasons for the Claflin dividend reduction.

At the close of the week Judge Sanborn in the United States Circuit Court at St. Paul handed down a decision upholding the previous findings of the Master in Chancery in favor of the railroads in the Minnesota rate case. This decision apparently carries one step nearer to final determination the ruling of the Master that States cannot enforce freight or passenger rates which conflict with inter-State rates. So far as the monetary situation is concerned the market for the past week followed the normal course of the after-days of the April 1 dividend and interest disbursements. With the return of funds to this centre the previous ease in time loans and in commercial paper was accentuated with an actual reduction in rates for some classes of loans. All the while this market has as a reserve the very large credits still available to it in the European markets, particularly in Germany where our bankers have loaned much money in addition to that which they have employed in London. These credits are not now required at home, but should need arise for them they will be immediately available.

LONDON WAITS TRUST CASES.

Hesitation Shown in Advancing Prices, but Investment Buying Keeps Steady.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 9.—With the American department still waiting for the decisions of the Supreme Court, British rails continued to be the feature of Capel Court. There has been hesitancy in advancing prices, but the investment buying continues steady, and the fact that there has been no reaction at the end of the nineteen-day account is proof of underlying strength of the markets.

Hardening of discount rates during the past week has been merely temporary and accidental, due to the postponement of large Government disbursements. In consequence the market found itself indebted to the Bank of England for several millions, which it had to renew at the bank for 3½ per cent.

PARIS TONE FIRMER.

General Tendency Toward Further Rise All Around.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 9.—Although business was hardly very brisk, the Bourse as a whole showed a firmer tone all through the past week, and the general tendency seems decidedly toward a further rise all around.

The report that the chief difficulties in Morocco have been satisfactorily settled produced the best impression, which, however, failed to create greater activity, owing to the effect of the Wall Street lull.

The anxiety about the decision of the United States Supreme Court as to the trusts has slightly worn off. Money is still plentiful. Only home rails and rentes remain very dull.

BUYING OF STEEL SUDDENLY HALTS

Stop Orders Appear from All Directions at Once, and Trade Lags.

PRICE SHADING APPEARS

Every Evidence of a Widespread Return to the Conservative Policy Again.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, April 9.—There will be no further increase in productive capacity in finished steel lines during the present month. The steel trade has had a narrow escape from a dose of prosperity overdone.

Stop orders from large dealers in steel were not uncommon in the mills during the week just ended, and the volume of tonnage moved stopped ascending, after having increased steadily since mid-January. The lull is not taken as meaning that the two months' buying revival is at an end, but merely that the country feared being gorged with steel, as it was a year ago this month, when the decline of 1910 really began.

Prices proved more sensitve than had been expected, however. There was much shading of black and galvanized sheets by the end of the week, by the smaller independent makers, up to $1 a ton. The sheet trade is especially hard to control in the matter of prices on account of the great number of small independents in the field. There were renewed humors of shading in wire, though these could not be traced. Prices on fabricated materials are decidedly off in some sections, quotations in the East being reported down to $46 in some cases, despite the fact that there is no softness in mill prices of plain structural shapes. In the West store prices on lap-welded steel and charcoal tubes have been cut by jobbers on an average of 2 cents, while the attempted increase in spike prices has not been enforced.

The steel car situation, while improved, is not yet up to normal. Material for equipment is going out in large quantities, but the railroads are building more of their own rolling stock than ever before. Pittsburg mills will not be aided by the 72,000-ton rail order of the Harriman lines, all of which goes to the Chicago, Colorado, and Alabama mills. An index to the rail situation is found in the fact that one of the Carnegie mills at the famous Edgar Thomson plant at Braddock has been remodeled permanently for the rolling of sheet and tin bars.

A paradoxical incident of the week was the shading of prices on open hearth sheet bars in Pittsburg down to $23.50, mill, while Bessemer bars held firm at $24. The explanation is found in the fact that there are many small producers of open hearth, while the Bessemer output is in the hands of a few large makers. Aside from this slight fluctuation, crude steel prices continue to hold firm, with a minimum of $23, Pittsburg mill, on billets, either open hearth or Bessemer.

The crude steel situation in this district cannot be accurately forecasted, however, because of the prospects of enormous increases in output during the next sixty days. Before May 1 the Republic Iron and Steel Company will turn out the first open hearth steel in its history at its new plant at Lansingville, near Youngstown, Ohio, which is practically ready to start. The event will mark the entry of the Republic into a field recently dominated by the Carnegie Steel Company in the Pittsburg district. The new steel plant will have a capacity of about 8,000 tons of steel ingots weekly, or 400,000 tons a year. Within the month the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company, the strongest independent in Pittsburg proper, will start a part of its four 250-ton open hearth furnaces at its new plant at Aliquippa. Ten years ago the opening of either of these plants would have been heralded almost as a world event.

Though new business in merchant bars that has reached the mills since the opening of March has attracted little comment, it is said the tonnage booked since March 1 was fully 20 per cent. in excess of the tonnage shipped during the month. In a few cases makers are filled till the opening of June, but in this line, also, there is some new capacity now under construction, so that there is little chance of any shortage in output during the coming quarter. Tin plate remains the banner line in the entire trade. The Steel Corporation has converted four sheet mills at Cambridge, Ohio, into tin mills, to make black plate specialties for the Canadian trade, and is apparently pushing its export trade in this line as never before. The significance of the Steel Corporation's export tin plate campaign is seen in the country's total exports for January and February, in tin plate, of 11,000 tons. In January and February the country exported nearly 5,000 tons more tin plate than it imported, while in the year 1910 it imported 54,000 tons more than it exported.

The action of the Steel Corporation in reducing its sheet steel capacity at Cambridge, Ohio, has no special significance, since the middle of the Summer will see the combine's new sixteen-mill sheet steel plant at Gary in operation.

The scrap market, always sensitive to crude steel conditions, took a spectacular decline during the week, as a result of reduced calls for steel scrap by the open-hearth steel makers. During the excessive activity of the latter part of February heavy melting steel scrap, the staple in open-hearth manufacture, advanced to $14.25 and $14.50, Pittsburg, which was 10 to 25 cents above the price of basic iron, delivered Pittsburg. Last week it dropped to $13.25, and all other grades of scrap suffered in proportion. The Pennsylvania Railroad's scrap list, on which bids closed yesterday, showed slightly better prices, however, ranging up to $13.50 for heavy melting steel.

The pig iron market is almost stagnant. The total turnover was light, while the week closed with practicaly no inquiries pending. The movement of iron actualy shipped by producer to consumer declined slightly, though not enough to alarm ironmakers. Prices were held firmly. The deadlock continues over basic iron for the third quarter, consumers being unwilling to pay $14 to $14.25, furnace, which is the price generally asked. There are continued offerings of basic at $13.75, valley furnace, for prompt delivery. No. 2 foundry iron for prompt delivery sells at $14, valley furnace, and efforts by consumers to hammer down the price for third-quarter shipment to under $14.25, the minimum quoted ever since March 1, have not been successful. Increased demand for pipe caused some activity in low-grade irons, and several small tonnages of forge changed hands for prompt delivery, producers holding out for $13.25, as against $13, the price at the middle of February.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 9.—The estimated production of the Calumet & Hecla and its subsidiaries during March was 12,030,364 pounds of refined copper, an increase of 246,778 pounds over March, 1910.

The combined output of Baltic, Champion, and Trimountain in March was 2,677 tons, as against 2,440 tons in February and 2,688 a year ago. For the three months the total is 7,582 tons. Some stockholders of Isle Royale maintain that the Baltic lode will yet be found in that property.

The theory is that the lode being struck in the Indiana is an extension of an amygdaloid lode—either the Knowlton, Butler, or Evergreen. Houghton Copper will thoroughly explore the Superior lode by shafts and drifts before going into another amygdaloid lode which the drills also encountered.

Development work at South Lake has stopped pending further financing.

No copper of any account has yet been found in the Wolverine drift on the Osceola lode.

The report is confirmed of a strike of high-grade ore in Davis-Daly, in the east drift, from the north crosscut on the 1,700-foot level of the Colorado shaft. The assay at present is from 9 to 30 per cent. copper and 12 to 33 ounces silver, and the drift is 61 feet long and from 2 to 3 feet wide.

Greene-Cananea in March produced 3,542,000 pounds, a decrease of 364,000 pounds from February.

Shaft-sinking is in progress on the Lion Oak property, with 4 per cent. copper reported by Churn Drill 45 at a depth of 550 feet.

Utah Apex is about to resume mining, the management having accumulated reserve ore sufficient to supply the mill.

The ore reserves of Utah Copper are estimated at seventeen years' supply.

A shipment of concentrates from Miami April 2 was estimated to be worth 40 per cent. copper.

ROCHESTER MAYOR BARS LABOR MEETING

Socialists, However, Assemble on City Hall Steps, Although Building Is Closed to Them.

ASSAIL MAYOR AND ALDRIDGE

Council Chamber Was Denied to Labor Lyceum Because Prof. Shedd Had Lauded the Red Flag.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 9.—Notwithstanding that Mayor Edgerton had ordered the City Hall to be closed to the Labor Lyceum this afternoon, 300 Socialists assembled in front of the building and demanded admission. Health Officer Goler, who was to have addressed the Lyceum, knew of the order and remained away.

The crowd was augmented by hundreds of curious persons, who anticipated trouble because of the failure of the laborites to get into the building. All streets leading to the City Hall were blocked for hours.

"Gad" Martindale and George Schaulber, the latter Prohibitionist candidate for Mayor two years ago, made fiery addresses from the City Hall steps, and excoriated the Mayor and George W. Aldridge, Republican boss of Monroe County. Martindale, an ardent Socialist, called upon the people to take possession of their own property. Chief Quigley, anticipating trouble, had a platoon of police at Headquarters, ready to disperse the meeting should the proceedings become disorderly. A few plain clothes officers mingled with the crowd.

The Labor Lyceum is a Socialistic organization, and for years has had the use of the Council chamber on Sundays, until Prof. Kendrick P. Shedd of the University of Rochester delivered an address in a public school in which he lauded the red flag as the true emblem of humanity. He placed it above the Stars and Stripes. The Mayor thereupon forbade his appearance as a speaker in any municipal building in the future. Despite the Mayor's order Prof. Shedd addressed the Socialists in the City Hall a week ago and defied the Mayor.

TO ILLUMINATE FIFTH AV.

Experiment Was So Successful Merchants Make It Permanent.

The experimental demonstration of show window lighting, about a year ago, under the auspices of the Fifth Avenue Association was so successful that it has been decided to make it a permanent feature, beginning with to-night.

The association says that much ingenuity has been displayed in the efforts to get the best results. To prevent a glare that would distract attention from the articles shown in the windows, all lights will be concealed.

LONG ISLAND TRANSIT CHANGE

Planned to Route Commuters Away from New Pennsylvania Station.

It is understood that a practical agreement has been reached in reference to transit extensions in Queens, as the result of an arrangement between the Pennsylvania and the Interborough.

Ever since the opening of the Pennsylvania station in Manhattan the problem of what to do with the big suburban traffic which was inherited by the Pennsylvania from the Long Island has been difficult. To bring this traffic into the Pennsylvania station, according to the engineers of the Pennsylvania, would be a losing venture, and also would crowd that station more than desirable in conjunction with the through traffic.

The suburban traffic of the Long Island is to be diverted from the Pennsylvania station by way of the Queensboro Bridge and the Steinway tunnel. Woodside, just outside the limits of old Long Island City, is to be made the distributing centre. Plans have been drawn and are to be submitted to the Building Department in Queens this week for a new station to cost about $150,000. The plans also call for the elimination of a dangerous curve.

The new station will provide for the entrance of suburban trains on the ground floor and of elevated trains on the second floor. From the elevated platforms trains will carry the suburban passengers and commuters to the Queensboro Bridge, or to the Steinway tunnel.

A route not heretofore considered has been adopted for the line running to the Steinway tunnel. From the Queensboro Bridge it will extend down Crescent Street to Mott Avenue, and thence to Jackson Avenue. Proceedings are now going on before the Street Opening Bureau in Queens for the widening of Crescent Street, and this fact has caused this street to be selected for the elevated line. On Jackson Avenue the line is to extend down to Crane Street, and here it will be carried across the freight yards of the Long Island Railroad. Just beyond the freight yard in the vicinity of the Hunters Point viaduct the tracks will come to grade and then be carried into the tunnel.

The full capacity of the tunnel is estimated at 20,000 passengers an hour, and that of the bridge at 28,000. This is believed will handle the traffic of Queens for years to come.

Explosion in Standard Oil Plant.

A large condenser in the Standard Oil Company's plant at Kent Avenue and North Twelfth Street, Williamsburg, exploded yesterday as a Greenpoint car was passing. The passengers made a rush for the doors and jumped off. The fire which followed spread rapidly over the entire condenser, and the city firemen were called in. They kept the blaze confined to the exploded condenser. The damage was put at $1,000.

ELECTRIC SMELTER DEMONSTRATION

MINE OWNERS—who wish to investigate the Reid System of Electric Smelting and Refining with a view to installing a plant at their mines at actual cost of construction to operate under license upon a royalty basis—

CAPITALISTS—who wish to open negotiations for State or Foreign Rights, the System being patented throughout the World—

INVESTORS—who wish to subscribe to the stock of the Cobalt Reduction and Refining Co., Ltd., the first corporation formed to operate under the Reid System—

Are invited to be present at public demonstrations given every Wednesday, at 11 A. M., at 352 Mulberry St., Newark, N. J., where the Reid System is in complete operation.

The Reid System turns raw ore into molten metal within 10 seconds after current is applied without preliminary treatment. It is automatic, one man doing the work of 20 under other methods. It absolutely eliminates the cost of coke, coal, fluxes, furnace linings, and the heavy freight charges thereon. It makes a higher recovery of metal than any other system in existence. It recovers all the valuable by-products, which are lost by other methods. Cost of constructing a Reid Electric Smelter is from 25% to 75% of that of a blast furnace smelter of same capacity, depending upon character of ores to be treated.

DEMOCRATS TO PASS RECIPROCITY FIRST

Reassured by Taft's Letter to McCall Saying He Will Not Oppose Tariff Plans.

WOOLEN SCHEDULE NEXT

Free Listing of Articles Farmers Buy Also to be Taken Up—Call Caucus for Tuesday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The President's letter, in which he declared that he had no intention of exercising his constitutional power and adjourn Congress in case the two houses should disagree on the date of adjournment, after passing the Canadian reciprocity agreement, is having quick effect.

The result of conferences among the Democratic leaders to-day is that it is now practically certain that reciprocity will be the first measure taken up in the House. This plan will be presented by the leaders to the Democratic caucus on Tuesday night, and under the present Democratic leadership the fact that a caucus has been called means that the proposed measure will go through.

Mr. Taft's letter, it became known to-day, was sent to Representative McCall, who fathered the reciprocity measure in the last session and who has since reintroduced it. In that communication the President jocularly confessed that until he read a reference in some speech by Champ Clark, and later saw an article in a newspaper, he had not dreamed that he had the power to prorogue Congress under any circumstances.

He added seriously that he had no intention of using his power, and suggested that Mr. McCall circulate the letter among the Democratic leaders so that they might feel no hesitancy in going ahead with reciprocity on account of fears that the Senate and the President together might end the session before other items in the Democratic platform could be considered.

The session to-morrow, it is expected, will be largely devoted to the perfunctory election of standing committees of the House. In reality this will amount to nothing more than indorsing en bloc the nominations to committees made on the majority side by the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee, who were elected early by Democratic caucus, and on the minority side by the minority leader, Representative James R. Mann of Illinois. Both houses will mark time after the House Democratic caucus on Tuesday night, and then things will liven up.

At that caucus the Democrats in the House will be tied up to reciprocity. That will be easy enough. Then will come the question of what phase of general tariff legislation shall be taken up first. Present indications point to the selection of the woolen schedule, with the miscellaneous schedule free listing the things the farmers buy, aimed at offsetting the free listing of things they sell embodied in the reciprocity measure, coming as a close second. It is not unlikely that all three of these measures will be introduced by Mr. Underwood on Wednesday, though there is some delay over the woolen schedule rates because of the extreme technicality of the schedule.

With these measures will go the resolution submitting a constitutional amendment for popular election of Senators to the States, though all these items will follow reciprocity in order of consideraion before the House. It is expected that the committee will vote the bills out quickly, and then what fight is to be fought will begin on the floor.

ORDERED OFF THEIR FARMS.

Landowners Protest at Union Pacific's Tardy Claim to Property.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Members of Congress representing districts in the Middle West are receiving many letters from their farmer constituents complaining about what is declared to be an unfair encroachment on their land by the Union Pacific Railroad, and asking for legislation to restrain the railroad officials.

Under the terms of an act passed by Congress in 1862 the Union Pacific Railroad received a right of way from Omaha, Neb., to Ogden, Utah, about 1,000 miles. The grant carried with it about 200 feet of land on either side of the proposed right of way. According to the letters of complaint the railroad company made no effort to take possession of the land adjoining its right of way until comparatively recently.

The land remained unclaimed by the railroad for so long a period that homesteaders took possession of it many years ago, apparently without protest on the part of the railroad, and for the last fifteen years this land has been sold for farming purposes. The farmers along the right of way of the railroad are now receiving notice to vacate, and inasmuch as they assert that they bought the land in good faith they want Federal legislation to protect them.

Senators and Representatives who have looked into the matter say the right of the railroad to the land appears unquestioned, and that thousands of farmers will be compelled to surrender their improved property to the railroad company without receiving a cent of compensation.

Fine Cromwell Collection Being Placed on Exhibition at Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—One of the finest collections of postage stamps in this country has been deposited in the National Museum by David W. Cromwell of New York City, and is now being placed on exhibition in the Division of History in the old building.

There are 20,000 stamps in the collection, representing all nations which have ever issued them. The installation in the exhibition cases is being made alphabetically, and at the present time has proceeded as far as the French colonies. The stamps of the remaining countries will be put in place as rapidly as possible.

WOULD OSTRACIZE RUSSIA.

Rabbi Wise Says Nations Should All Join in Shunning It.

"The urging of the Secretary of State that the Russian discrimination as against American citizens of Jewish birth and others who hold American passports is no worse than that practiced against similarly situated citizens of European countries is added ground for America taking the lead in demanding that Russia shall not be suffered to make such discriminations as violate international treaty," declared the Rev. Stephen S. Wise, rabbi of the Free Synagogue, at Carnegie Hall yesterday morning, in speaking on "Russia and the New Exodus."

"The situation of Israel was never worse than it is," he continued, "for it cannot be iterated too often that half of the world's Jewry dwells in lands of persecution and that, as far as the Jew of continental Europe is concerned, there is the impotence of the weak, or worse still, the indifference of the strong.

"Is not the Jew better off in England and America than he has ever been? Granted that this be so, and I am not altogether sure, the very fact that things can be so terrible for half of the Jews of the world while some Jews have grown powerful and strong in America and England shows how powerless powerful Jews can be and how helpless is the Jew in caring for his own.

"Alas a thousand times for the entente which exists between England and Russia, with the result that Russia is morally supported by England, financially maintained by France, physically defended by Germany and Austria, and, worst of all, an attempt is being made to embroil us in the industrial fortunes of Russia. Help and support and countenance for Russia everywhere, but condemned by no nation, though it should be condemned by all.

"We find to-day a typical case of discrimination which I call upon the American people to resent. It is the discrimination of Russia against American citizens. Some of these American citizens happen to be citizens of foreign birth and of the Jewish faith, but the discrimination holds against American citizens. This discrimination means that Russia is persistenly and shamelessly violating the terms of its treaty covenants with the United States, and that to suffer a continuance of such violation is an act of National self-abasement on the part of this republic."

MAY SOON QUIT AT TRENTON.

Public Utility Legislation the Only Matter Still Causing a Hitch.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., April 9.—It is possible that the Legislature will take final adjournment some time this week, although a great deal of routine business is still undone. President Ackerman of the Senate and Speaker Kenny of the House of Assembly are both anxious for adjournment this week, but it is uncertain as to just what will happen.

With employers' liability out of the way, the bill having passed both branches and having been approved by Gov. Wilson, the other important subjects are well under way. It is expected the Senate Committee on Elections will report the Geran Election bill to-morrow evening. It will appear with several amendments, although these will not affect the essential features.

It is said the bill, when it becomes law, will be perfectly satisfactory to both the Governor and Mr. Geran. Present indications are that the bill will pass the Senate with not more than two or three votes against it.

The Senate Committee on Elections is also expected to bring out the Simpson Corrupt Practices bill early this week, and it, like the Geran measure, will likely become law within a few days.

Public utility legislation is the only one of the big propositions still causing a hitch, but a compromise between the Senate and House will likely be reached through a conference to which both bodies have consented. In so far as it concerns conferring power upon the Public Utility Commission to fix rates and regulate and control public utility corporations, the Egan bill, favored by the Governor, is believed to be stronger than the Bradley measure. It is not thought this phase of the subject will bring forth any serious disagreement, however, and the Egan bill, with the exception of the provision for the appointment and removal of the Commissioners, may be the one agreed upon.

The Walsh commission form of government bill will cause an important fight, but it is not thought the Senate will approve it even if it should get by the House. The Commission Government League, representing thirty-two cities, is strongly urging adoption of the measure.

AFTER COLLEGE MEN'S VOTES

Democrats to Start Movement to Enlist Them in Next Campaign.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A movement will be inaugurated at the Jefferson birthday celebration of the College Men's Democratic League on Thursday night to enlist the active support of 200,000 college students and graduates for the success of the next Democratic National ticket.

This celebration, which will be held at the Hotel Willard, and which will be addressed by Speaker Champ Clark, Representative Hammil of New Jersey, Thomas Nelson Page, and W. Jefferson Davis, is designed actively to start the campaign.

There are a few more than 200,000 college men in the United States said to be affiliated with this league. This is the first National campaign in which the organization has been interested. It is therefore proposed that the Washington celebration be a sort of keynote affair, and that the first effective step be taken to further organize this vast force into a compact political fighting machine.

The principal speech will be delivered by Speaker Clark. He declined a number of other invitations in and out of Washington for Jefferson Day orations in order to take part in the College Men's League celebration and to give impetus and inspiration to the demonstration now planned.

WHEAT'S COURSE WORRIES BEARS

Wet Weather Checks Corn Movement and Affects Other Commodities.

MANY PROBLEMS IN COTTON

Early Trend to Higher Prices in All Lines Precedes Late Hesitancy.

Developments in the wheat market last week were a distinct surprise to the bears in May wheat, particularly at Chicago. From a discount of about 1 cent a bushel the May delivery at the West was forced to 1½ cents premium on July, and trade was very active nearly all the week. The market reached the low point of the season on Monday, and the news seemed to point toward continuation of the declining values. On Tuesday, when most of the Western markets were closed, New York and the Northwest turned very firm. There developed quite active buying, credited to foreign accounts, and on Wednesday prices were strong and trade active and excited. The advance continued Thursday morning. Thursday afternoon prices declined very sharply and opened weak on Friday. Friday afternoon the market was from 1 to 2 cents up from the low point, and on Saturday was strong during the morning, but reacted sharply after 12 o'clock, closing unsettled.

The developments in the May seemed to point to a congestion in that delivery, with the confident sellers of the May being run in. Whether the movement was more than a technical demonstration against the shorts and a liquidation of the May short interest was not clear. The foreign markets showed considerable strength, but did not develop any particular activity in cash wheat. A small business was done, and there was considerable buying of futures for foreign account. The foreign crop news was a little conflicting, but the news was scarcely important enough to explain the advance. The week-end statistics pointed to a very heavy outward movement again from competing export countries. The exporting countries outside of North America are shipping from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 bushels a week, which is nearly enough to supply the demand from importing countries. The demand from importing countries has this year been extraordinary, however. The world's exports for this season have been 483,000,000 bushels, against 426,000,000 bushels last year and 362,000,000 bushels two years ago. Of this amount Russia and the Danube have shipped 241,000,000 bushels, against 200,000,000 bushels last year and 83,000,000 bushels two years ago. The influence on the European visible supply of this extraordinary movement has been to increase the European visible this year 35,000,000 bushels, against an increase last year of 37,000,000 bushels and an increase two years ago of 17,000,000 bushels. These figures show that the European consumption of imported wheat has been 57,000,000 bushels larger this season than last year and 103,000,000 bushels larger than two years ago. Such extraordinary increase in consumption, in view of the large crops in importing countries the last two years, shows very clearly to what extent the reserve supplies were reduced.

The Government crop report, which will be out to-day at noon, will be a very important statement, as it will show the condition of the crop at the beginning of the growing season. The private and State reports so far issued indicate a gain in condition compared with December. The weather has been favorable, particularly in the Southwest, and private reports show a very material gain in Kansas, and also in Oklahoma and Texas. The private reports have pointed to a general gain in condition of from 1 to nearly 3 per cent. compared with December. There will be no report on the area Winter killed or abandoned until May, but it is expected that the percentage abandoned will be comparatively small. The December indications for the crop were placed at 524,000,000 bushels. A year ago the promise for the crop was figured at 497,000,000 bushels, and after taking out the abandoned area later the crop finally turned out 464,000,000 bushels.

Weather conditions in the Northwest have continued favorable for the early Spring soil conditions. There has been further very general moisture throughout both the American and Canadian Northwest. The problem now before the Spring wheat situation is not more moisture but two or three weeks of fairly good weather to complete Spring seeding.

CORN.

Corn showed a very steady tone most of the week, and there has been some hardening in values, although the gains have been extremely small. The influences toward betterment have been the advance in wheat and the relative decrease in movement. For the week past the receipts have been 2,300,000 bushels, against 3,400,000 bushels the preceding week. This decrease has been due evidently to the continued wet weather throughout the West, which has put the country roads in almost impassable shape, and the weather has also been unfavorable for handling corn. The demand is fair, but not active. Some export business in corn is doing all the time and the outward movement is of fairly good volume. The exports for the last three months have been from about 1,500,000 bushels to about 3,000,000 bushels weekly, and contracts for shipment have been made extending through the Summer. Locally the cash situation has been somewhat affected by light receipts. Reports indicate very little progress in the way of farm work, particularly the past ten days, owing to the persistent rains throughout the West.

OATS.

There has been a very quiet interest in the oats market. New low levels were touched on Monday, from which there has been a slow recovery, largely influenced by the improvement in other grain and some decrease in the movement. The market has also been influenced a little by wet weather throughout the West. With the middle of April close at hand, the question of the completion of oats seeding is becoming a rather important one, and for ten days there has been so much rain throughout the Central West and Northwest that progress with seeding has been delayed somewhat.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market has rallied moderately from the extreme low figures, but the improvement has been comparatively small. Low quotations for the season were made on the monthly statement of stocks showing material accumulations, particularly in lard. From this there was some recovery on more moderate hog receipts. The packing returns for the week, however, were very heavy, showing a gain of 189,000 head over last year and a gain of 824,000 over last year since March 1. The packing since March 1 has amounted to 2,500,000, and average weights based on the Chicago figures have been about 10 per cent. over a year ago. This has made a large product, particularly of lard, and stocks have accumulated rapidly at packing centres. The possibility of a falling off in the country movement on account of the sharp decline in hog prices is having a little influence in the situation.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The last week has been comparatively quiet, but not utterly devoid of feature. It is obvious that the activity which has recently prevailed has resulted in a general reduction of outstanding commitments, and the consensus of opinion at present is that the technical position is not materially strained one way or the other. It is thought that the bulk of the short interest is composed of hedge sales for account of refining interests, although the West is generally bearish on the situation, owing to the depression in lard. Aside from holdings of one large commission house, which oil seems to be well concentrated and which was purchased at much higher levels, the balance of the long interest appears to be largely scattered. Whether or not refining interests will cover their shorts or deliver the oil sold will depend altogether upon the consuming demand noted during the Summer.

While pure lard at the West declined approximately ¼c. a pound last week, and tallow has sold at new low records, or under 6c. a pound, with important improvement noted in greases in general, cottonseed oil has maintained a very steady undertone, and the belief prevalent was that the market had been completely sold out, temporarily at least. The stability noted in prices has had the effect of inducing some consuming inquiry, and while no general revival in trade is observed, sentiment is less bearish. Crude oil in the meantime is firm at the South, and it is thought that holdings there are scattered, with distressed oil probably all disposed of, so that bear operations will meet with little success as far as shaking out crude is concerned, while on the other hand, if mills are to receive higher prices for the remainder of their holdings will depend largely on the consuming inquiry noted.

COTTON.

There was a slow but gradual hardening of values during the past week, with gains fairly well distributed throughout the list. The firmness was generally attributed to short covering, as bears recently have been selling in a confident way, but it soon became apparent that there was not much progress being made toward furthering a decline, and when a disposition was manifest to accept the "paper" profits which had accrued it was found that the cotton was not to be procured excepting at materially higher quotations. The bulls were rather conspicuous at times and seemed disposed to support the market when weakness was imminent, and while their attitude has been one of a scalping position on the long side, their operations last week toward enforcing a higher level have been more pronounced than for some time.

The situation has not changed materially, and as is to be expected, each week brings about a firmer statistical position, but this at the moment is not acute enough to become convincing, and in the meanwhile available statistics can be turned so as to form both bearish and bullish conclusions. The fact remains, however, that on previous advances of the near months, particularly the May option, to levels bordering around 14.60, there has been a decided increase in offerings from the South and from other principal holders, the knowledge of which has recently tended to increase confidence on the part of bears as the list moved upward. It is intimated, however, in some quarters at present that determined efforts will be attempted by some of the leading holders in the near future to force values through the point where pressure has been in evidence hitherto, and it is thought by some authorities that if this can be accomplished pressure from the South may not be as heavy as generally anticipated.

As the season progresses, it is natural for weather conditions to be of increasing interest, and advices pertaining to developments in the cotton belt are being scrutinized closely. There was considerable precipation last week with torrential rains in sections east of the Mississippi, so that some complaints have come to hand of too much moisture, whereas it was only a short time ago when the deficiency of rainfall was to be a bull argument for the new crop options. The consensus of opinion is that the rains have immensely benefited the soil, but in order to avoid a late start, a series of warm and clear days would be most desirable for the best advancement of the crop. Increased acreage reports are numerous, but such enlightenment is quite ancient, as several weeks ago it was known that a larger acreage had been prepared so that the tendency is naturally to observe the future prospects. The season would, indeed, be extraordinary if no damage complaints should accompany the early growth of the plant, and the fact that cotton values have been maintained with a surprising degree of steadiness despite the propitious weather conditions has led to some short covering and new buying on the theory that a change would in all probability be to the advantage of holders. The years have been few when new crop cotton could not be sold for higher prices sometime between April and June, than the prices prevailing at the immediate commencement of the season.

The foreign situation is one of decided importance, as it is realized that if there is to be a scarcity of cotton at the end of the season, the acuteness of this will depend largely upon the exports from week to week. These at present are decreasing when compared with those of last year, but just as bullish figures in regard to the visible supply from week to week cannot be taken as conclusive at this time, therefore, the diminution in exports has also not reached sufficient proportions to warrant positive assertions as to the amount of cotton which will be available for American mills at the termination of the season. Manchester sent rather glowing reports last week, and as the Continent has been a fair buyer of new crop cotton at Liverpool, that market has repeatedly given impetus toward higher values locally. A good deal of interest was aroused by the estimate of the International Spinners Federation, placing mill stocks of the world at 200,000 bales under those of last year. These figures are in decided contrast with Ellison's statistics; as on the basis of the census report, mills stocks in this country were 170,000 bales less than last year, which would make foreign stocks 30,000 bales smaller than a year ago. Ellison figures show holdings abroad of approximately 400,000 bales greater than last year.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF LIQUIDATION OF THE CITY DEBT.
Room 206, City Hall Annex.
New Orleans, La., April 4th, 1911.

The Board of Liquidation of City Debt, acting under authority of Act No. 19 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the Session of 1906, and Act No. 116 of said General Assembly for the Session of 1908, and Act No. 23 of said General Assembly for the Session of 1910, as amended by Act No. 5 of said General Assembly for the Second Extra Session of 1910, which said Acts No. 19 of 1906 and No. 116 of 1908 have been adopted and ratified by Constitutional Amendment, and have become part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at its office in the City of New Orleans, State of Louisiana, up to twelve o'clock noon on the eighth day of May, 1911, for the purchase of $7,000,000.00 in face value of New Public Improvement Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by and to be issued under and subject to the provisions of the acts aforementioned, and the Constitutional Amendments ratifying same.

Said bonds are of the denomination of One Thousand Dollars each and bear interest at the rate of four per cent. (4%) per annum, evidenced by interest coupons attached, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July of each year respectively. Said bonds are by law exempt from taxation, State, Parish, and Municipal.

Said bonds are payable January 1, 1942, and are subject to call at the option of the City of New Orleans after January 1, 1928, and are and will be issued under and subject to the statutes aforementioned, all of which are hereby referred to and made part of this advertisement for greater certainty and particularity.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions to wit:

1. That no sale shall be made of any of the said bonds unless the aggregate of bids received shall be for the full amount of said bonds, to wit, $7,000,000.00 in face value.

2. Said bonds shall be adjudicated to the highest bidder or bidders, provided that said bonds, or any part thereof, shall not be adjudicated for less than par and accrued interest, less a commission or deduction not to exceed six per centum (6%) on the principal thereof.

3. All matured interest coupons on said bonds shall be cut from said bonds and canceled, and the successful bidder or bidders shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery.

4. Said bonds shall be paid for by the successful bidder or bidders in cash as fast as they can be signed and delivered, and all of said bonds shall be delivered in not more than sixty days from the date of the opening of said bids.

5. No bid will be received or considered unless accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans for an amount equal to three per cent. of the amount to the said bid; said check shall be made to the order of the Board of Liquidation of the City Debt, and the check or checks of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the Board of Liquidation of the City Debt as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders, respectively, will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the said bidder or bidders respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Sewerage & Water Board.

6. Any local bank or banks that may bid for said bonds may stipulate in its or their bids that it or they desire to be awarded the custody of the Public Improvement Fund, as provided by Act. No. 23 of the General Assembly for the Session of 1910, amended by Act No. 5 of said General Assembly for the Second Extra Session of 1910.

7. If any local bank or banks should, pursuant to the statutes aforesaid, be awarded the custody and deposit of the Public Improvement Fund, as established by law, the said local bank or banks shall be required to pay the rate of interest on daily balances as may be fixed by the Board of Liquidation of the City Debt, pursuant to the statutes aforementioned, and shall comply with all the provisions of said statutes as to security and other matters.

8. The Board of Liquidation of the City Debt reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Mark all bids "Proposals for the purchase of New Public Improvement Bonds."

Further particulars and information will be furnished upon application to T. Wolfe, Jr., Secretary Board of Liquidation, City Debt, Room 206, City Hall Annex, New Orleans, La.

SEMI-FINAL ROUND IN SQUASH TOURNEY

John W. Prentiss Qualifies for Finals—Championship Match This Afternoon.

Play in the National squash tennis championship tournament at the Harvard Club, 27 West Forty-fourth Street, reached the semi-final round yesterday and will be finished to-day. But two matches remain, one being in the semi-final round between Dr. Alfred Stillman of the Harvard Club and L. Du Pont Irving of Ardsley and the other will be the championship match. John W. Prentiss has already qualified for the finals and Dr. Stillman will probably qualify in his match with Mr. Irving, which will be played this morning at 10 o'clock. The latter can be relied upon to put up the strongest kind of a game, but Dr. Stillman, the club champion, seems to be the favorite. The championship match is scheduled for this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Eight matches were completed yesterday, three in the third round, four in the fourth round, and one in the semi-final. The games were for the most part hard fought and full galleries witnessed the contests. John W. Prentiss did the best work of the day, winning three successive matches. His first was against C. G. Osborne of the Chicago University Club, whose work in the early rounds was one of the features of Saturday's play. Mr. Osborne again proved himself an expert on corner shots, and he forced the second game into deuce, but was finally defeated, 17—15. He lost the first game, 15—5. Dr. H. S. Satterlee was Mr. Prentiss's next opponent, and he, too, forced the Racquets Club champion to do his best to win two games. The scores were 15—5 and 15—11. M. L. Feary, whom Mr. Prentiss opposed in his third match, did not put up as strong an argument as the other two. He also lost in straight games.

The most closely contested match of the day was that between S. H. Bird of the Princeton Club and L. Du Pont Irving of Ardsley. Bird won the first game, 15—11, and the second went into deuce at 14 points, Irving winning out, 17—14. He also won the third game, 15—8, thereby qualifying to oppose Dr. Stillman in the semi-final match to-day. Dr. Stillman played only one match yesterday, and he won that in straight sets from F. H. Davis, also of the Harvard Club, 15—3, 15—8. The summaries:

Third Round (continued.)—L. Du Pont Irving, Ardsley, defeated Frank Kidde, Montclair, 15—7, 15—5; John W. Prentiss, New York Racquets Club, defeated C. Glidden Osborne, Chicago University Club, 15—5, 17—15; M. L. Feary, Crescent A. C., won from Malcolm D. Whitman, Harvard Club, by default.

Fourth Round.—L. Du Pont Irving, Ardsley, defeated S. H. Bird, Princeton Club, 11—15, 17—14, 15—8; Dr. Alfred Stillman 2d, Harvard Club, defeated F. H. Davis, Harvard Club, 15—3, 15—8; John W. Prentiss, New York Racquets Club, defeated Dr. H. S. Satterlee, Harvard Club, 15—5, 15—11; M. L. Feary, Crescent A. C., defeated F. Cruger, Harvard Club, 15—8, 15—6.

Semi-Final Round.—John W. Prentiss, New York Racquets Club, defeated M. L. Feary, Crescent A. C., 15—3, 15—4.

The schedule for to-day is as follows: Dr. Alfred Stillman 2d vs. L. Du Pont Irving, at 10 A. M.; John W. Prentiss vs. winner of Stillman-Irving match, in the championship final, at 5 P. M.

POLO GAME POSTPONED.

Wet Grounds Prevented Practice by the Champion Team.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., April 9.—Snow laid a white blanket on the polo fields at Georgian Court last night, and as a result interfered with polo play to such an extent that only a "cut-in" game was played this afternoon. The snow had all melted off the fields by noon, but they were left so wet that the ground keeper would not give consent to use any but the practice field. As a result J. M. and Lawrence Waterbury, Harry Payne Whitney, L. E. Stoddard, and others who had come from New York to play a game went back early, and the others here had a free-for-all contest by way of practice, no record of goals being kept. Among those who played were J. E. Cowdin, Harry Tweed, A. S. Burden, Alexander Brown, Malcolm Stevenson, R. L. Agassiz, J. A. Rawlins, Devereaux Milburn, Foxhall P. Keene, Charles Snowden, and C. P. Beadleston. If it does not rain to-night and the grounds are in condition it is probable that a game will be played to-morrow, which is usually one of the off days, to give an opportunity to make up for the practice lost this afternoon.

Jay Gould, who retained his title as court tennis champion in Boston yesterday, was the only member of the Gould family on the field, and he received the congratulations of a large number of friends. He was accompanied by his fiancée, Miss Annie Douglas Graham.

Soccer Teams Play Tie Game.

In the presence of 8,000 enthusiasts who gathered from all parts to witness the soccer Derby of the year, the Philadelphia Hibernians and the Howard & Bullough eleven of Pawtucket, R. I., finalists in the annual cup tie competition of the American Football Association, clashed in the last round at Morris Park, Newark, N. J., yesterday. One of the fastest exhibitions of the season was given, but the game ended in a tie at one goal for each side. For one hour and ten minutes the two star teams, trained to the minute, struggled to and fro and, although there were some hairbreath escapes, which kept the enthusiasm at fever heat, neither side could tally. It fell to the lot of Harry Burroughs of Philadelphia, outside right for the Hibernians, to break the score and guide the errant ball into the Howard & Bullough net. Pandemonium broke loose and the Philadelphia contingent was sure of victory in view of the difficulty in getting goals. Another, however, was scored after ten minutes of additional play, Michael Cannan of Pawtucket, at outside left, heading the ball from a mix-up into the Hibernians' net and equalizing the score. The line-up:

Howard & Bullough, (1.)	Positions.	Hibernians, (1.)
O'Toole, (Capt.)	Right back	Dank

Referee—A. H. Dale, N. Y. S. F. A. Linesmen—Messrs. Montgomery and Nesbitt. Goals—Burroughs, Hibernians, and Cannan, Howard & Bullough. Time—Halves of 45 minutes.

Brooklyn Celtics Take Cup.

At Bradhurst Oval, yesterday, the deciding game in the second division of the New York Amateur League championship series was contested, and the Brooklyn Celtics, by defeating Clan MacDuff, by the score of 4 goals to 1, emerged winners with a final record of 10 games won, two drawn, none lost, and a total of 24 points. The winners, and the Clan MacDuffs, with 23 points, have earned places in the first division of the league. The line-up:

Brooklyn Celtics.	Positions.	Clan MacDuff.
Gavin	Goal	Erkstine
Collyan	Right back	Robinson

Universal Bowling Tournament.

Entries are coming in fast for the universal championship tournament, open to fraternal societies, business houses, and closed bowling leagues, which starts at the Universal Bowling Academy, on Washington Street, Brooklyn, on Saturday, April 29. The Custom House Bowling League has entered twenty teams, the Independent Order of Foresters has entered ten teams, and the South Brooklyn Royal Arcanum has entered a like number.

The tournament will be conducted along the lines of the National Bowling Association and the American Bowling Congress—that is, individual, double, and five-men events. The entrance fee in each event will be $1 per man. All of the money paid in for entrance fees will go to the competitors in prizes, with the exception of 15 per cent., which is deducted for the purchase of medals or fobs for the winners of each event.

MULFORD TO DEFEND TITLE.

Auto Race Pilot Will Compete for Road Championship.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Ralph Mulford, winner of the Elgin National trophy in the National stock chassis road championship of the Chicago Motor Club at Elgin last Summer, has announced formally his intention of defending his title to the road championship, and his is the first entry received by Chairman Charles E. Gregory of the Chicago Motor Club's Contest Board for the 1911 events, which will be run Aug. 25 and 26.

As yet the local organization has not had time to get out its entry blanks for the road championships, which prevented the formal filing of the nomination, but the entry has been made in good faith by C. A. Emise, manager of the Lozier racing team, who to-day wrote Chairman Gregory asking that Mulford and the Lozier be entered for the Elgin meet, and promising to fill out the blank as soon as one is sent him.

"I would appreciate it very much if the Chicago Motor Club would give Mulford No. 3," wrote Mr. Emise. "That was the number he had when he won the Elgin National trophy last year, and it also was the number Tetzlaff carried when he won the Santa Monica road race in a Lozier, establishing a new American road record of 73.22 miles an hour."

The Chicago Motor Club is rapidly preparing for the road races. The contract with the Elgin Automobile Road Race Association has been signed, and as soon as the weather clears work will be started to put the circuit in racing shape. Application has been made to the American Automobile Association for the formal sanction, and in a few days the blanks will be issued.

PASTIME TEAM SELECTED.

Race at Van Cortlandt Determines the Championship Team.

In a tryout cross-country race yesterday at Van Cortlandt Park to determine the make-up of the Pastime Athletic Club team which will represent the club in the junior championship at Hastings next Saturday, F. Ruggerio, the former schoolboy champion, was returned the winner in 32:20 for the distance of about five and one-half miles.

Ruggerio, along with J. J. Stack, George Hooley, and Harry Smith, started from scratch and conceded handicaps up to 4:30. Harry Jensen, who has been suffering from blood poisoning, was in receipt of 1:15, and ran a creditable race under the circumstances, finishing third. The course was over the sloppy golf links and the roads adjacent to the parade ground.

The order of finish was as follows: F. Ruggerio, (scratch,) 32:20; J. J. Stack, (scratch, 32:30; H. Jensen, (1:15,) 34:30; George Hooley, (scratch,) 33:30; J. J. Schleifer, (1:15,) 35:00; Harry J. Smith, (scratch,) 33:46; M. Taub, (0:20,) 34:20; Harry Frick, (3:30,) 38:15; Tim O'Connor, (3:30,) 39:12, and W. Ahrends, (4:30,) 40:13.

After the race Capt. Smith picked the following men to race for the club in the championship event: Ruggerio, Stack, Jensen, Schleifer, Taub, W. Rozette, J. J. McDermott, and T. Staros; H. Frick, substitute. Five men will count for the team prize. Smith will compete for the individual trophy.

DARTMOUTH MEET.

Announcement Made for Events at Hanover for May 13.

Dartmouth College management announces the twentieth annual interscholastic track and field meet under its auspices for May 13, at Alumni Oval, Hanover, N. H. As these contests attract a host of schoolboy athletic talent it may become necessary to decide the preliminaries on the morning of the date selected. The entries will close May 6.

Special attractions are offered in the nature of relay and invitation events, and schools having a star representative in any particular event are urged to get in touch with the correspondence bureau, which is in charge of C. B. White, 1 Richardson Hall, and secure the particulars regarding the meet.

The following events will be held: Hundred yards, 220 yards, 440 yards, 880 yards, and one mile, all runs; 120 yards and 220 yards, hurdles. Hammer throw, shot put, broad jump, high jump, and pole vault. Individual medals will be awarded to point winners, and a special prize will be given the highest point winner. There will be special prizes for the invitation events and the members of winning relay teams. A banner will be presented to the team winning the highest number of points.

Notes of the Boxers.

The bout between Ad Wolgast, the lightweight champion, and One-Round Hogan, scheduled for April 18 at the Madison A. C., has been postponed until April 26. With the Pal Moore-Freddie Welsh and the McFarland-Murphy bouts scheduled within the six days preceding the original date, the management of the Madison A. C. decided to postpone their entertainment, although it was the first of the trio to name a date.

Young Sammy Smith of Philadelphia leaves the Quaker City to-day for California, where he figures on taking part in several bouts. His first match will be against Johnny McCarthy, the California lightweight, for twenty rounds at San Francisco on April 27 or 28. The boys will fight at 135 pounds, and weigh in at 6 o'clock. This weight just suits Smith, but the twenty-round bout will be something of a novelty to him. Most of his bouts have been of six or ten rounds. However, he is built on rugged lines, and should find no trouble over the longer distance.

Mike Schreck is the latest to come forward to the defense of Carl Morris. He says that Morris is too strong for the rest of the heavyweights, and with a few more fights to give him ring experience and take off the rough edges, he will be able to beat Jack Johnson. At the conclusion of this boost for the man who put him to sleep, Schreck announced that he would return to Oklahoma as soon as his injured leg heals, and take on Jim Barry or some other heavyweight.

Owen Moran has signed up for a bout with Phil Brock, the Cleveland lightweight, to be staged at Canton, Ohio, on April 25.

Packy McFarland and his manager, Emil Thiry, are expected to arrive in New York this morning, and will go at once to Cannon's Roadhouse, in Westchester, where McFarland will do his training for his bout with Tommy Murphy at the Fairmont A. C. Monday night. McFarland has been working steadily since his bout with Owen Moran, but he does not care to take any chances, and will spend a full week preparing for the Murphy bout. Tommy has been doing light work at the Mott Haven A. C. for the past ten days, and will continue his work there until the day of the bout.

The defeat of Montana Dan Sullivan by Sailor Burke at the New York A. C. Saturday night showed that Dan was as much overrated as his brother Jack, who proved a dismal failure in his bout with Frank Klaus two weeks ago. The Sullivans came to this city from the West about three months ago, and the fight followers in this section, on the strength of the stories of their great battles with Ketchel and Hugo Kelly, were willing to believe that both were top-notchers of the middleweight division.

The supposition of American fight fans that Sam Langford did not do his best when he fought Sam McVey a week ago in Paris has been about substantiated by a statement just made by Eugene Corri, the English referee, who officiated at the bout. He says he called it a draw because he did not consider that the men did their best.

MASTER'S SALES.

INDIANAPOLIS SOUTHERN RAILROAD.

Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Illinois, made and entered upon the 14th day of February, 1911, in a case wherein Charles A. Peabody and Alexander G. Hackstaff are complainants and the Indianapolis Southern Railroad Company is defendant, and as attorney of Charles A. Peabody and Alexander G. Hackstaff, Trustees, under a mortgage or deed of trust executed by the Indianapolis Southern Railroad Company to them, dated July 1, 1906, and a supplemental indenture thereto to which the Illinois Central Railroad Company is also a party, dated March 15, 1911, I, the subscriber, Special Master designated in and by said decree and attorney designated by said supplemental indenture will, on the Fifth day of May, 1911, or the day to which I may adjourn the same, at three o'clock in the afternoon, at the front of the passenger station in the City of Effingham, in the State of Illinois, used by the Indianapolis Southern Railroad Company, sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, all the property, rights, and franchises covered by the certain mortgage of said Indianapolis Southern Railroad Company, mentioned in said decree and made and executed to Charles A. Peabody and Alexander G. Hackstaff as Trustees, dated the 1st day of July, 1906, including all and singular the railroad property, corporate rights, and franchises hereinafter described, consisting of the following, to wit:

The railroad of the company last named, extending a distance of about 177.12 miles from its northern terminus in the City of Indianapolis in the State of Indiana, through the Counties of Marion, Johnson, Morgan, Brown, Monroe, Greene, and Sullivan in the State of Indiana, and the Counties of Crawford, Jasper, and Effingham in the State of Illinois, to the City of Effingham, in the State of Illinois; also all locomotives, engines, tenders, cars, carriages, equipment, and rolling stock of every nature then owned or possessed by the railroad company or which it has since acquired for use upon or in connection with the said line of railroad above mentioned. Together with all the additions, sidings, switches, and turnouts of the said railroad, including all lands, rails, bridges, viaducts, culverts, fences, roadways, rights-of-way, stations, offices, depots, depot grounds, workshops, machine shops, machinery, engine houses, freight and station houses, warehouses, elevators, and other structures then held or acquired or since held or acquired for use in connection with the said railroad or the business thereof; and also all the corporate rights, privileges, franchises, easements, property rights, and things of whatever name and nature connected with or relating to the said railroad, or to the construction, maintenance, or use thereof, together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments, and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in any wise appertaining, and the reversions, remainders, tolls, earnings, incomes, issues, and profits thereof; and also all the estate, right, title, interest, property, possession, claims, and demands whatsoever, as well in law as in equity, of the said Indianapolis Southern Railroad Company of, in, and to the same, and any and every part thereof, with the appurtenances. The said property shall be sold together and as a whole without division into parcels for the purpose of either offerings or sale. The sale may be adjourned from time to time by announcement at the time and place appointed for such sale or for such adjourned sale, and without further notice or publication such sale may be made at the time and place to which the same shall be so adjourned. No bid will be accepted for the property from any bidder for less than Two Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars, ($2,500,000.00,) nor from any bidder who shall not deposit with the subscriber as a pledge that he will make good his bid in case of its acceptance a sum of Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand ($250,000.00) Dollars in money or in a certified check upon any National bank or trust company in the City of New York, Chicago, or Indianapolis, or bonds secured by the said mortgage of not less than Three Hundred and Fifty Thousand ($350,000.00) Dollars face value. The deposit received from any unsuccessful bidder shall be returned to such bidder when the property shall be struck off. In case the bid should be accepted and the same confirmed, and the successful bidder shall comply with the terms thereof, the deposit so made or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be credited on the purchase price. In the event that any bidder shall fail to make good his bid upon acceptance by the Special Master and confirmation by the Court, or shall fail to comply with any further order of the Court in regard to the payment of the balance of the purchase price, said deposit to the extent of the sums above named shall be forfeited as liquidated damages and shall be applied toward the expense of any resale order or toward making good any deficiency or loss in case the property at such resale shall bring less than the prior sale, or to such purposes as the Court shall direct; but if the said sale shall not be confirmed the deposit shall be returned to the bidder. Upon the confirmation of such sale there shall also be paid in cash by the purchaser, and from time to time thereafter, such further portions on account of the purchase price of the property sold as the Court may direct. The balance of the purchase price not required to be paid in cash may either be paid in cash or the purchaser may satisfy and make good his bid in whole or in part by turning in any bonds and any matured and unpaid coupons to the extent of the value of such bonds and coupons upon a distribution among the bondholders of the net proceeds of such sale, after deducting the costs and expenses of the sale and any other sums allowable under the terms thereof. The Court reserves the right to direct a resale of the property upon the failure of the purchaser to comply with the terms of the sale, or with any order of the Court requiring further payment or performance within ten (10) days after service upon such purchaser of a certified copy of such order.

The purchaser shall, as a part of the consideration and purchase price of the property, and in addition to the sum bid, take the same and receive the deed therefor upon the express condition that he or his successors or assigns shall pay, satisfy, and discharge any unpaid indebtedness and obligations which shall have been legally incurred or contracted by the Indianapolis Southern Railroad Company in the operation or on account of the property directed to be sold at any time prior to the conveyance thereof to the purchaser. The purchaser shall also take the property subject to the performance by him or his successors or assigns, of all pending contracts heretofore lawfully made by the said railroad company with respect to the property sold.

For further particulars reference is made to the said decree on file with the Clerk of the said Court, dated Chicago, March 27, 1911.

ATTACKS DR. BUTLER'S RULE AT COLUMBIA

Prof. Spingarn, Dropped from the Faculty, Says All Independence Is Stifled.

ANSWERS THE ALUMNI NEWS

Calls Its Review of His Case "Glaringly False" and "Dictated by Personal Animus."

A statement in the current issue of the Columbia Alumni News, setting forth that Prof. Joel E. Spingarn, for twelve years a teacher of comparative literature at the university, was "separated" from Columbia on the complaint of the English department that he was neglecting his duties and was inefficient as a college officer, and the further statement that at no time did he have any controversy with President Butler, were described yesterday by Dr. Spingarn as "so glaringly false that they could have been dictated only by personal animus."

Dr. Spingarn had previously attributed his dismissal solely to a series of utterances distasteful because of their independence to what he calls an autocratic administration, utterances which culminated in December with his resolution in the Faculty meeting that Prof. Peck's colleagues extend to him some parting expression of their appreciation of his academic services. That resolution, says The News, had nothing to do with his separation. Dr. Spingarn reasserted yesterday that it had, and followed his assertion by showing some correspondence bearing on the question.

"It is perfectly absurd," he said, "to state that my relations with the English department had anything to do with this result, or that the President throughout was not animated by personal malice. The article in the Alumni News states that these facts are obtained from the official records. If so, the official records do not contain the true facts. I specifically charge that President Butler has deliberately withheld the true facts from the Trustees as well as from the public. The Trustees have heard only such facts as the President has decided to communicate to them, and these facts they have accepted without further investigation or without grainting me a personal hearing, and since they have acted on the deliberate misrepresentations of President Butler, I charge that he and he alone is responsible for my separation from the university. He and he alone must be held responsible for this arbitrary exercise of executive power.

"But the case against him is of far more importance than this one, which involves my own personal fortunes. He has stifled all manly independence and individuality whenever it has exhibited itself at college. All noble idealism and all the graces of poetry and art have been shriveled by his brutal and triumphant power. He has made mechanical efficiency and administrative routine the goal of the university's endeavor. The noble ends of academic life will never be served so long as this spokesman of materialism remains in power."

The Alumni News Article.

Here is the article in The Alumni News, which is introduced as having been inspired by the false and malicious statements in the newspapers, and as having been based upon an examination of the official records of the university:

> At the stated meeting of the Trustees, held on March 6, 1911, the chair of Comparative Literature, occupied by Prof. Spingarn, was relieved of academic duty from and after March 6, and the Department of English and Comparative Literature was authorized to make arrangements for carrying on his courses during the remainder of the term. Both resolutions were passed unanimously by the Trustees on the unanimous recommendation of the Committee on Education, which consists of seven members.
>
> These recommendations, made to the Trustees by the Committee on Education, were the result of more than three months' consideration by the committee of a formal complaint against Prof. Spingarn, made in writing under date of Nov. 18, 1910, by the Department of English and Comparative Literature, of which he was a member. This complaint asserted that Prof. Spingarn was neglecting his duties and was inefficient as a college officer, and that unless some relief could be afforded by the Trustees, the department could not do its duty toward the students or toward the university. The department asked for early action in the premises.
>
> Under date of Nov. 21, 1910, the charges and the reply were laid before the Committee on Education. Numerous conferences followed, and it was the hope of the committee that Prof. Spingarn's difficulties with his colleagues could be so adjusted that he might continue in the service of the university. As consideration of the matter proceeded, however, it became clear that effective co-operation between Prof. Spingarn and his colleagues was not to be expected, and the Committee on Education, in deference to the wish of the Department of English and Comparative Literature, recommended the discontinuance of the position which Prof. Spingarn held.
>
> When this conclusion was communicated to Prof. Spingarn his attitude became such and his language was of such a tone that the committee felt bound to recommend his immediate relief from academic duties. The Trustees, after hearing Prof. Spingarn's side, accepted this recommendation on March 6, 1911.
>
> At no time did Prof. Spingarn have any controversy with the President, who acted simply as the intermediary between the committee and Prof. Spingarn; his controversy was entirely with the members of his own department. Prof. Spingarn was not dismissed by the President, nor could he have been so dismissed. He was relieved of service by the Trustees on the urgent recommendation of the department.
>
> A resolution introduced by Prof. Spingarn at a meeting of the Faculty of Philosophy held on Dec. 9 had nothing whatever to do with his separation from the university and was at no time either spoken of or discussed in connection therewith. The record shows that the fact that he had introduced such a resolution was not known either to the President or to any member of the Committee on Education until the consideration of the case was approaching a conclusion.

These are the facts.

Dr. Spingarn's Statement.

Dr. Spingarn said yesterday that the explanation that the committee, and not the President, dismissed him was a quibble. President Butler is the only member of the Faculty on the committee and the only member of the committee with whom Dr. Spingarn discussed the matter, he says. He has never denied that there was a complaint against him on the part of the English department, but he does say that the differences which led to that complaint were patched up early in January, and that, anyway, the compaint and the differences were pooh-poohed at the start by President Butler, who, he says, revived them afterward as the thing with which to pry him from his place.

Dr. Spingarn says he received extracts from Prof. Thorndike's complaint from Dr. Butler early in December, and that in none of those extracts was there any comment on his "neglect of duty or his inefficiency as a college officer." He says they rehearsed his stated indisposition to submit to the authority of the English department, into which he had been moved after twelve years in the independent department of comparative literature. Dr. Spingarn says he met Prof. Thorndike, at the suggestion of Dr. Butler, and told him he would waive the questions. That, Dr. Spingarn said yesterday, was pronounced satisfactory by Prof. Thorndike at the time, early in January. So when, toward the end of January, the news spread that the committee was considering abolishing Dr. Spingarn's chair, there was some surprise in the English department. Dr. Spingarn says Brander Matthews wanted to know what it was all about, and he told him that the Peck resolution was the secret.

The Peck resolution, offered on Dec. 9, was tabled on motion of Prof. Russell, to whom Dr. Spingarn wrote a letter asking him to withdraw it. That letter was never sent, but Dr. Spingarn says he showed it to President Butler, who said it was impertinent and told him that if he did not drop the matter he would get into trouble. Dr. Butler explained later that by the "matter" he referred to the letter to Prof. Russell, and not to the Peck resolution.

Correspondence with Dr. Butler.

In a letter of Jan. 16 Dr. Butler wrote that the committee was considering dropping the chair, "having particularly in mind the financial condition of the university," and was recommending its being dropped after this college year. The letter closed with these words:

> You will recall that at our last interview I intimated that action of this kind was quite within the range of possibility. If you prefer to withdraw from the university of your own motion at the close of the present academic year, you will, of course, take such action as will lead to this end. I shall hope that in any event you will continue your career as a productive scholar in the field of literary criticism in which you have already made so substantial a beginning.

President Butler, Dr. Spingarn says, told him later that the committee would reconsider the idea, that he would be retained, and suggested that he write a letter setting forth his views on the administrative questions. Dr. Spingarn says he thought this was clouding the issue, and after pointing out the fact that the matters contained in Dr. Thorndike's complaint had in the meantime reached amicable settlement, he thrashed out the matter of the Peck resolution. He wrote:

> I venture to call your attention to the fact that this resolution refers only to the academic services of Prof. Peck. I refuse to believe that this slight act of generous pity, however mistaken, can have imparied my usefulness to the university or justified serious official displeasure. And yet, shortly after the resolution was introduced, Prof. Thorndike's letter was sent to the Committee on Education. Upon my return from my vacation you told me that I would get into trouble if I did not drop the whole Peck matter, and despite Prof. Thorndike's assurance on Jan. 9 that everything had been satisfactorily arranged, I soon received your letter of Jan. 16, announcing the prospective discontinuance of my professorship.
> I repeat my loyalty to my Alma Mater, but if security of tenure in the professorship, if fidelity to contract or a sense of obligation to the academic profession; if freedom of speech and conduct do not exist at Columbia, it is right that the academic world should know it.

On Feb. 3 Dr. Butler wrote:

> I am directed by the committee to say that your letter made upon them a most unfavorable impression, both in tone and in contents. It was particularly unfortunate in view of the specific statement which I made to you during our conversation on Jan. 26, that you should now endeavor to create the impression that the resolution introduced by you had any relation whatever to the discussion of your present university status. The committee was unable because of a long calendar of business, to conclude the consideration of matters to which your letter relates, but the present intention of the committee is not to recommend a continuance of your connection with the university. When the committee's consideration of the matter is completed, I shall be glad to advise you of the result.

In the light of this last sentence, Dr. Spingarn says, he considered it a breach of faith that President Butler should have sent him no word when the committee had finished, so that the recommendation went to the Trustees and he was dismissed without further warning. The notice of this dismissal contained no explanation.

Dr. Butler's letter of Feb. 3 concluded with the statement that parts of Dr. Spingarn's letter were inaccurate and misleading. He wrote:

> I observe for example, that you say I told you that you would get into trouble if you did not drop the whole Peck matter. What I really told you was that you would get into trouble if you persisted in your intention to send Prof. Russell the letter of which you told me a draft, which I regarded as very impertinent.

"I do not wish to mar a dozen years of dignified academic service by personal controversy, and I shall therefore ignore the offensive tone of your letter," answered Dr. Spingarn, and expressed his regret at having to call in question certain of President Butler's statements of fact.

PLYMOUTH CHURCH INDORSES PEACE

Dr. Hillis and Others Speak and Resolutions Are Adopted Approving President's Idea.

UNITED STATES THE LEADER

England Would Have Been Thought Afraid, Dr. Macphail says, If She Had Started the Movement.

The congregation of Plymouth Church, in Brooklyn, expressed approval last night of President Taft's peace plans. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, presided, and the speakers included the Rev. Stephen S. Wise, Dr. Andrew Macphail of Montreal, William Dudley Foulke, President of the National Municipal League, and Dean G. W. Kirchwey of the Columbia Law School.

Prof. Kirchwey said that countries were giving to-day more for war than ever before, but still he believed the era of peace was drawing near. Dr. Macphail said that the United States was the only great nation that could lead in the peace movement. If England had begun it she would have been thought afraid.

This resolution was adopted:

> Resolved, By Plymouth Church that public war is out of date, and that the nations of the world, by a league of peace among themselves, ought to make its recurrence hereafter impossible.

The resolution will be cabled to London, to be read at a peace meeting under the auspices of the Archbishop of Canterbury and leaders of the Nonconformist Union.

The congregation voted to urge churches to devote a Sunday in May, to be known as Peace and Arbitration Sunday, to advocate the adoption of the treaty.

This letter from President Taft was read by Dr. Hillis:

> I wish great success for your meeting. I sincerely hope that we may work out a treaty of arbitration with England, which will contribute by its example to the general peace of the world. It is very gratifying to find how universal is the support of such a plan.

A letter from Gov. Wilson of New Jersey was also read.

TO RESIST SOCIALISM.

Catholic Laymen's League Organized to Spread Opposing Doctrines.

To make a concerted effort to fight the advance of Socialism the Catholics of the district have organized the Laymen's League for Retreats and Social Studies, with Archbishop Farley as Honorary President, and the Bishops of Brooklyn, Trenton, and Newark as Honorary Vice Presidents. It will have a twofold purpose—to extend the movement for retreats and establish regular courses of systematic study of social questions for laymen.

In these courses a corps of lecturers will be trained to speak on all phases of these subjects to the Roman Catholic public. The classes will be opened next Fall, and will continue throughout the Winter and Spring. Archbishop Farley has written to the Rev. Father Terence J. Shealy, spiritual director of the Laymen's League, expressing his pleasure that the retreat movement, which was begun two years ago, has taken permanent form.

Policeman Collapses in Station.

While Lieut. Frank Simm was calling the roll in the Snyder Avenue Police Station, Flatbush, yesterday morning Patrolman Henry C. Kludt, who is twenty-eight years old and who has been a member of the force for two years, fell unconscious to the floor. He was taken to the Kings County Hospital and operated on for appendicitis. Kludt is an expert trombone player and is a member of the Police Band.

BIDE-A-WEE HOME MOVES.

And Its Convalescent Dogs and Cats Have a Day of Great Disquiet.

The 150 convalescent cats and dogs in the Bide-a-Wee Home for Animals, in East Sixty-fifth Street, were filled yesterday with a spirit of restless expectation. The seventy-five lame and ailing dogs kept constantly barking, "I am ready, I am ready," in the most approved dog language. Not one of the seventy-five cats could settle down and placidly lick its fur the whole day long.

The reason for all this was that yesterday was the Bide-a-Wee Home's moving day. The home has occupied its East Sixty-fifth Street headquarters for about a year. It liked the locality and would have been glad to stay there. But the house it has been occupying has been let on a twenty-one-year lease, and other desirable premises in the neighborhood were somewhat too near apartment houses and tenements to make moving into them wise. So the home decided to move to a different part of the city temporarily, until it could find a permanent home.

So yesterday it packed up and moved down to 716 Seventh Avenue, just around the corner from the northern end of Times Square. This, for a while at least, will be the headquarters of the home, where the Secretary's office is and where complaints and registrations will be received.

As for the 150 convalescent animals, they were put, barking and meowing in a great state of excitement, into large cages and crates. These were placed in a big moving van, in which they were moved to a stable in West Thirty-sixth Street, where they will be kept for some time.

"This is just a temporary move," said Mrs. Harry Ulysses Kibbe, the President of the home. "We are seeking a permanent home, and hope to find one soon."

ASYLUM KEEPER ACCUSED.

Held for Grand Jury for Beating Patient at Manhattan State Hospital.

PATCHOGUE, L. I., April 9.—It became known here to-day that two weeks ago John Clancy, an attendant at the Manhattan State Hospital at Central Islip, was arrested after being suspended from the hospital. He is charged with having beaten a patient and broken some of his ribs. The matter was kept quiet except for a report of the matter said to have been forwarded to Gov. Dix. Whether this was asked for is not known.

The hospital authorities refuse to talk, but the holding of Clancy for the Grand Jury is now public record. He waived examination.
